"I'm Committing Professional Suicide": CBS Star Reporter Admits "Mostly Liberal" Journalists Are Now "Political Activists"

by Tyler Durden

CBS News chief foreign affairs correspondent Lara Logan has broken ranks and admitted that journalists have lost their objectivity and become "political activists."

During an appearance on the Mike Drop podcast with retired Navy SEAL Mike Ritland, Logan admitted that "the media everywhere is mostly liberal, not just the U.S.," adding that it was nearly impossible for viewers to decipher if they were being told the truth at any given time.

"85% of journalists are registered Democrats," Logan said. "How do you know you're being lied to? How do you know you're being manipulated? How do you know there's something not right with the coverage? When they simplify it all [and] there's no grey. It's all one way. Well, life isn't like that. If it doesn't match real life, it's probably not. Something's wrong. For example, all the coverage on Trump all the time is negative. That's a distortion of the way things go in real life."

"There's no grey. It's all one way," said Logan.

â€¦ Ruthann (@TeaBoots) February 19, 2019

Logan says that the heavy bias has warped people's ability to know what's really true.

"When you turn on your computer, or you walk past the TV, or you see a newspaper headline in the grocery store If theyâ... re all saying the same thing, the weight of that convinces you that itâ... s true," said Logan. "You donâ... t question it, because everyone is saying it."

She also admitted that journalists today are more or less lobbyists for liberal interests, adding that the weight of the liberal media machine overwhelms "the other side" unless people actively seek outlets such as Breitbart.

The Washington Post is a Fact Checker only for the Democrats. For the Republicans, and for your all time favorite President, it is a Fake Fact Checker!

â... Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) February 19, 2019

Noting recent comments by former New York Times executive editor Jill Abramson, Logan said "Although the media has historically always been left-leaning, weâ... ve abandoned our pretense â... or at least the effort â... to be objective, today. â...! Weâ... ve become political activists, and some could argue propagandists, and thereâ... s some merit to that."

Logan said that MSM reports using anonymous or single government sources are bunk.

"Thatâ... s not journalism, itâ... s horseshit," she said - demanding more accountability.

"Responsibility for fake news begins with us."

DURING THE 2016 primary and general election campaigns, various MSNBC hosts were openly campaigning for Hillary Clinton. One of the network's programs featured Malcolm Nance (pictured above), whose background is quite sketchy but is presented by the cable network (and now by NBC News) as an intelligence expert and former intelligence officer for the U.S. Navy.

On August 20, 2016, weekend host Joy Reid asked Nance about the supposed affinity for Russia harbored by Jill Stein supporters. In response, Nance told MSNBC viewers: "Jill Stein has a show on Russia Today." You can still watch the video of this claim here on MSNBC's own website or see it here:

Whatever your views might be about Stein and her third-party candidacy, there is no disputing the fact that Nanceâ€¦ s statement was a falsehood, a fabrication, a lie. Stein did not have a show on RT, nor did she ever host a show on RT. What Nance said was made up out of whole cloth â€¦ fabricated â€¦ in order to encourage MSNBC viewers to believe that Stein, one of the candidates running against Clinton, was a paid agent of the Kremlin and employee of RT.

Reid allowed Nanceâ€¦ s lie to stand. Perhaps she did not realize at the time that it was a lie. But subsequently, a campaign was launched to urge MSNBC to correct the lie it broadcast, based on the assumption that MSNBC â€¦ which is part of NBC News â€¦ was a normal news outlet that functions in accordance with basic journalistic principles and would, of course, correct a false statement once that was brought to its attention.

The media watchdog group FAIR repeatedly documented the lie told by Nance and urged MSNBC to issue a correction. The Intercept wrote about this falsehood on several occasions and also noted that MSNBC was refusing to issue a correction of what everyone knows is a false â€¦ but an obviously quite significant â€¦ claim. Multiple tweets were directed at NBC News, MSNBC, Nance, and Reid asking them to correct the fabrication to their viewers:

To date â... almost two years later â... neither NBC News nor MSNBC, nor a single journalist who works for either one of those media outlets has corrected this significant falsehood, despite obviously knowing that it was broadcast to their viewers. In other words, NBC News and MSNBC know that they told viewers something that was materially false, and yet refuse to correct it. Please, defenders of this network: Tell me what that says about its integrity, about its real function, about whether it is a real news outlet.

Worse, not only was Nance never sanctioned in any way for the lie he told, but he was rewarded: He has since gone from â... MSNBC contributorâ... to â... MSNBC intelligence analyst,â... and is far more pervasive on the network, and its hosts have spent the month aggressively promoting his new book on how Vladimir Putin is destroying U.S. democracy.

On MSNBC, lies are not corrected; they are rewarded, provided the lies are designed to smear the reputations of Democratic Party critics. Is this not definitive and conclusive proof of that: that this is not a news outlet but a political arm of the Democratic Party? What else could possibly explain, let alone justify, behavior like this? Iâ... m asking that earnestly.

I BRING THIS UP again now not because I think MSNBC will ever correct its lie â... it has made clear that lies designed to destroy the reputations of Democratic Party critics are perfectly permissible â... but because a very similar event happened on Friday night involving the same MSNBC analyst.

This week, I traveled to Moscow to meet with Edward Snowden, as well as to participate in a cybersecurity conference, on a panel regarding â... fake newsâ... that included Alexei Venediktov, famous in Russia as a fierce critic of the Putin government in his position as editor-in-chief of Ekho Moskvyy radio station, along with Giovanni Zagni, head of an Italian website dedicated to checking politiciansâ... statements who is working with Facebook to determine â... fake news.â... (The Intercept paid for my travel and I was paid no fee for the trip).

The panel was moderated by RT Editor-in-Chief Margarita Simonyan and also included Sergey Nalobin, acting deputy director of the Information and Press Department of the Russian Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Given the presence of harsh Putin critics on the panel, the discussion included severe criticisms of both the U.S. and Russian governments, their propensity to lie, and their desire to control the internet.

After Nalobin claimed that Russia was the victim of disinformation and â... fake newsâ... campaigns, I responded by pointing out that while this was true, Russia is also the perpetrator of such campaigns, and that in general, the history of the Cold War has continued through today: whereby the U.S. and Russia both use the same tactics against one another while claiming to be the victim:

After the event, there were camera crews from numerous media outlets wanting to interview some of the panel participants. I spoke to all of them. One of them was RT, which published the full transcript of the three-minute interview, as well as selected video clips. The primary point I made that received the most attention â... namely, that it has become regarded as suspicious, and even treasonous, merely to visit Russia, and that I accepted the invitation to attend in part to combat that toxic, dangerous, and xenophobic perception â... is the statement of mine that RT highlighted on social media.

Obviously, anyone is free to criticize people who decide to visit Russia. Anyone is free to denounce those who speak with RT (such as Stephen Hawking, whose RT interview can be seen here, though Iâ... d love to hear from those holding such views why itâ... s permissible to speak to think tanks such as Brookings and Center for American Progress, which are funded by Gulf state tyrannies). And, needless to say, anyone is free to attack or dispute any statements or views that I, or anyone else, express as part of such discussions.

Nance did none of that. What he did, instead, is exactly what he did on MSNBC to Jill Stein in August 2016: In two tweets, he outright lied about me on purpose, telling his 420,000 Twitter followers that I am â... an agent of Moscowâ... and â... deep in the Kremlin pocket.â... He further lied by stating that I â... helped Snowden defectâ... and that I â... reports into [my] masters in Moscow.â...

None of Nanceâ... s statements here is opinion. These claims â... especially that I am an â... agent of Moscowâ... and â... deep in the Kremlin pocketâ... â... are intended to be factual statements: that I work for, and am paid by, Russia and the Kremlin, and that I aided Snowden in â... defectingâ... to Moscow. They are all outright lies. There is no other way to describe them.

Thus far, his tweet has been retweeted by close to 5,000 people. After I noted that they were lies, Nance reaffirmed them and said how proud he was to have broadcast them.

This is because Nance knows that he is free to lie this way with impunity. Thatâ... s because he works for an organization â... MSNBC â... that masquerades as a news outlet but actively encourages its employees to lie this way about anyone who criticizes the Democratic Party.

He will be celebrated inside MSNBC, not sanctioned or even told to rescind his lie, because â... just as happened with the lie he told about Jill Stein â... the person he chose to falsely accuse of being a paid agent of Russia is someone that the MSNBC audience of Democratic partisans hates, and lying is thus permitted and encouraged, just the way it is in any partisan organization. The network is derided as â... MSDNCâ... for a reason.

Obviously, Nance is simply adhering to the post-World War II tactic of the U.S. military and intelligence community from which he emerged: For decades, they accuse any journalists they dislike, or dissidents of any kind, of being covert agents of Moscow.

You would think that any real journalists inside NBC News might be bothered enough by this classically McCarthyite tactic â€¦ accusing a journalist of being an agent of Russia without a shred of evidence â€¦ to denounce it, but you would be quite wrong. Just look at how identical the script is used by Nance to the actual words Joseph McCarthy spoke at one of his notorious hearings:

Thatâ€¦ s because NBC News and MSNBC have essentially merged with the CIA and intelligence community and thus, use their tactics. The network is filled with former generals and CIA officials who are part of the community that pioneered these smear tactics of accusing journalists and critics they dislike of being traitors, spies, and Kremlin loyalists. Indeed, Nance sometimes appears on MSNBC along with former CIA Director John Brennan, who MSNBC also hired as an â€¦ analyst.â€¦ This is who they are.

Itâ€¦ s also what the Democratic Party is: This is their go-to tactic. After my colleague Lee Fang reported on the numerous corporate interests for which Howard Dean secretly shills in exchange for large payments â€¦ everything from pharmaceutical companies to Iranian regime-change cults such as MEK â€¦ this was the response from Dean (who, needless to say, also frequently appears on MSNBC):

Anyone who criticizes the Democratic Party or its leaders is instantly accused of being a Kremlin agent despite the lack of any evidence. And the organization that leads that smear campaign is the one that calls itself a news outlet (and this is all independent of the fact that another one of its hosts recently lied about having her blog hacked and claimed she reported it to the FBI â€¦ a claim everyone in journalism knows is a lie â€¦ and not only was never sanctioned for it by was praised for doing that by MSNBCâ€¦ s star host).

Needless to say, MSNBC is not the only cable outlet that acts as an arm of a political party and encourages its on-air personalities to lie and smear critics of that party. I have spent years documenting lies told by certain Fox News employees and denounced the willingness of some of their hosts to do exactly that while on Fox News itself.

But you canâ€¦ t be a credible critic of lies â€¦ whether told by other cable outlets or politicians â€¦ if you not only permit but clearly encourage and reward your own on-air personalities when they do the same. And in the case of MSNBC, they not only do this, but they practice one of the most historically destructive versions of it: fabricated allegations that their critics, including journalists, are treasonous agents of a foreign power.

A whistleblower plays by the rules at CIA, and finds â... nothing gets doneâ...

By Tim Johnson

tjohnson@mcclatchydc.com

WASHINGTON

When wayward contract employees at the CIA began pilfering snacks from vending machines back in 2013, the Office of the Inspector General sprang into action. Surveillance cameras went up, the culprits were nabbed, and all lost their jobs.

From start to finish, the case of the $3,314.40 in stolen snacks lasted two months.

When more serious allegations of wrongdoing arise at the CIA, though, inspectors may be far less speedy, especially when their findings could embarrass the Langley, Va., spy agency.

In one notable case, that of John Reidy, a contractor whose resume shows that he worked with spies deep inside Iranâ... s mullah-run regime, charges of wrongdoing have sat idle in the hands of CIA inspectors. Details of Reidyâ... s charges remain highly classified. The case is now seven years old, and seems only to gather dust.

Reidy, 46, anguishes over his charges, angry at the years-long delay in resolving his complaints but also wary of crossing a line and revealing anything classified beyond his allegations of a â... catastrophic intelligence failureâ... overseas.

â... I cannot talk about the 2007 incident. It is classified. I risk incarceration. I have a family,â... Reidy wrote in an email before meeting with a reporter.

But in addition to his whistleblower case, Reidy presses a larger issue, one that is pertinent to the era of President Donald Trump and his persistent charges that sensitive leaks cripple his six-month-old administration. Leaks may grow worse if intelligence agencies donâ... t learn how to channel dissent and protect those who offer it in a constructive spirit.

I played by the rules. They are broken.

John Reidy, a CIA contractor and whistleblower

â... I played by the rules,â... Reidy said. â... They are broken. â...| The public has to realize that whistleblowers [like me] can follow all the rules and nothing gets done.â... In frustration, Reidy last month sent a 90-page letter and documentation about his case to the chairman of the Senateâ... s powerful Judiciary Committee, lambasting its lack of resolution.

â... They have enough time to look into who is stealing candy from a vending machine but they canâ... t look into billion-dollar contract fraud?â... Reidy asked in an interview.

The CIA refused to comment on Reidyâ... s case.

â... As a general matter, we do not comment on ongoing litigation,â... said spokesperson Heather Fritz Horniak.

CIA Director says WikiLeaks is a â... hostile intelligence serviceâ...

In his first public remarks since becoming CIA director, Mike Pompeo called WikiLeaks a â... non-state hostile intelligence service.â...

AP

Even if CIA officials have a far different version of events, perhaps contradicting some of Reidyâ... s allegations, the secrecy with which the agency operates impedes them from speaking out. CIA Director Mike Pompeo said in a speech Tuesday night that his agency finds it difficult to â... push backâ... against misleading or wrong news reports.

â... At CIA weâ... re often limited in what we can say, given the need to protect classified information. In many cases we canâ... t set the record straight because doing so could harm national security,â... Pompeo told a gathering of the Intelligence and National Security Alliance, a nonpartisan group in support of the intelligence community.

It took a lawsuit to release the information about the theft from CIA vending machines. The agency released a declassified report about the case as part of hundreds of documents obtained through a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit filed in 2015 by BuzzFeed News.

Pilfering from the vending machines began in 2012, and by March 2013, inspectors began looking into the thefts, discovering that the culprits were unplugging a cable linking the machines to a payment system, FreedomPay, letting them obtain snacks at no charge.

"Video footage recovered from the surveillance cameras captured numerous perpetrators engaged in the FreedomPay theft scheme, all of whom were readily identifiable as Agency contract personnel," the inspectorsâ... report says.

The vending machine thievery wrapped up neatly. But Reidy still waits for resolution of the seemingly far more significant issues he has raised.

Reidy is more straight arrow than troublemaker. A native of Worcester, Massachusetts, he was educated in Catholic schools, then attended St. Anselm College in New Hampshire and obtained a law degree from the University of San Francisco. Law degree in hand, he dreamed of joining the FBI.

After a stint in the Army, where he worked in a criminal investigations division, Reidy applied for jobs at both the FBI and the CIA. The CIA called more quickly, and Reidy joined in 2003, leaving six months later for a private contractor that dealt in security policy.

Reidy formed his own company in 2006, Form III Defense Solutions, and worked as a subcontractor, piggybacking on contracts won by bigger companies for intelligence collection, tactical targeting guidance and other matters, usually with the CIA.

A resume he gave to McClatchy shows that from 2006 to 2009, Reidy developed an â... Iran Study Guideâ... and worked on â... humintâ... â... or human intelligence. Reidy said intelligence community secrecy rules bar him from naming the country where he handled a â... complex agency operation,â... but he does say he studied some Farsi language. He hasnâ... t done any classified work since 2012.

Two different issues led Reidy in 2010 to submit a complaint to the CIAâ... s internal watchdog, the Inspector Generalâ... s Office. One issue involved what Reidy alleged was fraud between elements within the CIA and contractors. Another issue involved what he called a â... massiveâ... and â... catastrophicâ... intelligence failure due to a bungled foreign operation, according to his 2014 appeal to an office under the director of national intelligence.

Reidy said he sent the Inspector Generalâ... s Office 80 emails and 56 documents to back up his complaints.

Letter to Senator Grassley \(PDF\)

Letter to Senator Grassley \(Text\)

Legal protections for whistleblowers in the intelligence community grew stronger in 2012, when then-President Barack Obama signed a presidential directive protecting people from various forms of retaliation, including demotions, termination or reassignment. Reidy took heart at the move.

He was the poster child of the person the system is supposed to work for.

Kel McClanahan, former attorney for whistleblower John Reidy

â... He was the poster child of the person the system is supposed to work for,â... said Kel McClanahan, a Maryland attorney who represented Reidy until 2016.

Despite the Obama directive, experts working in the national security arena say employees still confront obstacles. Employeesâ... lawyers have no access to classified documents around which a case may rest. Classified matters cannot even be discussed between client and attorney. The CIA sees its Inspector Generalâ... s Office as impartial and makes it difficult for employees who hire attorneys, although Reidy did so for years.

Often, CIA employees or contractors find their careers put on hold.

â... You will likely find yourself a pariah because nobody likes someone who rocks the boat,â... said Bradley P. Moss, a Washington lawyer who handles some national security cases involving whistleblowers.

Employees disgruntled over fraud, abuse or other matters cannot easily look to obtain redress from outside the intelligence community.

If youâ... re an employee who sees something egregious, they donâ... t have to do anything with it.

Kathleen McClellan of Expose Facts, a whistleblower advocacy group â... Thereâ... s no outside review of whistleblower cases in the intelligence community,â... said Kathleen McClellan, deputy director at Expose Facts, a whistleblower advocacy group. â... If youâ... re an employee who sees something egregious, they donâ... t have to do anything with it. They can flush it down the toilet for all you know.â...

As Reidy found out, an internal investigation can drag on without time limit.

â... They can go on for years. They can go on for decades,â... said Jesselyn Radack, a former Justice Department ethics attorney who also works at Expose Facts.

Reidy has also told his story to staffers with security clearances for the House and Senate intelligence committees, and seen his case bounce between the CIA inspector general and the inspector general for the Directorate of National Intelligence.

Desperate for an outcome, Reidy increasingly warns that the failure of whistleblowing channels may lead disgruntled employees and contractors to go public with secrets, posing a danger to national security.

The CIA and the National Security Agency have been hit with numerous cases of leaks since the ground-shaking case of Edward Snowden, the NSA contractor who in 2013 leaked to the media details of extensive surveillance, including of tens of millions of Americans.

This year, another NSA contractor, Harold T. Martin, was indicted for amassing secret stolen documents and data at his Maryland home over a 20-year period. He awaits trial.

Prosecutors in early June charged another NSA contractor, 25-year-old Reality

Winner, with sending a classified report about Russia's meddling in the 2016 elections to The Intercept, a national security news outlet. She could face 10 years in prison.

For its part, WikiLeaks, the anti-secrecy group, began publishing in March a series of cyber-espionage documents that it claimed were taken from the CIA's elite hacking unit. Speculation rose that a CIA contractor stole the documents and leaked them.

Seeking to spur action in his case, Reidy last month fired off letters to the chairman and ranking member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, warning that working through the CIA Inspector General's Office has been a dead end.

They just delay, delay, and delay and hope the problem goes away.

John Reidy, a CIA contractor and whistleblower

"They just delay, delay, and delay and hope the problem goes away," Reidy said in a June 5 letter to Sen. Charles Grassley, the Judiciary panel's chairman.

Reidy said his own example bodes poorly for those who want to report fraud or abuse.

"If you are contemplating whistleblowing, you're going to sit there and say, 'If I go through that system, it will not end well for me. I'm going to lose my career and I'm going to be financially devastated,'" Reidy said.

POLITICAL KILL ORDERS AND STATE-SPONSORED CHARACTER ASSASSINATIONS

Corrupt political families conspire to give government funds, contracts, tax waivers, buildings, stock market profits and other insider perks to themselves and their friends. They also conspire to blockade, harm, sabotage and black-list those who compete with them and their friends. ## THE MEDIA ASSASSINS: POLITICAL KILL ORDERS AND STATE-SPONSORED CHARACTER ASSASSINATIONS

"How A Modern Character Assassination and Political Kill Order Is Executed By the Silicon Valley Oligarchs and their total control of propaganda media. Patrick George At Jalopnik attacks outsiders under contract with Elon Musk and the DNC. Silicon Valley campaign finance oligarchs hire him to run hatchet jobs on innocent outsiders and then Gawker-Gizmodo-Jalopnik uses their financial partnership with the DNCâ... s Google to push the character assassination articles to the top of Google web products and searches.

--- Patrick George, Adrian Covert, John Hermann and Nick Cook are the sexually degenerate cabin boys that report to boy-loving sleaze-tabloid oligarch Nick Denton. They created the Fake News crisis in the media by flooding the internet with defamation posts and reprisal hatchet job articles designed to damage political enemies of the Socialists. They coordinate a large number of the character assassination efforts at Gawker, Gizmodo, Jalopnik, CNN, New York Times and other propaganda outlets. These Millennial boys are â... Media Rapistsâ... and should be treated as abusers.

â... How and why did a Donald Trump stripper-date named â... Stormyâ... or an Elon Musk sex party or a Kavanaugh drinking incident or the Moonves and Weinstein indiscretions suddenly hit the news at about the same time in news history?

â... In addition to actual murder, Politicians and Silicon Valley Oligarchs hire operatives to end peopleâ... s lives in other creative ways.

â... --- It is all part of the modern trend in vendetta, revenge and political payback when a Senator or a tech oligarch issues a â... kill orderâ... on an opponent. â... The client does not like to get their hands dirty so the actual social hit job is performed by companies such as: IN-Q-Tel â... (DNC); Gawker Media â... (DNC); Jalopnik â... (DNC); Gizmodo Media â... (DNC); K2 Intelligence â... (DNC); WikiStrat â... (DNC); Podesta Group â... (DNC); Fusion GPS â... (DNC/GOP); Google â... (DNC); YouTube â... (DNC); Alphabet â... (DNC); Facebook â... (DNC); Twitter â... (DNC); Think Progress â... (DNC); Media Matters â... (DNC); Black Cube â... (DNC); Mossad â... (DNC); Correct The Record â... (DNC); Sand Line â... (DNC/GOP); Blackwater â... (DNC/GOP); Undercover Global Ltd (DNC/GOP) Stratfor â... (DNC/GOP); ShareBlue â... (DNC); Wikileaks (DNC/GOP); Cambridge Analytica â... (DNC/GOP); Sid Blumenthal- (DNC); David Brock â... (DNC); PR Firm Sunshine Sachs (DNC); Covington and Burling â... (DNC), BuzzFeed â... (DNC) Perkins Coie â... (DNC); Wilson Sonsini â... (DNC) and hundreds of othersâ...!These are the people and companies that except cash, revolving door jobs, political appointments, insider trading stock in Silicon Valley tech companies, prostitutes and real estate in exchange for destroying the lives of others.

â... These attackers deserve to be punished for the rest of their lives for taking away the lives of others in exchange for cash. Any company who is corrupt enough to hire any of these assassins should be forced out of business.

--- These attack services are responsible for 90% of the â... Fake Newsâ... problem in the world because they are the authors of most fake news. Congress must act to make these kinds of companies illegal! â... These digital assassination services offer hit-jobs, character assassinations and economic reprisal programs to famous billionaires and corrupt politicians who are seeking revenge, retribution and vendetta executions.

â... In the case of reporters getting targeted for attacks, President Donald Trump has been accused by the liberal corporate media of whipping up a hateful frenzy against the press. But while CNNâ... s Jim Acosta grandstands against Trump, real journalists are still reeling from the draconian extrajudicial measures that Barack Obama and his administration used to target them for exposing truth.

â... This secretive targeting occurred while Obama speechwriter and hate-filled ANTIFA supporter Ben Rhodes was running â... Operation Echo Chamber,â... which reportedly continues, in which he fed information to willing corporate media scribes. â... They literally know nothing,â... Rhodes said of the twentysomething journalists he easily manipulated.

---- The Freedom of the Press Foundationâ... s Trevor Timm published documents showing how former attorney general Eric Holder changed the rules to more effectively intimidate and surveil members of the press.

â... Timm writes: â... Today, we are revealingâ... for the first timeâ... the Justice Departmentâ... s rules for targeting journalists with secret FISA court orders. The documents were obtained as part of a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit brought by Freedom of the Press Foundation and Knight First Amendment Institute at Columbia University.â...

â... Obama is also clearly linked to the plot to obtain fraudulent FISA warrants on President Trumpâ... s team, as evidenced by Peter Strzok and Lisa Pageâ... s texts confirming that Obama was overseeing their fly-by-night operation.

â... Larry Schweikart reported for Big League Politics: For months pundits and researchers have been pondering the mystery of the FISA approval that led to the illegal and historically titanic scandals to ever hit the U.S. government.

---- Some have argued that Assistant Attorney General Rod Rosenstein knew the FISA was bogus when he extended it. Others have wondered if Special Counsel Robert Mueller knew about the fraudulent basis of the FISA when he used it, in part, to indict Michael Flynn. Other still, that Mueller was fooled by the FBI. This is what President Trump calls â... SPYGATEâ... . â... It may well be that the surveillance that was conducted began with UK intelligence services and then was fed back to the White House of Barack Obama. Hereâ... s the kicker: President Barack Obama did not need a FISA warrant to authorize spying/electronic surveillance on Trump because Obama all along had legal authorization to by-pass the normal court vetting process. According to 50 U.S. Code 1802, the â... Electronic Surveillance Authorizationâ... () â... Foreign intelligence in relation to a US person (Trump or his associates) is information thatâ... s necessary for the US to protect against attack, hostile acts, sabotage, . . . as well as other clandestine activities by a foreign power . . . OR . . . information relevant to national defense/security of the US, or the conduct of foreign affairs of the U.S.â... Such an authorization by Obama required certification by Attorney General Loretta Lynch that must be logged with the FISC court. (â... The [AG]+ shall immediately transmit under seal to the court [FISC] a copy of his certification.â... )

â... In short, the DOJ has this. If we are correct, a copy of that certification is currently under seal at least with the DOJ and the FISC.

â... This is what they are hiding. â... However, the Act requires the AG to keep the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Senate Committee on Intelligence informed of these authorizations and unmaskings therein. See 1803 (a) (1) (C) If indeed this is what happened, did Lynch reportâ... or only selectively reportâ... to the committees in a way that excluded non-friendlies? Can you see why Adam Schiff, Mark Warner, and their ilk are terrified?

â... These are the playbook tactics that Senators and tech oligarchs most often use to destroy the lives of their political and business enemies: â... Government agency bosses sometimes solicit the target victims with false promises of future loans, contracts or grants from their agency and cause the target victims to expend millions of dollars and years of their time for projects which those government bosses had covertly promised to their friends. They use the target victims as a â... smokescreenâ... to cover their illegal government slush-funds for the victims competitors and personal enemies.

---- By using this tactic, the attackers can drain the target victims funds and force them into an economic disaster in plain view of everyone without the government bosses fearing any reprisal for their scam.- Every match.com, okcupid.com, Plenty Of Fish, Seeking Arrangements and all other IAC-owned, or similar, dating sites (IAC is managed by Hillary Clinton's daughter) have had their profiles, texts, and inter-member communications, since those companies were started, hacked or purchased. The attack service providers use Palantir and In-Q-Tel financed data analysis software to analyze every activity in those dating services in order to find honey-trap, blackmail, sextortion and social conflict exploitation opportunities.

If you had a bad date with someone, that someone will be hunted down and convinced to help harm, #metoo or a rape charge the intended target. All dates involve a search for sex, so the likelihood that a sexual disappointment experience will exist in each person's dating history is high. Searching every past dating email and text of a subject is quite easy with modern software and hacking techniques. A synthetically amplified, PR-agency optimized sex scandal can destroy any target. Your dating experiences from the 70s or 80s will come back to haunt you decades later. Most dates involve drinking alcohol and taking drugs. If you were unattractive or had bad sexual skills your bad date will be called a date rape, a drugging your date for sex and related twisted narratives that are designed to shame you, the target.

--- If you try to get a date in the future, your potential date will be contacted by a third party who will slander and libel you to make sure your potential first date gets cancelled. Your social life will, essentially, end. Every photo on every dating site is cross checked with every other photo on the internet in order to cull your Facebook, LinkedIn, Snapchat and other social media together to create a total psychological manipulation profile data file on you. A single photo on a dating site can be cross searched on every mugshot archive, photo album and corporate database in the worth within minutes using modern super-computers. Your sex life will be on public record in a flash.- Social Security, SSI, SDI, Disability and other earned benefits are stone-walled. Applications of targets are lost.

--- Files in the application process disappeared. Lois Lerner hard drive incidents are operated in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.

Government officials and tech oligarchs contact members of the National Venture Capital association (NVCA) and created national black-lists to blockade target victims from ever receiving investor funding. This was also confirmed in a widely published disclosure by Tesla Motors Daryl Strydom and in published testimony. If Silicon Valley political campaign finance oligarchs black-list you (see the AngelGate Scandal and the High Tech No Poaching Class Action Lawsuit cases) you will never get investor funding again.

FOIA requests are hidden, frozen, stone-walled, delayed, lied about and only partially responded to in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.- State and federal employees will play an endless game of Catch-22 by arbitrarily determining that deadlines had passed that they, the government officials, had stonewalled and obfuscated applications for, in order to force these deadlines that they set, to appear to be missed. This can bankrupt a target victim.- Some Victims found themselves strangely poisoned, not unlike the Alexander Litvenko case.

--- Heavy metals and toxic materials were found right after their work with the Department of Energy weapons and energy facilities. Many wonder if these targets were intentionally exposed to toxins in retribution for their testimony. The federal MSDS documents clearly show that a number of these people were exposed to deadly compounds and radiations, via DOE, without being provided with proper HazMat suits which DOE officials knew were required.

Victims' employers are called, and faxed, and ordered to fire target victims from their places of employment, in the middle of the day, with no notice, as a retribution tactic. On orders from Obama White House officials, DNC-financed Google, YouTube, Gawker Media and Gizmodo Media produce attack articles and defamation videos. Google locks this attack media on the internet on the top line, of the front page of all Google searches for a decade in front of 7.5 billion people, around the world.

---- This attack-type uses over $40 million dollars in server farms, production costs and internet rigging. The forensic data acquired from tracking some of these attacks proves that Google rigs attacks against individuals on the internet and that all of Google's impressions are manually controlled by Google's executives who are also the main financiers and policy directors of the Obama Administration. This data was provided to the European Union for its ongoing prosecution of Google's political manipulation of public perceptions. Victims HR and employment records, on recruiting and hiring databases, are embedded with negative keywords in order to prevent the victim targets from ever gaining future employment. Gary D. Conley, Seth Rich, Rajeev Motwani and many other whistle-blowers in these matters, turned up dead under strange circumstances. It is very possible that some of these attack services, operated by former CIA operatives, even offer discrete murder-for-sale services using high-tech assassination tools that make murders look like heart attacks and brain failures.

---- Disability and VA complaint hearings and benefits are frozen, delayed, denied or subjected to lost records and missing hard drives as in the Lois Lerner case.- Paypal (A DNC-biased operation) and other on-line payments for on-line sales are de-platformed, delayed, hidden, or re-directed in order to terminate income potential for target victims who competed with the attackers interests and holdings.- DNS redirection, website spoofing sends target victims websites to dead ends where no sales orders or customer inquiries actually get back to the target. These internet revenue activity manipulations are conducted using Google and Amazon servers. All commercial storefronts and on-line sales attempts by target victims, will have had their sites hidden, or search engine de-linked by a massively resourced facility located in Virginia, Texas or Palo Alto, California in order to terminate revenue potentials for the target victims.

---- Over 50,000 trolls, shills, botnets and synth-blog deployments are deployed to place defamatory statements and disinformation about victims in front of 7.5 billion people around the world on the internet in order to seek to damage their federal testimony credibility by a massively resourced facility.

â... Campaign finance dirty tricks contractors are hired by campaign financiers to attack the friends and family members of the target victim in order to create low morale for the target victims psyche and motivation.- Are you getting weird headaches and hearing a buzzing sound in your head? The U.S. Government has now acknowledged that the Cuban, Chinese and other embassy sonic attacks are from a known microwave beam weapon. Any one of the technical departments of the attack services listed at the top of this article can build such a biological harassment weapon.

---- It can be aimed at the target victims office, bedroom or vehicle and, within a week, have caused biological and emotional damage using a weapon that has no visible track of trajectory. It is designed to make the target victim think they are going crazy or hearing sounds in their head.

---- In one case covert political partner: Google, transferred large sums of cash to dirty tricks contractors and then manually locked the media portion of the attacks into the top lines of the top pages of all Google searches globally, for years, with hidden embedded codes in the links and web-pages which multiplied the attacks on Victims by many magnitudes.- Covert Cartel financier: Google, placed Google's lawyer: Michelle Lee, in charge of the U.S. Patent Office and she, in turn, stacked all of the U.S. Patent Office IPR and ALICE review boards and offices with Google-supporting employees in order to rig the U.S. Patent Office to protect Google from being prosecuted for the vast patent thefts that Google engages in.

---- Google has hundreds of patent lawsuits for technology theft and a number of those lawsuits refer to Google's operations as Racketeering, Monopolistic Cartel and Government Coup-like behaviors. Thousands of articles and investigations detail the fact that Google, essentially ran the Obama White House and provided over 80% of the key White House staff. A conflict-of-interest unlike any in American history. Google's investors personally told Applicant they would kill him. Google and the Obama Administration were the same entity. Applicant testified in the review that got Michelle Lee terminated and uncovered a tactical political and social warfare group inside Google who were financed by Federal and State funds.

---- Honeytraps and moles were employed by the attackers. In this tactic, people who covertly worked for the attackers were employed to approach the â... targetâ... in order to spy on and misdirect the subject. â... Gawker Media, Gizmodo Media, Snopes, SPLC and other hired media assassins will be retained to produce â... hatchet jobâ... character assassination articles about you. Then those articles will be faxed, mailed and emailed to your employer and investors with a note saying: â... You donâ... t want to have anything to do with this person, do you..?â... in order to get you fired from your job and get your loans or financing pulled. The attackers will use their round one attack media, that they authored, to create a round two second wave attack designed to end your life via economic warfare.

---- Mortgage and rental applications will have had red flags added to them in databases to prevent the targets from getting homes or apartments.- Krebs On Security, Wired, Ars Technica, The Wall Street Journal and most major IT publications have reported that hundreds of spy â... back-doorsâ... have been found on every Intel, AMD, Apple, Xfinity, Cisco, Microsoft, Juniper Networks motherboard, chip-set and hardware component set.

---- This means that any kid with the â... keyâ... code can open any computer, server, router, cloud-network or other network connected device and read every file, photo, video, your calendar and email on your devices at any time from any location on Earth. The key codes have been released to every hacker community in the world for over ten years. There is now no government, corporate or personal data that canâ... t be hacked, even data from decades ago.

Every single one of your darkest secrets can be in the hands of your enemy within 60 minutes, or less. Important meetings you had planned with potential investors, employers, clients, dates, suppliers and others will suddenly get cancelled at the last minute. They will get cancelled because your enemies are reading your calendar remotely and covertly sending slander information to those you had hoped to engage with in order to sabotage your life.

---- Nothing you have ever typed on a computer or Smartphone is safe. it WILL be acquired and it WILL be used against you.

â... McCarthy-Era â... Black-listsâ... are created and employed against target victims who competed with Obama Administration executives and their campaign financiers to prevent them from getting funding and future employment.

â... Obama Administration targets were very carefully placed in a position of not being able to get jobs, unemployment benefits, disability benefits or acquire any possible sources of income. The retribution tactics were audacious, overt..and quite illegal.

â... There are thousands of additional Dirty Tricks tactics being used by these Attack Services yet Congress refuses to pass laws out-lawing such attack services.

---- The cost of an attack on a person ranges from $150,000.00 to over $50,000,000.00. While a Silicon Valley billionaire can afford to launch counter-measures to these attacks, any regular taxpayer will be utterly destroyed, and incapable of fighting back, against even the smallest version of one of these â... kill ordersâ... .

---- A number of modern office shootings are the results of these attacks against an individual who has lost everything because of the attack and has no options left. â... Federal law enforcement, the United States Congress and the highest level investigators in the U.S., and abroad, have documented (per the â... FISA Memoâ... , Congressional Reports and federal employee testimony) and proven the fact that the Obama Administration regularly engaged in the operation of retribution, vendetta and reprisal campaigns known as hit-jobs against domestic natural born U.S. citizen domestic taxpayers.

---- The Federal Court, in at least one previous court case, has ruled that Applicants, in this particular matter, were the victims and target of a number of these attacks designed to inflict permanent medical, emotional, character assassination, brand negation, economic and career damage. The FBI has been asked to interview John Cook, Nicholas Guido Denton, Adrian Covert, Patrick George, Ian Fette and John Hermann of Gawker/Gizmodo re: their financing, payola and hit-job attacks on third parties.

---- There are hundreds of millions of people in America. The same 120 of them are all involved in operating the same crimes and corruption including: the Sony Pictures corruption; the Afghanistan rare earth mine scandals operated through The Energy Department political slush fund that involves the lithium battery cover-ups (headed by Elon Musk); the Big Tech Brotopia rape, sex trafficking, bribery, exclusionism, racism and misogyny issues they were taught at Stanford University; The Facebook Meta Google Alphabet Netflix, et al, coordinated news manipulation and domestic spying that they engage in; the hiring of Fusion GPS Black Cube Gizmodo/Gawker assassins; the destruction of the housing market by their mass real estate manipulations; patent theft and industrial espionage; and the bribery of almost every politician all the way up to the Oval Office.

---- So, while the categories covered in this investigation may seem diverse. They are connected through an enterprise of criminality and illicit, coordinated operations. We list, by name, the 120 most complicit individuals organizing these crimes, in the evidence documents already submitted to the FBI, FINCEN, DOJ, FTC, SEC, FEC, Congress, InterPol and other authorities. Digital financial tracking of those persons and all of their family members should be assumed to have been under way for some time. Wire-taps and device taps of those persons and all of their family members should be assumed to have been under way for some time.

POLITICAL KILL ORDERS AND STATE-SPONSORED CHARACTER ASSASSINATIONS

Corrupt political families conspire to give government funds, contracts, tax waivers, buildings, stock market profits and other insider perks to themselves and their friends. They also conspire to blockade, harm, sabotage and black-list those who compete with them and their friends. These corrupt politicians are never prosecuted for their crimes, and can laugh in the face of those who point out their crimes, because they control the prosecution system. Their Quid Pro Quo criminal corruption is the single largest cause of the taxpayer hatred of Congress.

THE MEDIA ASSASSINS: POLITICAL KILL ORDERS AND STATE-SPONSORED CHARACTER ASSASSINATIONS

â... How A Modern Character Assassination and Political â... Kill Orderâ... Is Executed By the Silicon Valley Oligarchs and their total control of propaganda media. Patrick George At Jalopnik attacks outsiders under contract with Elon Musk and the DNC. Silicon Valley campaign finance oligarchs hire him to run hatchet jobs on innocent outsiders and then Gawker-Gizmodo-Jalopnik uses their financial partnership with the DNCâ... s Google to push the character assassination articles to the top of Google web products and searches.

---- Patrick George, Adrian Covert, John Hermann and Nick Cook are the sexually degenerate cabin boys that report to boy-loving sleaze-tabloid oligarch Nick Denton. They created the Fake News crisis in the media by flooding the internet with defamation posts and reprisal hatchet job articles designed to damage political enemies of the Socialists. They coordinate a large number of the character assassination efforts at Gawker, Gizmodo, Jalopnik, CNN, New York Times and other propaganda outlets. These Millennial boys are â... Media Rapistsâ... and should be treated as abusers.

â... How and why did a Donald Trump stripper-date named â... Stormyâ... or an Elon Musk sex party or a Kavanaugh drinking incident or the Moonves and Weinstein indiscretions suddenly hit the news at about the same time in news history?

â... In addition to actual murder, Politicians and Silicon Valley Oligarchs hire operatives to end peopleâ... s lives in other creative ways.

â... --- It is all part of the modern trend in vendetta, revenge and political payback when a Senator or a tech oligarch issues a â... kill orderâ... on an opponent. â... The client does not like to get their hands dirty so the actual social hit job is performed by companies such as: IN-Q-Tel â... (DNC); Gawker Media â... (DNC); Jalopnik â... (DNC); Gizmodo Media â... (DNC); K2 Intelligence â... (DNC); WikiStrat â... (DNC); Podesta Group â... (DNC); Fusion GPS â... (DNC/GOP); Google â... (DNC); YouTube â... (DNC); Alphabet â... (DNC); Facebook â... (DNC); Twitter â... (DNC); Think Progress â... (DNC); Media Matters â... (DNC); Black Cube â... (DNC); Mossad â... (DNC); Correct The Record â... (DNC); Sand Line â... (DNC/GOP); Blackwater â... (DNC/GOP); Undercover Global Ltd (DNC/GOP) Stratfor â... (DNC/GOP); ShareBlue â... (DNC); Wikileaks (DNC/GOP); Cambridge Analytica â... (DNC/GOP); Sid Blumenthal-

(DNC); David Brock â... (DNC); PR Firm Sunshine Sachs (DNC); Covington and Burling â... (DNC), BuzzFeed â... (DNC) Perkins Coie â... (DNC); Wilson Sonsini â... (DNC) and hundreds of othersâ...! These are the people and companies that except cash, revolving door jobs, political appointments, insider trading stock in Silicon Valley tech companies, prostitutes and real estate in exchange for destroying the lives of others.

â... These attackers deserve to be punished for the rest of their lives for taking away the lives of others in exchange for cash. Any company who is corrupt enough to hire any of these assassins should be forced out of business.

---- These attack services are responsible for 90% of the â... Fake Newsâ... problem in the world because they are the authors of most fake news. Congress must act to make these kinds of companies illegal! â... These digital assassination services offer hit-jobs, character assassinations and economic reprisal programs to famous billionaires and corrupt politicians who are seeking revenge, retribution and vendetta executions.

â... In the case of reporters getting targeted for attacks, President Donald Trump has been accused by the liberal corporate media of whipping up a hateful frenzy against the press. But while CNNâ... s Jim Acosta grandstands against Trump, real journalists are still reeling from the draconian extrajudicial measures that Barack Obama and his administration used to target them for exposing truth.

â... This secretive targeting occurred while Obama speechwriter and hate-filled ANTIFA supporter Ben Rhodes was running â... Operation Echo Chamber,â... which reportedly continues, in which he fed information to willing corporate media scribes. â... They literally know nothing,â... Rhodes said of the twentysomething journalists he easily manipulated.

---- The Freedom of the Press Foundationâ... s Trevor Timm published documents showing how former attorney general Eric Holder changed the rules to more effectively intimidate and surveil members of the press.

â... Timm writes: â... Today, we are revealingâ... for the first timeâ... the Justice Departmentâ... s rules for targeting journalists with secret FISA court orders. The documents were obtained as part of a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit brought by Freedom of the Press Foundation and Knight First Amendment Institute at Columbia University.â...

â... Obama is also clearly linked to the plot to obtain fraudulent FISA warrants on President Trumpâ... s team, as evidenced by Peter Strzok and Lisa Pageâ... s texts confirming that Obama was overseeing their fly-by-night operation.

â... Larry Schweikart reported for Big League Politics: For months pundits and researchers have been pondering the mystery of the FISA approval that led to the illegal and historically titanic scandals to ever hit the U.S. government.

---- Some have argued that Assistant Attorney General Rod Rosenstein knew the FISA was bogus when he extended it. Others have wondered if Special Counsel Robert Mueller knew about the fraudulent basis of the FISA when he used it, in part, to indict Michael Flynn. Other still, that Mueller was fooled by the FBI. This is what President Trump calls â... SPYGATEâ... . â... It may well be that the surveillance that was conducted began with UK intelligence services and then was fed back to the White House of Barack Obama. Hereâ... s the kicker: President Barack Obama did not need a FISA warrant to authorize spying/electronic surveillance on Trump because Obama all along had legal authorization to by-pass the normal court vetting process. According to 50 U.S. Code 1802, the â... Electronic Surveillance Authorizationâ... () â... Foreign intelligence in relation to a US person (Trump or his associates) is information thatâ... s necessary for the US to protect against attack, hostile acts, sabotage, . . . as well as other clandestine activities by a foreign power . .

. OR . . . information relevant to national defense/security of the US, or the conduct of foreign affairs of the U.S.â... Such an authorization by Obama required certification by Attorney General Loretta Lynch that must be logged with the FISC court. (â... The [AG]+ shall immediately transmit under seal to the court [FISC] a copy of his certification.â... )

â... In short, the DOJ has this. If we are correct, a copy of that certification is currently under seal at least with the DOJ and the FISC.

â... This is what they are hiding. â... However, the Act requires the AG to keep the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Senate Committee on Intelligence informed of these authorizations and unmaskings therein. See 1803 (a) (1) (C) If indeed this is what happened, did Lynch reportâ... or only selectively reportâ... to the committees in a way that excluded non-friendlies? Can you see why Adam Schiff, Mark Warner, and their ilk are terrified?

â... These are the playbook tactics that Senators and tech oligarchs most often use to destroy the lives of their political and business enemies: â... Government agency bosses sometimes solicit the target victims with false promises of future loans, contracts or grants from their agency and cause the target victims to expend millions of dollars and years of their time for projects which those government bosses had covertly promised to their friends. They use the target victims as a â... smokescreenâ... to cover their illegal government slush-funds for the victims competitors and personal enemies.

---- By using this tactic, the attackers can drain the target victims funds and force them into an economic disaster in plain view of everyone without the government bosses fearing any reprisal for their scam.- Every match.com, okcupid.com, Plenty Of Fish, Seeking Arrangements and all other IAC-owned, or similar, dating sites (IAC is managed by Hillary Clintonâ... s daughter) have had their profiles, texts, and inter-member communications, since those companies were started, hacked or purchased. The attack service providers use Palantir and In-Q-Tel financed data analysis software to analyze every activity in those dating services in order to find honey-trap, blackmail, sextortion and social conflict exploitation opportunities.

If you had a bad date with someone, that someone will be hunted down and convinced to help harm, #metoo or â... rape chargeâ... the intended target. All dates involve a search for sex, so the likelihood that a sexual disappointment experience will exist in each persons dating history is high. Searching every past dating email and text of a subject is quite easy with modern software and hacking techniques. A synthetically amplified, PR-agency optimized sex scandal can destroy any target. Your dating experiences from the 70â... s or 80â... s will come back to haunt you decades later. Most dates involve drinking alcohol and taking drugs. If you were unattractive or had bad sexual skills your bad date will be called â... date rapeâ... , â... drugging your date for sexâ... and related twisted narratives that are designed to shame you, the target.

---- If you try to get a date in the future, your potential date will be contacted by a third party who will slander and libel you to make sure your potential first date gets cancelled. Your social life will, essentially, end. Every photo on every dating site is cross checked with every other photo on the internet in order to cull your Facebook, LinkedIn, Snapchat and other social media together to create a total psychological manipulation profile data file on you. A single photo on a dating site can be cross searched on every mugshot archive, photo album and corporate database in the worth within minutes using modern super-computers. Your sex life will be on public record in a flash.- Social Security, SSI, SDI, Disability and other earned benefits are stone-walled. Applications of targets are â... lostâ... .

---- Files in the application process â... disappearedâ... . Lois Lerner hard drive â... incidentsâ... are operated in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.

â... Government officials and tech oligarchs contact members of the National Venture Capital association (NVCA) and created national â... black-listsâ... to blockade target victims from ever receiving investor funding. This was also confirmed in a widely published disclosure by Tesla Motors Daryl Stry and in published testimony. If Silicon Valley political campaign finance oligarchs black-list you (see the â... AngelGateâ... Scandal and the â... High Tech No Poaching Class Action Lawsuitâ... cases) you will never get investor funding again.

â... FOIA requests are hidden, frozen, stone-walled, delayed, lied about and only partially responded to in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.- State and federal employees will play an endless game of Catch-22 by arbitrarily determining that deadlines had passed that they, the government officials, had stonewalled and obfuscated applications for, in order to force these deadlines that they set, to appear to be missed. This can bankrupt a target victim.- Some Victims found themselves strangely poisoned, not unlike the Alexander Litvenko case.

---- Heavy metals and toxic materials were found right after their work with the Department of Energy weapons and energy facilities. Many wonder if these â... targetsâ... were intentionally exposed to toxins in retribution for their testimony. The federal MSDS documents clearly show that a number of these people were exposed to deadly compounds and radiations, via DOE, without being provided with proper HazMat suits which DOE officials knew were required.

â... Victims employers are called, and faxed, and ordered to fire target victims from their places of employment, in the middle of the day, with no notice, as a retribution tactic. â... On orders from Obama White House officials, DNC-financed Google, YouTube, Gawker Media and Gizmodo Media produce attack articles and defamation videos. Google locks this attack media on the internet on the top line, of the front page of all Google searches for a decade in front of 7.5 billion people, around the world.

---- This attack-type uses over $40 million dollars in server farms, production costs and internet rigging. The forensic data acquired from tracking some of these attacks proves that Google rigs attacks against individuals on the internet and that all of Googleâ... s â... impressionsâ... are manually controlled by Googleâ... s executives who are also the main financiers and policy directors of the Obama Administration. This data was provided to the European Union for itâ... s ongoing prosecution of Googleâ... s political manipulation of public perceptions. â... Victims HR and employment records, on recruiting and hiring databases, are embedded with negative keywords in order to prevent the victim targets from ever gaining future employment. â... Gary D. Conley, Seth Rich, Rajeev Motwani and many other whistle-blowers in these matters, turned up dead under strange circumstances. It is very possible that some of these attack services, operated by former CIA operatives, even offer discrete murder-for-sale services using high-tech assassination tools that make murders look like heart attacks and brain failures.

---- Disability and VA complaint hearings and benefits are frozen, delayed, denied or subjected to lost records and â... missing hard drivesâ... as in the Lois Lerner case.- Paypal (A DNC-biased operation) and other on-line payments for on-line sales are de-platformed, delayed, hidden, or re-directed in order to terminate income potential for target victims who competed with the attackers interests and holdings.- DNS redirection, â... website spoofingâ... sends target victims websites to dead ends where no sales orders or customer inquiries actually get back to the target. These internet revenue activity manipulations are conducted using Google and Amazon servers. All commercial storefronts and on-line sales attempts by target victims, will have had their sites hidden, or search engine de-linked by a massively resourced facility located in Virginia, Texas or Palo Alto, California in order to terminate revenue potentials for the target victims.

---- Over 50,000 trolls, shells, botnets and synth-blog deployments are deployed to place defamatory statements and disinformation about victims in front of 7.5 billion people around the world on the internet in order to seek to damage their federal testimony credibility by a massively resourced facility.

â... Campaign finance dirty tricks contractors are hired by campaign financiers to attack the friends and family members of the target victim in order to create low morale for the target victims psyche and motivation.- Are you getting weird headaches and hearing a â... buzzing soundâ... in your head? The U.S. Government has now acknowledged that the Cuban, Chinese and other embassy â... sonic attacksâ... are from a known microwave beam weapon. Any one of the technical departments of the attack services listed at the top of this article can build such a biological harassment weapon.

---- It can be aimed at the target victims office, bedroom or vehicle and, within a week, have caused biological and emotional damage using a weapon that has no visible track of trajectory. It is designed to make the target victim think they are â... going crazyâ... or â... hearing sounds in their headâ... .

---- In one case covert political partner: Google, transferred large sums of cash to dirty tricks contractors and then manually locked the media portion of the attacks into the top lines of the top pages of all Google searches globally, for years, with hidden embedded codes in the links and web-pages which multiplied the attacks on Victims by many magnitudes.- Covert Cartel financier: Google, placed Googleâ... s lawyer: Michelle Lee, in charge of the U.S. Patent Office and she, in turn, stacked all of the U.S. Patent Office IPR and ALICE review boards and offices with Google-supporting employees in order to rig the U.S. Patent Office to protect Google from being prosecuted for the vast patent thefts that Google engages in.

---- Google has hundreds of patent lawsuits for technology theft and a number of those lawsuits refer to Googleâ... s operations as â... Racketeeringâ... , â... Monopolistic Cartelâ... and â... Government Coup-likeâ... behaviors. Thousands of articles and investigations detail the fact that Google, â... essentiallyâ... ran the Obama White House and provided over 80% of the key White House staff. A conflict-of-interest unlike any in American history. Googleâ... s investors personally told Applicant they would â... kill himâ... . Google and the Obama Administration were â... the same entityâ... . Applicant testified in the review that got Michelle Lee terminated and uncovered a tactical political and social warfare group inside Google who were financed by Federal and State funds.

---- Honeytraps and moles were employed by the attackers. In this tactic, people who covertly worked for the attackers were employed to approach the â... targetâ... in order to spy on and misdirect the subject. â... Gawker Media, Gizmodo Media, Snopes, SPLC and other hired media assassins will be retained to produce â... hatchet jobâ... character assassination articles about you. Then those articles will be faxed, mailed and emailed to your employer and investors with a note saying: â... You donâ... t want to have anything to do with this person, do you..?â... in order to get you fired from your job and get your loans or financing pulled. The attackers will use their round one attack media, that they authored, to create a round two second wave attack designed to end your life via economic warfare.

---- Mortgage and rental applications will have had red flags added to them in databases to prevent the targets from getting homes or apartments.- Krebs On Security, Wired, Ars Technica, The Wall Street Journal and most major IT publications have reported that hundreds of spy â... back-doorsâ... have been found on every Intel, AMD, Apple, Xfinity, Cisco, Microsoft, Juniper Networks motherboard, chip-set and hardware component set.

---- This means that any kid with the â... keyâ... code can open any computer, server, router, cloud-network or other network connected device and read every file, photo, video, your calendar and email on your devices at any time from any location on Earth. The key codes have been released to every hacker community in the world for over ten years. There is now no government, corporate or personal data that canâ... t be hacked, even data from decades ago.

Every single one of your darkest secrets can be in the hands of your enemy within 60 minutes, or less. Important meetings you had planned with potential investors, employers, clients, dates, suppliers and others will suddenly get cancelled at the last minute. They will get cancelled because your enemies are reading your calendar remotely and covertly sending slander information to those you had hoped to engage with in order to sabotage your life.

---- Nothing you have ever typed on a computer or Smartphone is safe. it WILL be acquired and it WILL be used against you.

â... McCarthy-Era â... Black-listsâ... are created and employed against target victims who competed with Obama Administration executives and their campaign financiers to prevent them from getting funding and future employment.

â... Obama Administration targets were very carefully placed in a position of not being able to get jobs, unemployment benefits, disability benefits or acquire any possible sources of income. The retribution tactics were audacious, overt..and quite illegal.

â... There are thousands of additional Dirty Tricks tactics being used by these Attack Services yet Congress refuses to pass laws out-lawing such attack services.

---- The cost of an attack on a person ranges from $150,000.00 to over $50,000,000.00. While a Silicon Valley billionaire can afford to launch counter-measures to these attacks, any regular taxpayer will be utterly destroyed, and incapable of fighting back, against even the smallest version of one of these â... kill ordersâ... .

---- A number of modern office shootings are the results of these attacks against an individual who has lost everything because of the attack and has no options left. â... Federal law enforcement, the United States Congress and the highest level investigators in the U.S., and abroad, have documented (per the â... FISA Memoâ... , Congressional Reports and federal employee testimony) and proven the fact that the Obama Administration regularly engaged in the operation of retribution, vendetta and reprisal campaigns known as â... hit-jobsâ... against domestic natural born U.S. citizen domestic taxpayers.

---- The Federal Court, in at least one previous court case,has ruled that Applicants, in this particular matter, were the victims and target of a number of these attacks designed to inflict permanent medical, emotional, character assassination, brand negation, economic and career damage. The FBI has been asked to interview John Cook, Nicholas Guido Denton, Adrian Covert, Patrick George, Ian Fette and John Hermann of Gawker/Gizmodo re: their financing, payola and hit-job attacks on third parties.

---- There are hundreds of millions of people in America. The same 120 of them are all involved in operating the same crimes and corruption including: the Sony Pictures corruption; the Afghanistan rare earth mine scandals operated through The Energy Department political slush fund that involves the lithium battery cover-ups (headed by Elon Musk); the Big Tech Brotopia rape, sex trafficking, bribery, exclusionism, racism and misogyny issues they were taught at Stanford University; The Facebook â... Meta â... Google â... Alphabet â... Netflix, et al, coordinated news manipulation and domestic spying that they engage in; the hiring of Fusion GPS â... Black Cube â... Gizmodo/Gawker assassins; the destruction of the housing market by their mass real estate manipulations; patent theft and industrial espionage; and the bribery of almost every politician all the way up to the Oval Office.

---- So, while the categories covered in this investigation may seem diverse. They are connected through an enterprise of criminality and illicit, coordinated operations. We list, by name, the 120 most complicit individuals organizing these crimes, in the evidence documents already submitted to the FBI, FINCEN, DOJ, FTC, SEC, FEC, Congress, InterPol and other authorities. Digital financial tracking of those persons and all of their family members should be assumed to have been under way for some time. Wire-taps and device taps of those persons and all of their family members should be assumed to have been under way for some time.

THE SILICON VALLEY CARTEL MEMBERS

The Worst Ones - Rev 2.2

You would be shocked to learn how many people are killed, every day, for less than $50.00. ISIS and the Taliban will saw your head off for just an ideology. If people would commit murder over that small an amount of money, imagine what they would do to control the trillions of dollars of money that is always moving through the stock market. These are the people that will stop at nothing for power, mansions, hookers, private jets and greed!

Any issues re: culpability can be easily resolved in meetings with the FBI, FINCEN, The SEC, The IRS, The FTC, ICIJ.ORG and open Congressional hearings! Never was the term: "Follow The Money" more appropriate than for these people! Why are these people not yet arrested for election manipulation, RICO and Anti-trust violations, money laundering, bribery and other illicit deeds? Who is protecting them? Who is telling the police not to act? This list also serves as a demand for investigation and prosecution of these individuals who conspired to engage in these illicit acts. This is not the complete list.

AGENCY ABUSE AGAINST CITIZENS FOR VENDETTAS, RETRIBUTION AND REVENGE

A vast number of agency abuse cases and lawsuits are now on public record in the Inspector General's offices and federal courts.

It is indisputable that government agencies run "hit-jobs" on citizens on orders from corrupt politicians. These actions are felony violations of the law.

Federal and State Agencies including SSA, FEC, DOE, HHS, VA, CIA, NSA, SEC, FBI, DOJ and many others, have been charged and found guilty in these crimes against citizens.

In the Congressional investigation published at:

<http://londonworldwide.com/public/FINAL-DOE-Loan-Guarantees-Report.pdf> ; and other sites, it is clearly proven that the U.S. Department of Energy was used as a slush-fund by DOE executives in order to pay off Obama Administration campaign financiers by attacking and sabotaging their competitors.

The DOE Paducah Gaseous Diffusion Plant under contracts with the Department of Energy and the government-owned U.S. Enrichment Corp paid $5M whistle-blower awards to those whistle-blowers who were attacked, using government agency resources, for reporting a crime.

Dept. of Energy Hanford URS has agreed to settle a lawsuit brought by former employee Walter Tamosaitis for $4.1 million. The settlement in the whistleblower case comes almost one year before the case was set for a jury trial in federal court in Richland and compensates Tamosaitis for attacks against him, by DOE officials, in retribution for reporting a crime.

VA officials attacked hundreds of citizens who reported corruption, ie:

<https://www.thenewamerican.com/usnews/health-care/item/18610-va-whistleblowers-facing-retribution>.

As shown in this report:

<https://www.pogo.org/analysis/2018/08/new-report-confirms-whistleblower-retaliation-is-alive-and-well-at-department>, Agencies attack often and harshly.

CIA and NSA executives have been widely shown to use spy tools to attack domestic citizens they don't like, ie:

<https://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-2435011/NSA-employees-used-phone-tapping-tools-spy-girlfriends-cheating>, and hundreds of other news links that can be provided.

Elon Musk and Tesla, as well as Eric Schmidt and Larry Page at Google, have been proven to use the CIA group: IN-Q-TEL, to run government sponsored/financed attacks on business competitors.

In Civil Action No. 1:13-cv-00777-RBW GOVERNMENT AGENCIES WERE CAUGHT BEING USED FOR ATTACKS AGAINST CITIZENS AND PUNISHED IN THE COURT AND THE MEDIA!

The IRS, and hordes of other government agencies have been caught and proven, IN COURT, to target and attack people for presumed political differences.

Why should we assume that the Social Security Administration is not ALSO doing this too to harm citizens who speak out?

The Lois Lerner IRS attacks took many years to resolve. In an unprecedented victorious conclusion to a four year-long legal battle against the IRS, the bureaucratic agency admitted in federal court that it wrongfully targeted citizens, during the Obama Administration, because of their political viewpoints and issued an apology to those people for doing so.

In addition, the IRS is consenting to a court order that would prohibit it from ever engaging in this form of unconstitutional discrimination in the future.

In a proposed Consent Order filed with the Court, the IRS has apologized for its treatment of U.S. citizens including organizations from 20 states that applied for 501(c)(3) and (c)(4) tax-exempt status with the IRS between 2009 and 2012 -- during the tax-exempt determinations process. Crucially, following years of denial by the IRS and blame-shifting by IRS officials, the agency now expressly admits that its treatment of our clients was wrong and a total violation of our Democracy..

As set forth in the proposed Order:

â... The IRS admits that its treatment of Plaintiffs during the tax-exempt determinations process, including screening their applications based on their names or policy positions, subjecting those applications to heightened scrutiny and inordinate delays, and demanding of some Plaintiffsâ... information that TIGTA determined was unnecessary to the agencyâ... s determination of their tax-exempt status, was wrong. For such treatment, the IRS expresses its sincere apology.â...

Throughout litigation of this case, activists have remained committed to protecting the rights of the public who faced unlawful and discriminatory action by the IRS and other agencies. The objective from the very beginning has been to hold agencies accountable for corrupt practices.

This Consent Order represents a historic victory for the public and sends the unequivocal message that a government agencyâ... s targeting of citizens organizations, or any organization, on the basis of political viewpoints, will never be tolerated and that revenge will be swift and vast.

The Order will put an end, once and for all, to the abhorrent practices utilized against citizens, as the agreement includes the IRS's express acknowledgment of its wrongdoing and apology for its wrongful treatment of the public. While this agreement is designed to prevent any such practices from occurring again, rest assured that all public interest lawyers will remain vigilant to ensure that the IRS, SSA, DOJ or SEC does not resort to such tactics in the future.

Per detailed reports, in March of 2012 lawyers began being contacted by literally dozens of citizens and groups who were being harassed by the Obama IRS after submitting applications for tax-exempt status. Their tax-exempt applications were held up for years (over seven years in some cases), and they began receiving obtrusive and unconstitutional requests for donor and member information. That began a now more than five and a half year fight with the burgeoning bureaucracy at the IRS. Then on May 10, 2013, Lois Lerner, the then head of the IRS Tax Exempt Organizations Division, publicly implicated the IRS in one of the worst political targeting scandals of the century.

This is an extraordinary victory against government agency abuse. It sends a powerful warning to the deep state bureaucracy that it will not be allowed to violate the Constitution in order to silence and shut down the whistle-blowers.

In addition to the IRS's admissions of and apology for its wrongful conduct, the Consent Order would specifically award Plaintiffs the following:

- A declaration by the Court that it is wrong to apply the United States tax code to any tax-exempt applicant or entity based solely on such entity's name, any lawful positions it espouses on any issues, or its associations or perceived associations with a particular political movement, position or viewpoint;
- A declaration by the Court that any action or inaction taken by the IRS must be applied evenhandedly and not based solely on a tax-exempt applicant or entity's name, political viewpoint, or associations or perceived associations with a particular political movement, position or viewpoint; and
- A declaration by the Court that discrimination on the basis of political viewpoint in administering the United States tax code violates fundamental First Amendment rights. Disparate treatment of taxpayers based solely on the taxpayers' names, any lawful positions the taxpayers espouse on any issues, or the taxpayers' associations or perceived associations with a particular political movement, position or viewpoint is unlawful.

In the Order, the IRS has also agreed that (unless expressly required by law) certain actions against the Plaintiffs—i.e. the sharing, dissemination, or other use of information unnecessarily obtained by the IRS during the determinations process (such as donor names, the names of volunteers, political affiliations of an organization's officers, etc.)—would be unlawful. In addition, the IRS promises not to take any retaliatory action against our clients for exposing the targeting scheme.

Finally, and of crucial significance, the IRS admits it targeted persons and groups based on their viewpoints (i.e., its policy positions) and that such viewpoint discrimination violates fundamental First Amendment rights. This is the first time the IRS has admitted that its targeting scheme was not just inappropriate—as TIGTA found—but, as alleged, blatantly unconstitutional.

To ensure consistency and uniformity within the agency's operations going forward, the IRS is required, pursuant to the Order, to inform all employees within the Exempt Organizations Division, as well as the Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners within other divisions, of the Order's terms.

This Order not only validates allegations about their treatment at the hands of the corrupt Obama-era IRS but also provides important assurances to the American public that the agency understands its obligation to refrain from further such discriminatory conduct. As Attorney General Sessions acknowledged in this regard, â... [t]here is no excuse for [the IRSâ... s] conduct,â... as it is â... without questionâ... that the First Amendment prohibits the conduct that occurred here, i.e., subjecting American citizens to disparate treatment â... based solely on their viewpoint or ideology.â... Sessions further confirmed his Departmentâ... s commitment to ensuring that the â... abuse of powerâ... in which the IRS engaged here â... will not be tolerated.â...

It is impossible to overstate the importance of this victory. This marks a years-long fight for justice in defense of the constitutional rights of the public.

This is an extraordinary victory against abuse of power and corruption.

It sends a powerful warning to the deep state bureaucracy that it will not be allowed to violate the Constitution and manipulate the IRS, SSA and other agencies in order to silence and shut down those who speak out about political corruption crimes.

In the wake of Wisconsin Watchdogâ... s investigation into allegations of incompetence, misconduct, and retaliation in Social Security disability appeals offices, several employees have taken their complaints to a Senate committee led by Wisconsin Sen. Ron Johnson.

An official with knowledge of the complaints said the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee, chaired by the Oshkosh Republican, has received emails and other contacts from â... certain peopleâ... inside the Social Security Administrationâ... s Office of Disability Adjudication and Review.

The initial complaints came from an employee inside the Milwaukee office following Wisconsin Watchdogâ... s opening investigative report that found some claimants waiting more than 1,000 days for an appeals decision on their disability benefits claim.

Following Wednesdayâ... s story of a whistleblower in the Madison ODAR office, the committee has received more specific complaints about retaliation against employees, the source said.

Committee staff members sent the latest Watchdog piece to SSA administrators hoping they will â... cooperate,â... the source said. To date, the agency has been less than cooperative.

â... This is an ongoing process, and they are not always as forthcoming as weâ... d like them to be,â... the source said. â... Hopefully with your continued reporting, this is an issue they canâ... t duck.â...

A Senate committee member said officials there are working with the Office of Special Counsel on â... multiple whistleblower retaliation claims.â... The committee continues to request information from the SSA.

The whistleblower in the Madison office claims management retaliated against her after she was called to testify in a misconduct case. The incident involved â... inappropriate behaviorâ... by an administrative law judge, she said.

â... They are so corrupt. Itâ... s absolutely horrible,â... said the woman, a lead case technician in the Madison Office of Disability Adjudication and Review.

She spoke on condition of anonymity, fearing more retribution from her supervisors. While she said recounting her particular experiences will more than likely betray her identity anyway, the ODAR case worker insisted she has had enough.

â... Iâ... m at point where they donâ... t care about me, I donâ... t see why Iâ... m protecting them. This is my last resort,â... she said. â... I want to do my work without fear of retaliation.â...

She said she has contacted the Senate committee.

â... I forwarded my information to them and I got an email back from them. They said people are coming out of the woodwork with their complaints (about ODAR) following your story,â... the whistleblower said.

Ronald Klym, a long-time senior legal assistant in the Milwaukee ODAR office, alleges he has been retaliated against by supervisors for going public with his charges of incompetence and misconduct in the agency.

The federal employee, who has worked for SSA for 16 years, provided Wisconsin Watchdog with documents showing extremely long wait times for claimants appealing their denied applications for benefits.

Doug Nguyen, SSA regional spokesman, in a previous story said the agency acknowledges that Milwaukee ODAR has a â... high average processing time for disability appeal hearings, and we are working to address the issue.â...

Beyond the delays is what Klym calls the â... shell game,â... the wholesale transferring of cases to other parts of the country by administrators to make the Milwaukee officeâ... s numbers look better than they are.

The Madison office whistleblower confirmed Klymâ... s allegations, saying at one point she saw 2,000 cases from the Milwaukee office handed off to the Oak Brook operation.

There are over 10,000 SSA disability manipulation charges against SSA executives and staff.

| 2010 |  | Jim Wetta | AstraZeneca         | AstraZeneca (AZ) whistleblower Jim (James) Wetta filed a False Claims qui-tam case that triggered the United States Department of Justice investigation into AstraZeneca violating the Federal Anti-Kickback Statute and promoting the unapproved use of the (anti-psychotic) drug Seroquel.<sup>[195]</sup> In September 2000, the drug Seroquel received FDA approval for the short-term treatment of schizophrenia, then in 2004, for bipolar depression. James Wetta exposed the company's alleged fraud, where sales reps were promoting the drug for a wide range of less serious disorders which included aggression, Alzheimer's disease, anger management, anxiety, attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, bipolar maintenance, dementia, depression, mood disorder, sleeplessness and post-traumatic stress disorder. Promoting drugs off-label amounts to fraud under the False Claims Act, as the unapproved uses were not medically accepted indications for which the federal and state Medicaid programs provided coverage. Under the Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act, a company must specify the intended use of a product in its new drug application to the FDA. Once the drug is approved by the FDA, the drug may not be marketed or promoted for off-label uses.<sup>[196]</sup> The civil settlement agreement required AstraZeneca to pay $520 million to the federal government to resolve civil settlements. Jim Wetta provided the information which proved the drug was promoted for conditions other than the FDA medical indication.<sup>[197]</sup> |

The Snowden Psychiatric Smear

Discrediting whistleblowers with the â... narcissistâ... label

EMILY MASTERS

Jeffrey Toobin of the New Yorker (6/10/13) slammed National Security Agency whistleblower Edward Snowden as â... a grandiose narcissist who deserves to be in prison,â... and the leak as â... an act that speaks more to his ego than his conscience.â...

Washington Post commentator Richard Cohen (6/10/13) called Snowden â... merely narcissistic.â... A day later, Matt Miller of the Washington Post (6/11/13) wrote a column headlined â... Edward Snowdenâ... s Grandiosity.â... A week after the leak, Bob Schieffer declared on Face the Nation (6/16/13; Mediaite, 6/16/13), â... I think what we have in Edward Snowden is just a narcissistic young man who has decided he is smarter than the rest of us.â...

Narcissism is more than mere vanity. The Oxford English Dictionary defines it as â... a stage in the normal psychological development of children which may be reverted to in adulthood during mental illness.â... It is often linked with Narcissistic Personality Disorder, a psychiatric illness the National Institutes of Healthâ... s PubMed Health service describes as â... a condition in which people have an excessive sense of self-importance, an extreme preoccupation with themselves, and lack of empathy for others.â...

And journalists have long used terms like â... narcissismâ... and â... grandioseâ... to pathologizeâ... and discreditâ... whistleblowers.

WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange is regularly called narcissistic (Boston Herald, 5/31/13; Washington Times, 12/2/10; Chicago Tribune, 12/5/10). CNN(10/29/12) described him as â... prone to making grandiose statements,â... while the New York Times (4/18/12) quoted colleagues calling him â... grandiose and paranoid.â...

Bradley Manning hasnâ... t dodged the â... narcissistâ... label either (Detroit News, 12/27/10). The New York Times (8/8/10) wondered if Manningâ... s â... delusions of grandeurâ... led to his whistleblowing, and reported: â... He professed a perhaps inflated sense of purpose, he called himself â... emotionally fracturedâ... and a â... wreckâ... and said he was â... self-medicating like crazy.â... â...

Where did journalists learn this handy trick? Richard Nixon employed his â... plumbersâ... to burglarize Pentagon Papers whistleblower Daniel Ellsbergâ... s psychiatristâ... s office for anything that might discredit him (New York Times, 6/30/07). Ellsberg was also called â... grandioseâ... and â... narcissisticâ... in Tom Wellsâ... biography (L.A. Times, 9/9/01).

Even things that have thankfully been eliminated from medical standards, such as homosexuality (which was deleted from the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual for Mental Disorders in 1973) are still apparently journalistic fair game.

The Washington Postâ... s Cohen (6/10/13) said Snowden would be remembered as a â... cross-dressing Little Red Riding Hoodâ... â... a reference to Glenn Greenwaldâ... s profile of Snowden (Guardian, 6/9/13) that described Snowden using a red hood over his laptop to protect his passwords.

This sort of homophobic jab is something WikiLeaks whistleblower Bradley Manning experienced as well (Lowell Sun, 12/30/10). When the news broke that Manning was gay, his sexuality and mental health quickly became a topic of media speculation (WL Central, 7/11).

Attacking Edward Snowdenâ... s character with an amateur understanding of mental health medicine not only distracts from the real public issue at handâ... the secret mass surveillance of U.S. citizensâ... but also further marginalizes an already highly stigmatized portion of our society, which includes 58 million Americans.

Few journalists have spoken out against the psychiatric smear, or what it says about the state of our media and society. However, on a recent episode of PBS Newshour (6/14/13), we got a quick glimpse:

DAVID BROOKS: I do attack [Snowden] for being a grandiose narcissist.

MARK SHIELDS: Is that a felony?

BROOKS: No.

SHIELDS: Thank goodness.

BROOKS: Itâ... s a plague around here.

ATTACKED BY OBAMA - ICE BOSS CHRIS CRANE

Obama insider Attacks ICE Whistleblower

Getty Images/Bloomberg

by BRANDON DARBY 10 Jul 2017 400

A DHS official used The Daily Beast to lob a personal attack at ICE Officer Chris Crane, the head of the ICE Council who was praised by the Trump campaign and then-Senator Jeff Sessions as an American hero for his courage in standing up to the Obama Administration. The DHS leaker implied to the media that Officer Crane was dishonest and “out of touch” with the ICE officers Crane represents and defends against government bureaucrats.

The unnamed DHS leaker told The Daily Beast:

“... The ICE workforce, which Chris Crane claims to support, would be far better served if he focused his efforts on supporting ICE’s expanded enforcement priorities, instead of undermining them with false personal attacks,” said a DHS official. “... Mr. Crane’s comments are strikingly out of touch with the impressive gains made in the enforcement of immigration law under the Trump administration.”

ICE Officer Crane was a favorite of Donald Trump during Trump's presidential campaign and of then-Senator Jeff Sessions. The then-senator called Crane an "American hero." As Breitbart News reported:

advertisement

Crane is an ICE officer of 13 years, he is a former U.S. Marine, a lifetime member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and a lifetime member of the American Legion. When President Obama enacted his first executive amnesty in 2012, Crane and nine of his fellow immigration officers sued the President to try to stop the lawless amnesty. Jeff Sessions has described Crane as an "American hero" for his whistle blowing on the immigration corruption.

Breitbart also covered the Trump campaign's defense of ICE Officer Crane:

"This courageous ICE officer... a man that Sen. Jeff Sessions has called an American hero... has served his country in so many different capacities: in the Marine's uniform, as an ICE officer, [and] as a representative for all of America's ICE officers," said Donald Trump's Senior Policy Adviser Stephen Miller on Breitbart News Sunday.

Miller, who worked for Sen. Sessions as Rubio sought to push the Gang of Eight amnesty bill through the Senate, explained that: "Chris Crane was a central figure in stopping the Gang of Eight immigration bill from becoming law. He did that in his capacity as the ICE Council President for America's nearly 6,000 ICE officers and personnel. What that means is that the 6,000 ICE officers and personnel cast a ballot to pick one from among their own ranks to represent them nation-wide." He [Crane] was a central figure in exposing the Gang of Eight bill and stopping it.

Miller said:

"I want to explain just a little bit more about why Chris Crane is such an exceptional person. Consider the situation he finds himself in: he represents America's ICE officers, who are in a political environment in this Homeland Security Department under Obama where they are ordered every day to violate their oath; where they face unceasing pressure from the political chain of command to release criminal aliens and violent people back on the streets and have nothing they can do." And Chris Crane in 2012 spoke out, when precious few did, about President Obama's first executive amnesty. And he and nine other ICE officers courageously filed a lawsuit to stop President Obama's 2012 executive amnesty. Think about the courage that takes about how it affects your future career, in terms of how it affects possible political reprisal. Again, Chris Crane has proven over and over that he is a man of courage and honor and decency.

The smear from the anonymous DHS official is likely in response to Crane's decision to speak out against Obama-holdover Thomas Homan's selection by Secretary Kelly to lead the ICE agency. Acting Director Homan helped oversee the release of tens of thousands of convicted criminal illegal aliens into U.S. communities while he was then-President Obama's Enforcement and Removal Operations (ERO) director. Homan received an award from Obama for his work on immigration issues. The elevation of Homan has struck many ICE officers, including Crane, as the promotion of an entrenched DC bureaucrat. "Homan is the swamp," Crane recently told Breitbart Texas.

ATTACKED BY OBAMA - Sharyl Attkisson

The highly sophisticated hacking of Sharyl Attkisson's computers

By Howard Kurtz

Facebook Twitter Email Print

NOW PLAYING

CBS News reporter blowing lid off her experience

From the moment that Sharyl Attkisson met a shadowy source Iâ... ll call Big Mac, she was plunged into a nightmare involving mysterious surveillance of her computers.

They met at a McDonaldâ... s in Northern Virginia at the beginning of 2013, and the source (she dubs him Number One) warned her about the threat of government spying. During their next hamburger rendezvous, Big Mac told Attkisson, then a CBS News reporter constantly at odds with the Obama administration, that he was â... shockedâ... and â... flabbergastedâ... by his examination of her computer and that this was â... worse than anything Nixon ever did.â...

Attkissonâ... s forthcoming book--â... Stonewalled: My Fight for Truth Against the Forces of Obstruction and Intimidation in Obamaâ... s Washingtonâ... â... reads in part like a spy thriller. Just when you think Attkissonâ... s imagination might be running away with her comes wave after wave of evidence that both her CBS computer and personal iMac were repeatedly hacked and its files accessed, including one on Benghazi. A consultant hired by CBS reached the same conclusion. Further scrutiny of her personal desktop proves that â... the interlopers were able to co-opt my iMac and operate it remotely, as if they were sitting in front of it.â... And an inspection revealed that an extra fiber-optics line had been installed in Attkissonâ... s home without her knowledge.

There is the strong implication that an administration that spied on the Associated Press and Fox News correspondent James Rosen might have been involved. A Justice Department spokesman said in an earlier statement that "to our knowledge" the department "has never 'compromised' Ms. Attkisson's computers" or tried to obtain information from any of her devices. A spokeswoman for CBS News said the network had no comment on the book.

In the fall of 2013, with White House officials accusing Attkisson of being biased in her Benghazi reporting, the files in her MacBook Air suddenly began deleting at hyperspeed right before her eyes. She videotaped the process and showed it to two computer experts. "They're [blanking] with you," one says. "They're trying to send you a message," says the other. The experts also found evidence that the intruders had tried to cover their tracks by erasing 23 hours of log-in information.

The computer melodrama forms the backdrop for the deterioration of Attkissonâ... s relationship with CBS, where she worked for two decades and won Emmys and other awards. Time and again, she writes, network executives in New York and Washington derailed her stories and treated her like a troublemaker:

â... They rarely said the story wasnâ... t going to air. They just let it sit around and â... loved itâ... until it began to stink like old fish.â...

And Attkisson names names, saying the blocking of her work became virtually routine under CBS anchor Scott Pelley and his then-executive producer, Pat Shevlin. Stories were repeatedly rewritten, watered down and delayed until they never made air, she says. And Attkisson says these werenâ... t just stories that took on politically charged controversies involving the administration, but also pieces that challenged government waste and corporate conduct, such as the questions surrounding Boeingâ... s Dreamliner.

Perhaps the most eye-opening tale involves CBSâ... s â... 60 Minutes,â... Benghazi and the president. During the second presidential debate in 2012, Obama challenged Mitt Romney by insisting he had labeled the assault in Libya a terrorist attack the very next day. This became a huge controversy, especially since CNNâ... s Candy Crowley had sided with the president.

Turns out that Steve Kroft had conducted a â... 60 Minutesâ... interview with Obama the day after the attack, portions of which had never aired. When Attkisson did a story on the flap, her CBS bosses instructed her to use a particular script and a particular sound bite that seemed to back up the presidentâ... s version.

She was stunned when a CBS colleague later read her another exchange from the interview:

KROFT: Mr. President, this morning you went out of your way to avoid the use of the word terrorism in connection with the Libya attack.

OBAMA: Right.

The correspondent then asked point-blank:

KROFT: Do you believe that this was a terrorist attack?

OBAMA: Well, itâ... s too early to know exactly how this came about, what group was involved, but obviously it was an attack on Americans.

Attkisson writes, â... I couldnâ... t get past the fact that upper-level journalists at CBS had been a party to misleading the public.â...

Under pressure from Attkisson and others, the network posted the exchange on its website the Sunday night before the election, but it got lost in the final hours of the campaign. She says CBS News President David Rhodes promised her there would be an internal investigation, but she never heard another word about it.

Attkisson, who will not comment until the book is published, resigned in frustration last spring. She says there was a campaign to paint her as a disgruntled conservative, while in reality she investigated George W. Bushâ... s administration as aggressively as Obamaâ... s.

More important, she makes a broader case against agenda-driven journalism: â... We do stories on food stamps, but only to the extent that we prove the cast that theyâ... re needed, without also examining well-established fraud and abuse. We look at unemployment but only to the extent that we present sympathetic characters showing that benefits should be extended rather than examining, also, the escalating cost and instances of fraud. We cover minimum wage but only to the extent that we help make the case for raising it, without giving much due to the other side, which argued it will have the opposite effect than intended.â...

Attkisson doesnâ... t explicitly accuse CBS and the rest of the mainstream media of a pervasive liberal bias.

But that view is clear from sheer accumulation of detail in her book.

Obama is funding the anti-Trump resistance.

Never have we seen an ex-President undermine the next administration like this. There was never a peaceful transfer of power to the Trump administration. From the Russian collusion hoax to the landmines Obama set up, the Deep State is clawing to hang on to every ounce of power.

Paul Sperry of the New York Post breaks it down:

The Obama administration's massive shakedown of Big Banks over the mortgage crisis included unprecedented back-door funding for dozens of Democratic activist groups who were not even victims of the crisis.

At least three liberal nonprofit organizations the Justice Department approved to receive funds from multibillion-dollar mortgage settlements were instrumental in killing the ObamaCare repeal bill and are now lobbying against GOP tax reform, as well as efforts to rein in illegal immigration.

An estimated $640 million has been diverted into what critics say is an improper, if not unconstitutional, slush fund fed from government settlements with JPMorgan Chase and Co., Citigroup Inc. and Bank of America Corp., according to congressional sources.

Cause of Action Institute vice president Julie Smith told The Post that these radical left-wing groups committed to revolutionary social change sent proposals to and even met with high level HUD and DOJ officials in order to get their piece of the settlement pie.

Now these groups, being well-funded, are actively working against Trump's America first policies.

One of the groups that received $1.5 million from Obama's slush fund, La Raza, a radical brown power group lobbying for illegal immigration and open borders actively fought against the repeal of Obamacare. Why? Because 8 million hispanics would lose their healthcare coverage if ACA was repealed. In July, La Raza held a huge rally in Arizona to protest the ACA repeal efforts, influencing John McCain's decision to stop Trump's healthcare proposals which would ultimately repeal Obamacare.

National Urban League received $1.2 million from Obama's slush fund according to The Post. They are an African-America group lobbying to keep ACA because they claim 5 million African-Americans would lose their healthcare coverage if Obamacare was repealed.

The National Community Reinvestment Coalition received $2.6 million from Obama's slush fund. They are actively lobbying against Wall Street reform such as repealing Dodd-Frank.

Although AG Sessions has ordered a full audit of these funds and halted the DOJ funding third party groups back in June, they are still being funded because Obama holdovers are doing whatever the hell they want without fear of reprisal.

In fact, AG Sessions said in a statement:

â... When the federal government settles a case against a corporate wrongdoer, any settlement funds should go first to the victims and then to the American peopleâ... not to bankroll third-party special interest groups or the political friends of whoever is in power.â...

Sperry reports the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau continues to force financial institutions it prosecutes to donate to third-party community organizers.

CFPB director Richard Cordray is an Obama holdover, whose special five-year term doesn't expire until 2018.

ATTACKED BY OBAMA - THE BENGHAZI WITNESSES

â... Classic Whistleblower Reprisalâ...

State Department officials engaged in 'subtle intimidation' of Benghazi whistleblowers, lawyer says

TWEET

EMAIL

BY: Alana Goodman

State Department officials have been accused of waging an intimidation campaign against witnesses preparing to testify at a congressional hearing on the Benghazi attack, in potential violation of whistle-blower protection statutes.

At least three State Department employees and one CIA employee have faced pressure as they prepare to testify at upcoming hearings on the Obama administrationâ... s response to the Benghazi attack before the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee, according to an attorney for one of the witnesses.

Federal law prohibits any effort to obstruct or intimidate witnesses in a congressional hearing.

Victoria Toensing, an attorney for one of the witnesses, said these were not direct threats. Rather, she said, administration officials have insinuated witnesses could lose their jobs or get passed up for promotions if they testify.

"Theyâ... re not telling them theyâ... re going to put them through the guillotine tomorrow," Toensing told the Washington Free Beacon. "Itâ... s subtle intimidation."

"People understand that if they talk, theyâ... re going to lose a job or not get the next promotion, or if theyâ... ve been there long enough they should retire," she added.

Fox News broke the story about the alleged witness intimidation on Monday. Toensing said the pressure has come from State Department officials.

President Barack Obama said today that he was not aware of any intimidation.

"Iâ... m not familiar with this notion that anybodyâ... s been blocked from testifying," Obama said at a press briefing. "What Iâ... ll do is find out what exactly youâ... re referring to."

Toensing said she was troubled by the presidentâ... s response.

"Why didnâ... t he say, â... I want people to come forward [with information]â... ?" she said.

The Government Accountability Projectâ... s Jesselyn Radack, who has represented whistle-blowers at the State Department and CIA, called the alleged intimidation "classic whistleblower reprisal."

"This is a fundamental 1st Amendment issue," said Radack. "Itâ... s outrageous if the State Department and the CIA are threatening to end the careers of these officials."

Radack added that "in our experience, termination of a personâ... s career foreshadows eventual espionage act charges."

The Obama administration has prosecuted more people under the Espionage Act than all previous administrations combined despite its promise to "strengthen whistle-blower laws to protect federal workers."

Toensing said she has not been granted security clearance, preventing her from discussing classified information with her client. She also said her client has not been given whistle-blower status.

House Oversight Committee Chairman Darrell Issa (R., Calif.) called on the State Department to "[make] clear to its employees that they are free to furnish information to Congress in accordance with their statutory rights" in a letter on April 16.

"To address the fact that witnesses may be reluctant to apply for attorney clearance for fear of retaliation, please enclose your response to this request a pledge that the Department will not take any adverse personnel action or otherwise retaliate against any employee who requests clearance," wrote Issa.

Issaâ... s office said it could not speak on specifics intimidation allegations.

Sen. Lindsey Graham (R., S.C.) also weighed in on the charges.

"Revelations about witnesses being afraid to testify and military assets that could have been deployed in a timely fashion justify appointing a joint select committee," Graham said. "In light of these new revelations it is imperative that we learn everything we can from what happened before, during and after the attacks. We cannot allow those who serve our nation to feel abandoned when under attack, or by Congress afterwards."

One military special operations member, who spoke anonymously to Fox News, contradicted the Obama administrationâ... s claim that there was not enough time for Special Forces to intervene and stop the attack.

He said that special operations members are concerned about speaking out because of fear of reprisal.

"The problem is, you got guys in my position, you got guys in special operations community who are still active and still involved," he said.

"And they would be decapitated if they came forward with information that would affect high level commanders," he said.

Rep. Frank Wolf (R., Va.) said the dispute over whistleblowers is more evidence that a House Select Committee needs to be created to exclusively investigate the attack.

"This supports allegations we have repeatedly heard about administration intimidation of Benghazi whistleblowers by White House lawyers," Wolf said in a statement this afternoon. "And if what President Obama said today in his press conference was true â... that the State Department has been forthcoming with information about this attack â... why are we just now hearing reports like these?"

A spokesperson for the State Department directed reporters to his comments during Tuesdayâ... s press briefings.

"The State Department is deeply committed to meeting its obligation to protect employees, and the State Department would never tolerate or sanction retaliation against whistleblowers on any issue, including this one," Patrick Ventrell said during the briefing. "Thatâ... s an obligation we take very seriously, full stop. In fact, the Department regularly sends notices, as we do to our entire staff, to employees advising of their right to federal whistleblower protections. We do so annually, and in fact, I checked and we did so just last week, which is our routine process in the spring to send an update like that."

Ventrell added that he was not aware of any State Department employees who had requested security clearances for their attorneys.

The White House did not respond to requests for comment.

The House Oversight Committee released a report last week alleging that the Obama administration changed its explanation of the Sept. 11, 2012 attack on the Benghazi consulate in order to shield the State Department from political backlash. For nearly two weeks after the attack, administration officials downplayed it as a spontaneous demonstration over an anti-Islam film that spun out of control. Evidence later revealed that the attack was premeditated and carried out by militants with ties to al Qaeda.

The House Oversight Committee said it would resume its hearings on Benghazi in May.

ATTACKED BY OBAMA - VA Whistleblowers

VA culture of reprisals against whistleblowers remains strong after scandal

Federal Diary

By Joe Davidson | Columnist

It's been about 17 months since revelations over the cover-up of long patient wait times at Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) facilities exploded.

It's been about 16 months since former VA secretary Eric K. Shinseki resigned as the scandal reached a boil.

It's been about 14 months since the Senate confirmed Robert McDonald to replace Shinseki.

It's about time things changed.

A visitor leaves the Sacramento Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Rancho Cordova, Calif., on April 2, 2015. (AP Photo/Rich Pedroncelli, File)

But testimony at a Senate hearing Tuesday demonstrated that despite vigorous efforts from the new VA leadership, the department remains a dangerous place for whistleblowers who report wrong doing.

"The VA has a culture problem with whistleblower retaliation," said Sen. Ron Johnson (R-Wis.), chairman of the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee.

[\[After the VA scandal, veterans were told their wait for care would get shorter. But it's actually getting worse.\]](#)

The "culture of fear" Johnson spoke of is evident in the number of VA cases handled by the Office of Special Counsel (OSC), an independent body that deals with whistleblower retaliation among other things. Special Counsel Carolyn Lerner said her small staff is "truly overwhelmed" by the number of cases it gets from the VA.

VA whistleblower reprisal cases received by OSC has been rising quickly, from 405 in fiscal 2013 to a projected 712 for fiscal 2015 — a 75 percent jump.

Lerner expects approximately 35 percent of the possible 4,000 prohibited personnel practice cases filed from across government this year to be from VA employees. "In 2014, for the first time," she said, "the VA surpassed the Department of Defense in the total number of cases filed with OSC, even though the Defense Department has twice the number of civilian employees as the VA."

An important part of that problem, senators complained, is the relative scarcity of discipline against those who retaliate against whistleblowers. Since 2014, the VA has proposed discipline for just nine employees for whistleblower retaliation, according to the VA. Four were suspended, one was fired, two were reprimanded and the other two cases are pending. Over 20 cases are under investigation.

Carolyn Clancy, the chief medical officer of the VA health administration, admitted the department must do better.

â... The Department has had problems ensuring that whistleblower disclosures receive prompt and effective attention, and that whistleblowers themselves are protected from retaliation,â... she told senators. â... I acknowledge today that VA is still working toward the full culture change we must achieve to ensure that all employees feel safe disclosing problems, and that all supervisors who engage in retaliatory behavior are held promptly and meaningfully accountable.â...

Christopher Kirkpatrick was a VA psychologist and whistleblower who complained about over-medication of patients at the Tomah VA Medical Center in Wisconsin when he committed suicide in 2009. His brother, Sean Kirkpatrick, spoke for him at the hearing.

â... Our brother felt helpless and hopeless with the obstacles he encountered at the Tomah VA Medical Center,â... Sean Kirkpatrick told the hearing. â... He wanted to improve the quality of care for our nationâ... s veterans through holistic options and continuously questioned the over-medication practices which hindered his ability to treat his patients. He felt his personal safety disregarded when his life was threatened by a patient who was never dismissed from the medical center. Even after expressing concerns with his complex case load, it appears that no assistance was given, his concerns were disregarded.â...

Johnson was livid at the response from the VAâ... s Office of Inspector General (OIG) to Kirkpatrickâ... s suicide.

A July 2015 report from the OIG â... strongly recommendedâ... reviewing a sheriff department report that suggested Christopher Kirkpatrick may have been involved in distributing illegal substances.

â... That sounds like reprisal, to me, to a dead person,â... said an angry Johnson, waving the document in his hands. â... I was upset coming in here and Iâ... ve become more upset.â...

Committee members on both sides of the partisan divide also are upset with President Obama for allowing the VA to go without a permanent inspector general since Dec. 31, 2013. â... It is unacceptable that this important office has been without permanent leadership for close to two years,â... said Sen. Tom Carper (D-Del.), the top Democrat on the panel.

Another issue disturbing Johnson was testimony from witnesses that VA managers had inappropriately looked at the medical records of agency whistleblowers who are veterans.

After Christopher Shea Wilkes of Shreveport, La., complained about unethical VA hiring practices, â... I found numerous persons that had illegally accessed my personal (medical) information,â... he said. â... The hospital conducted an investigation but claimed that they had found nothing.â...

Johnson called the excuse that the VA would need to check medical records to get employee addresses â... a lie.â...

[\[He blew the whistle on the VA â... and then was almost sacked for eating stale sandwiches\]](#)

Lerner complained to Obama in a Sept. 17 letter about the lack of discipline for VA managers found to have done wrong. After listing cases where managers were not disciplined, or only lightly so, for infractions, Lerner wrote: â... The lack of accountability in these cases stands in stark contrast to disciplinary actions taken against VA whistleblowers. The VA has attempted to fire or suspend whistleblowers for minor indiscretions and, often, for activity directly related to the employeeâ s whistleblowing.â

McDonald makes it a point of showing VA whistleblowers that they are appreciated. Thatâ s important leadership. But the senate testimony shows the entrenched culture remains more powerful than he is.

ATTACKED BY OBAMA AND CLINTON - MONICA LEWINSKY

Fact: I was 14 when the scandal of Monica Lewinsky and Bill Clinton, former president of the United States of America, broke loose. All I understood was that the married president had an affair with an intern. He was impeached and she was publicly humiliated and shunned from society. I am not going to discuss what Monica Lewinsky did in her twenties, because honestly, it is not anyone's place to judge.

Speaking of judging, all hell broke loose when Monica Lewinsky reappeared with a public speech at the Forbes 30 Under 30 Forum this week.

Websites, TVs, Bloggers, Social Media Networks were suddenly filled with two teams fighting against each other, one team supporting her courage to come out and speak of her ordeal and the other reminding her of her life as a â... presidentâ... s whoreâ... , some even called her unpatriotic and a â... Spyâ... . Turns out, for most of the population, something that happened over 16 years ago will not leave your reputation, Monica Lewinsky seems doomed to carry the Scarlett letter forever.

So, What did Lewinsky say? She first made a joke about people wondering â... Who the hell is she, this Monica? And what is she doing here?â... She then joked about her life in the limelight and what reading the Starr Report online with the rest of the people meant for her sense of privacy and â... shameâ... .

â... Krista Elliott (@elliottkrista) October 20, 2014

She recalls â... Overnight, I went from being a completely private figure to a publicly humiliated one. I was Patient Zero.â... I kind of agree, in the age of No Google and No Privacy Settings, Monica Lewinsky back then was the patient zero of social media bullying. She feared for her safety and her only friends at the time were the FBI agents on her security detail. She briefly acknowledged her affair with former President Bill Clinton but mainly focused on the aftermath which according to her, left her â... shatteredâ... and repeating to herself â... I want to die.â... She also mentioned to the audience the recent wave of celebrity nude photo hacking and leaking, warning â... anyone can be next.â... My opinions of Monica Lewinsky as a human being are irrelevant here. I feel the need to praise this woman taking a very public stand and subjecting herself to a wave of abuse and shaming for one greater cause she is now crusading for, Cyber Bullying. Since Lewinsky was the first person to have their reputation destroyed over the internet, she now declares she would now use her experience to help others deal with cyber bullying and online violations of privacy.

â... Having survived myself, what I want to do now is help other victims of the shame game survive too,â... she said.

In her speech, Monica recounted the story of the late Tyler Clementi, saying â... Anyone can be next. One day in 2010, an 18-year-old Rutgers freshman called Tyler Clementi, was next. After his roommate secretly videotape streamed him via Webcam kissing another man, Tyler was derided and ridiculed online. A few days later, submerged in the shame and public humiliation, he jumped from the George Washington Bridge to his death.

That tragedy is one of the principal reasons I am standing up here today. While it touched us both, my mother was unusually upset by the story and I wondered why. Eventually it dawned on me: she was back in 1998, back to a time when I was periodically suicidal; when she might very easily have lost me; when I, too, might have been humiliated to death.â€¦

oohh stfu Monica Lewinsky there are consequences when you diddle with married men. you donâ€¦ t get to claim â€¦ 1st victim of Internet bullyingâ€¦

â€¦ Criminelle Law (@CriminelleLaw) October 21, 2014

When it comes to recent statistics related to cyber bullying deaths. Monica Said â€¦ Of the cyberbullying related suicides in the last decade, 43% have occurred since Tyler sadly jumped from that bridge (2010). And thatâ€¦ s not even including stats for last year (2013). Among young Facebook users, close to 54% say theyâ€¦ ve been cyberbullied. One in 5 (college students) report being victims of cyberbullying; 1 in 4 for young women.â€¦

Agree with what Monica Lewinsky did or didnâ€¦ t do in the years between 1995 and 1998, that is your call. But you need to support what she is trying to do so that no one suffers the sense of alienation and shaming that she has. We donâ€¦ t want another cyber bullying related suicide on our hands because as Monica put it â€¦ It takes a lifetime to build a good reputation but you can lose it in a minute. Thatâ€¦ s never been more true than today.â€¦

â€¦ Lauren Luxenburg (@LaurenC_Lux) October 20, 2014

â€¦ But having survived myself, what I want to do now is help other victims of the shame game survive too. I want to put my suffering to good use and give purpose to my past.â€¦ Who are we to disagree, letâ€¦ s put the past to the past and help todayâ€¦ s generation live shame free.

Harvey Weinstein's Army of Spies

The film executive hired private investigators, including ex-Mossad agents, to track actresses and journalists.

In the fall of 2016, Harvey Weinstein set out to suppress allegations that he had sexually harassed or assaulted numerous women. He began to hire private security agencies to collect information on the women and the journalists trying to expose the allegations. According to dozens of pages of documents, and seven people directly involved in the effort, the firms that Weinstein hired included Kroll, which is one of the world's largest corporate-intelligence companies, and Black Cube, an enterprise run largely by former officers of Mossad and other Israeli intelligence agencies. Black Cube, which has branches in Tel Aviv, London, and Paris, offers its clients the skills of operatives who are highly experienced and trained in Israel's elite military and governmental intelligence units, according to its literature.

Two private investigators from Black Cube, using false identities, met with the actress Rose McGowan, who eventually publicly accused Weinstein of rape, to extract information from her. One of the investigators pretended to be a women's-rights advocate and secretly recorded at least four meetings with McGowan. The same operative, using a different false identity and implying that she had an allegation against Weinstein, met twice with a journalist to find out which women were talking to the press. In other cases, journalists directed by Weinstein or the private investigators interviewed women and reported back the details.

The explicit goal of the investigations, laid out in one contract with Black Cube, signed in July, was to stop the publication of the abuse allegations against Weinstein that eventually emerged in the New York Times and The New Yorker. Over the course of a year, Weinstein had the agencies target, or collect information on, dozens of individuals, and compile psychological profiles that sometimes focussed on their personal or sexual histories. Weinstein monitored the progress of the investigations personally. He also enlisted former employees from his film enterprises to join in the effort, collecting names and placing calls that, according to some sources who received them, felt intimidating.

In some cases, the investigative effort was run through Weinstein's lawyers, including David Boies, a celebrated attorney who represented Al Gore in the 2000 Presidential-election dispute and argued for marriage equality before the U.S. Supreme Court. Boies personally signed the contract directing Black Cube to attempt to uncover information that would stop the publication of a Times story about Weinstein's abuses, while his firm was also representing the Times, including in a libel case.

Boies confirmed that his firm contracted with and paid two of the agencies and that investigators from one of them sent him reports, which were then passed on to Weinstein. He said that he did not select the firms or direct the investigators' work. He also denied that the work regarding the Times story represented a conflict of interest. Boies said that his firm's involvement with the investigators was a mistake. "We should not have been contracting with and paying investigators that we did not select and direct," he told me. "At the time, it seemed a reasonable accommodation for a client, but it was not thought through, and that was my mistake. It was a mistake at the time."

Techniques like the ones used by the agencies on Weinstein's behalf are almost always kept secret, and, because such relationships are often run through law firms, the investigations are theoretically protected by attorney-client privilege, which could prevent them from being disclosed in court. The documents and sources reveal the tools and tactics available to powerful individuals to suppress negative stories and, in some cases, forestall criminal investigations.

In a statement, Weinstein's spokesperson, Sallie Hofmeister, said, "It is a fiction to suggest that any individuals were targeted or suppressed at any time."

In May, 2017, McGowan received an e-mail from a literary agency introducing her to a woman who identified herself as Diana Filip, the deputy head of sustainable and responsible investments at Reuben Capital Partners, a London-based wealth-management firm. Filip told McGowan that she was launching an initiative to combat discrimination against women in the workplace, and asked McGowan, a vocal women's-rights advocate, to speak at a gala kickoff event later that year. Filip offered McGowan a fee of sixty thousand dollars. I understand that we have a lot in common," Filip wrote to McGowan before their first meeting, in May, at the Peninsula Hotel in Beverly Hills. Filip had a U.K. cell-phone number, and she spoke with what McGowan took to be a German accent. Over the following months, the two women met at least three more times at hotel bars in Los Angeles and New York and other locations. I took her to the Venice boardwalk and we had ice cream while we strolled," McGowan told me, adding that Filip was "very kind." The two talked at length about issues relating to women's empowerment. Filip also repeatedly told McGowan that she wanted to make a significant investment in McGowan's production company.

Filip was persistent. In one e-mail, she suggested meeting in Los Angeles and then, when McGowan said she would be in New York, Filip said she could meet there just as easily. She also began pressing McGowan for information. In a conversation in July, McGowan revealed to Filip that she had spoken to me as part of my reporting on Weinstein. A week later, I received an e-mail from Filip asking for a meeting and suggesting that I join her campaign to end professional discrimination against women. "I am very impressed with your work as a male advocate for gender equality, and believe that you would make an invaluable addition to our activities," she wrote, using her wealth-management firm's e-mail address. Unsure of who she was, I did not respond.

Filip continued to meet with McGowan. In one meeting in September, Filip was joined by another Black Cube operative, who used the name Paul and claimed to be a colleague at Reuben Capital Partners. The goal, according to two sources with knowledge of the effort, was to pass McGowan to another operative to extract more information. On October 10th, the day The New Yorker published my story about Weinstein, Filip reached out to McGowan in an e-mail. "Hi Love," she wrote. "How are you feeling? . . . Just wanted to tell you how brave I think you are." She signed off with an "xx." Filip e-mailed McGowan as recently as October 23rd.

In fact, "Diana Filip" was an alias for a former officer in the Israeli Defense Forces who originally hailed from Eastern Europe and was working for Black Cube, according to three individuals with knowledge of the situation. When I sent McGowan photos of the Black Cube agent, she recognized her instantly. "Oh my God," she wrote back. "Reuben Capital. Diana Filip. No fucking way."

Ben Wallace, a reporter at New York who was pursuing a story on Weinstein, said that the same woman met with him twice last fall. She identified herself only as Anna and suggested that she had an allegation against Weinstein. When I presented Wallace with the same photographs of Black Cube's undercover operative, Wallace recalled her vividly. "That's her," he said. Like McGowan, Wallace said that the woman had what he assumed to be a German accent, as well as a U.K. cell-phone number. Wallace told me that Anna first contacted him on October 28, 2016, when he had been working on the Weinstein story for about a month and a half. Anna declined to disclose who had given her Wallace's information. Over the course of the two meetings, Wallace grew increasingly suspicious of her motives. Anna seemed to be pushing him for information, he recalled, â... about the status and scope of my inquiry, and about who I might be talking to, without giving me any meaningful help or information.â... During their second meeting, Anna requested that they sit close together, leading Wallace to suspect that she might be recording the exchange. When she recounted her experiences with Weinstein, Wallace said, â... it seemed like soap-opera acting.â... Wallace wasnâ... t the only journalist the woman contacted. In addition to her e-mails to me, Filip also e-mailed Jodi Kantor, of the Times, according to sources involved in the effort.

The U.K. cell-phone numbers that Filip provided to Wallace and McGowan have been disconnected. Calls to Reuben Capital Partnersâ... number in London went unanswered. As recently as Friday, the firm had a bare-bones Web site, with stock photos and generic text passages about asset management and an initiative called Women in Focus. The site, which has now been taken down, listed an address near Piccadilly Circus, operated by a company specializing in shared office space. That company said that it had never heard of Reuben Capital Partners. Two sources with knowledge of Weinsteinâ... s work with Black Cube said that the firm creates fictional companies to provide cover for its operatives, and that Filipâ... s firm was one of them.

Black Cube declined to comment on the specifics of any work it did for Weinstein. The agency said in a statement, â... It is Black Cubeâ... s policy to never discuss its clients with any third party, and to never confirm or deny any speculation made with regard to the companyâ... s work. Black Cube supports the work of many leading law firms around the world, especially in the US, gathering evidence for complex legal processes, involving commercial disputes, among them uncovering negative campaigns. . . . It should be highlighted that Black Cube applies high moral standards to its work, and operates in full compliance with the law of any jurisdiction in which it operatesâ... strictly following the guidance and legal opinions provided by leading law firms from around the world.â... The contract with the firm also specified that all of its work would be obtained â... by legal means and in compliance with all applicable laws and regulations.â...

Last fall, Weinstein began mentioning Black Cube by name in conversations with his associates and attorneys. The agency had made a name for itself digging up information for companies in Israel, Europe, and the U.S. that led to successful legal judgments against business rivals. But the firm has also faced legal questions about its employeesâ... use of fake identities and other tactics. Last year, two of its investigators were arrested in Romania on hacking charges. In the end, the company reached an agreement with the Romanian authorities, under which the operatives admitted to hacking and were released. Two sources familiar with the agency defended its decision to work for Weinstein, saying that they originally believed that the assignment focussed on his business rivals. But even the earliest lists of names that Weinstein provided to Black Cube included actresses and journalists.

On October 28, 2016, Boiesâ... s law firm, Boies Schiller Flexner, wired to Black Cube the first hundred thousand dollars, toward what would ultimately be a six-hundred-thousand-dollar invoice. (The documents do not make clear how much of the invoice was paid.) The law firm and Black Cube signed a contract that month and several others later. One, dated July 11, 2017, and bearing Boiesâ... s signature, states that the projectâ... s â... primary objectivesâ... are to â... provide intelligence which will help the Clientâ... s efforts to completely stop the publication of a new negative article in a leading NY newspaperâ... and to â... obtain additional content of a book which currently being written and includes harmful negative information on and about the Client,â... who is identified as Weinstein in multiple documents. (In one e-mail, a Black Cube executive asks lawyers retained by the agency to refer to Weinstein as â... the end clientâ... or â... Mr. X,â... noting that referring to him by name â... will make him extremely angry.â... ) The article mentioned in the contract was, according to three sources, the story that ultimately ran in the Times on October 5th. The book was â... Brave,â... a memoir by McGowan, scheduled for publication by HarperCollins in January. The documents show that, in the end, the agency delivered to Weinstein more than a hundred pages of transcripts and descriptions of the book, based on tens of hours of recorded conversations between McGowan and the female private investigator.

The contract between a private security firm and one of Harvey Weinstein's lawyers.

Weinstein's spokesperson, Hofmeister, called the assertion that Mr. Weinstein secured any portion of a book . . . false and among the many inaccuracies and wild conspiracy theories promoted in this article.

The July agreement included several success fees if Black Cube met its goals. The firm would receive an additional three hundred thousand dollars if the agency provides intelligence which will directly contribute to the efforts to completely stop the Article from being published at all in any shape or form. Black Cube would also be paid fifty thousand dollars if it secured the other half of McGowan's book in readable book and legally admissible format.

The contracts also show some of the techniques that Black Cube employs. The agency promised a dedicated team of expert intelligence officers that will operate in the USA and any other necessary country, including a project manager, intelligence analysts, linguists, and Avatar Operators specifically hired to create fake identities on social media, as well as operations experts with extensive experience in social engineering. The agency also said that it would provide a full time agent by the name of Anna (hereinafter the Agent), who will be based in New York and Los Angeles as per the Client's instructions and who will be available full time to assist the Client and his attorneys for the next four months. Four sources with knowledge of Weinstein's work with Black Cube confirmed that this was the same woman who met with McGowan and Wallace.

Black Cube also agreed to hire an investigative journalist, as per the Client request, who would be required to conduct ten interviews a month for four months and be paid forty thousand dollars. Black Cube agreed to promptly report to the Client the results of such interviews by the Journalist.

In January, 2017, a freelance journalist called McGowan and had a lengthy conversation with her that he recorded without telling her; he subsequently communicated with Black Cube about the interviews, though he denied he was reporting back to them in a formal capacity. He contacted at least two other women with allegations against Weinstein, including the actress Annabella Sciorra, who later went public in The New Yorker with a rape allegation against Weinstein. Sciorra, whom he called in August, said that she found the conversation suspicious and got off the phone as quickly as possible. It struck me as B.S., she told me. And it scared me that Harvey was testing to see if I would talk. The freelancer also placed calls to Wallace, the New York reporter, and to me.

Two sources close to the effort and several documents show that the same freelancer received contact information for actresses, journalists, and business rivals of Weinstein from Black Cube, and that the agency ultimately passed summaries of those interviews to Weinstein's lawyers. When contacted about his role, the freelancer, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that he had been working on his own story about Weinstein, using contact information fed to him by Black Cube. The freelancer said that he reached out to other reporters, one of whom used material from his interviews, in the hopes of helping to expose Weinstein. He denied that he was paid by Black Cube or Weinstein.

Weinstein also enlisted other journalists to uncover information that he could use to undermine women with allegations. A December, 2016, e-mail exchange between Weinstein and Dylan Howard, the chief content officer of American Media Inc., which publishes the National Enquirer, shows that Howard shared with Weinstein material obtained by one of his reporters, as part of an effort to help Weinstein disprove McGowan's allegation of rape. In one e-mail, Howard sent Weinstein a list of contacts. Let's discuss next steps on each, he wrote. After Weinstein thanked him, Howard described a call that one of his reporters made to Elizabeth Avellan, the ex-wife of the director Robert Rodriguez, whom Rodriguez left to have a relationship with McGowan.

Avellan told me that she remembered the interview. Howardâ... s reporter â... kept calling and calling and calling,â... she said, and also contacted others close to her. Avellan finally called back, because â... I was afraid people might start calling my kids.â... In a long phone call, the reporter pressed her for unflattering statements about McGowan. She insisted that the call be off the record, and the reporter agreed. The reporter recorded the call, and subsequently passed the audio to Howard.

In subsequent e-mails to Weinstein, Howard said, â... I have something AMAZING . . . eventually she laid into Rose pretty hard.â... Weinstein replied, â... This is the killer. Especially if my fingerprints r not on this.â... Howard then reassured Weinstein, â... They are not. And the conversation . . . is RECORDED.â... The next day, Howard added, in another e-mail, â... Audio file to follow.â... (Howard denied sending the audio to Weinstein.) Avellan told me that she would not have agreed to coÃ¶perate in efforts to discredit McGowan. â... I donâ... t want to shame people,â... she said. â... I wasnâ... t interested. Women should stand together.â...

In a statement, Howard said that, in addition to his role as the chief content officer at American Media Inc., the *National Enquirer*â... s publisher, he oversaw a television-production agreement with Weinstein, which has since been terminated. He said that, at the time of the e-mails, â... absent a corporate decision to terminate the agreement with The Weinstein Company, I had an obligation to protect AMIâ... s interests by seeking outâ... but not publishingâ... truthful information about people who Mr. Weinstein insisted were making false claims against him. To the extent I provided â... off the recordâ... information to Mr. Weinstein about one of his accusersâ... at a time when Mr. Weinstein was denying any harassment of any womanâ... it was information which I would never have allowed AMI to publish on the internet or in its magazines.â... Although at least one of Howardâ... s reporters made calls related to Weinsteinâ... s investigations, Howard insisted that he strictly divided his work with Weinstein from his work as a journalist. â... I always separated those two roles carefully and completelyâ... and resisted Mr. Weinsteinâ... s repeated efforts to have AMI titles publish favorable stories about him or negative articles about his accusers,â... Howard said. An A.M.I. representative noted that, at the time, Weinstein insisted that the encounter was consensual, and that the allegations were untrue.

Hofmeister, Weinsteinâ... s spokesperson, added, â... In regard to Mr. Howard, he has served as the point person for American Mediaâ... s long-standing business relationship with The Weinstein Company. Earlier this year, Mr. Weinstein gave Mr. Howard a news tip that Mr. Howard agreed might make a good story. Mr. Howard pursued the tip and followed up with Mr. Weinstein as a courtesy, but declined to publish any story.â...

Weinsteinâ... s relationship with Kroll, one of the other agencies he contracted with, dates back years. After Ambra Battilana Gutierrez, an Italian model, accused Weinstein of sexually assaulting her, in 2015, she reached a settlement with Weinstein that required her to surrender all her personal devices to Kroll, so that they could be wiped of evidence of a conversation in which Weinstein admitted to groping her. A recording of that exchange, captured during a police sting operation, was released by The New Yorker last month.

During the more recent effort to shut down emerging stories, Kroll again played a central role. E-mails show that Dan Karson, the chairman of Kroll Americasâ... Investigations and Disputes practice, contacted Weinstein at his personal e-mail address with information about women with allegations. In one October, 2016, e-mail, Karson sent Weinstein eleven photographs of McGowan and Weinstein together at different events in the years after he allegedly assaulted her. Three hours later, Weinstein forwarded Karsonâ... s e-mail to Boies and Weinsteinâ... s criminal-defense attorney, Blair Berk, and told them to â... scroll thru the extra ones.â... The next morning, Berk replied that one photo, which showed McGowan warmly talking with Weinstein, â... is the money shot.â...

Berk defended her actions. â... Any criminal-defense lawyer worth her salt would investigate unproven allegations to determine if they are credible,â... she said. â... And it would be dereliction of duty not to conduct a public-records search for photographs of the accuser embracing the accused taken after the time of the alleged assault.â€¦

Another firm, the Los Angeles-based psops, and its lead private investigator, Jack Palladino, as well as another one of its investigators, Sara Ness, produced detailed profiles of various individuals in the saga, sometimes of a personal nature, which included information that could be used to undermine their credibility. One report on McGowan that Ness sent to Weinstein last December ran for more than a hundred pages and featured McGowan's address and other personal information, along with sections labelled 'Lies/Exaggerations/Contradictions,' 'Hypocrisy,' and 'Potential Negative Character Wits,' an apparent abbreviation of 'witnesses.' One subhead read 'Past Lovers.' The section included details of acrimonious breakups, mentioning Avellan, and discussed Facebook posts expressing negative sentiments about McGowan. (Palladino and Ness did not respond to multiple requests for comment.)

Other firms were also involved in assembling such profiles, including ones that focussed on factors that, in theory, might make women likely to speak out against sexual abuse. One of the other firm's profiles was of Rosanna Arquette, an actress who later, in The New Yorker, accused Weinstein of sexual harassment. The file mentions Arquette's friendship with McGowan, social-media posts about sexual abuse, and the fact that a family member had gone public with an allegation that she had been molested as a child.

All of the security firms that Weinstein hired were also involved in trying to ferret out reporters' sources and probe their backgrounds. Wallace, the reporter for New York, said that he was suspicious when he received the call from the Black Cube operative using the pseudonym Anna, because Weinstein had already requested a meeting with Wallace; Adam Moss, the editor-in-chief of New York; David Boies; and a representative from Kroll. The intention, Wallace assumed, was to 'come in with dossiers slugging various women and me.' Moss declined the meeting.

In a series of e-mails sent in the weeks before Wallace received the call from Anna, Dan Karson, of Kroll, sent Weinstein preliminary background information on Wallace and Moss. 'No adverse information about Adam Moss so far (no libel/defamation cases, no court records or judgments/liens/UCC, etc.),' Karson wrote in one e-mail. Two months later, Palladino, the psops investigator, sent Weinstein a detailed profile of Moss. It stated, 'Our research did not yield any promising avenues for the personal impeachment of Moss.'

Similar e-mail exchanges occurred regarding Wallace. Kroll sent Weinstein a list of public criticisms of Wallace's previous reporting and a detailed description of a U.K. libel suit filed in response to a book he wrote, in 2008, about the rare-wine market. psops also profiled Wallace's ex-wife, noting that she 'might prove relevant to considerations of our response strategy when Wallace's article on our client is finally published.'

In January, 2017, Wallace, Moss, and other editors at New York decided to shelve the story. Wallace had assembled a detailed list of women with allegations, but he lacked on-the-record statements from any victims. Wallace said that the decision not to run a story was made for legitimate journalistic reasons. Nevertheless, he said, 'There was much more static and distraction than I've encountered on any other story.'

Other reporters were investigated as well. In April, 2017, Ness, of psops, sent Weinstein an assessment of my own interactions with 'persons of interest,' a list largely consisting of women with allegations, or those connected to them. Later, psops submitted a detailed report focussing jointly on me and Jodi Kantor, of the Times. Some of the observations in the report are mundane. 'Kantor is NOT following Ronan Farrow,' it notes, referring to relationships on Twitter. At other times, the report reflects a detailed effort to uncover sources. One individual I interviewed, and another whom Kantor spoke to in her separate endeavor, were listed as having reported the details of the conversations back to Weinstein.

For years, Weinstein had used private security agencies to investigate reporters. In the early aughts, as the journalist David Carr, who died in 2015, worked on a report on Weinstein for New York, Weinstein assigned Kroll to dig up unflattering information about him, according to a source close to the matter. Carrâ... s widow, Jill Rooney Carr, told me that her husband believed that he was being surveilled, though he didnâ... t know by whom. â... He thought he was being followed,â... she recalled. In one document, Weinsteinâ... s investigators wrote that Carr had learned of McGowanâ... s allegation in the course of his reporting. Carr â... wrote a number of critical/unflattering articles about HW over the years,â... the document says, â... none of which touched on the topic of women (due to fear of HWâ... s retaliation, according to HW).â...

Weinsteinâ... s relationships with the private investigators were often routed through law firms that represented him. This is designed to place investigative materials under the aegis of attorney-client privilege, which can prevent the disclosure of communications, even in court.

David Boies, who was involved in the relationships with Black Cube and psops, was initially reluctant to speak with The New Yorker, out of concern that he might be â... misinterpreted either as trying to deny or minimize mistakes that were made, or as agreeing with criticisms that I donâ... t agree are valid.â...

But Boies did feel the need to respond to what he considered â... fair and importantâ... questions about his hiring of investigators. He said that he did not consider the contractual provisions directing Black Cube to stop the publication of the Times story to be a conflict of interest, because his firm was also representing the newspaper in a libel suit. From the beginning, he said, he advised Weinstein â... that the story could not be stopped by threats or influence and that the only way the story could be stopped was by convincing the Times that there was no rape.â... Boies told me he never pressured any news outlet. â... If evidence could be uncovered to convince the Times the charges should not be published, I did not believe, and do not believe, that that would be averse to the *Times*â... interest.â...

He conceded, however, that any efforts to profile and undermine reporters, at the Times and elsewhere, were problematic. â... In general, I donâ... t think itâ... s appropriate to try to pressure reporters,â... he said. â... If that did happen here, it would not have been appropriate.â...

Although the agencies paid by his firm focussed on many women with allegations, Boies said that he had only been aware of their work related to McGowan, whose allegations Weinstein denied. â... Given what was known at the time, I thought it was entirely appropriate to investigate precisely what he was accused of doing, and to investigate whether there were facts that would rebut those accusations,â... he said.

Of his representation of Weinstein in general, he said, â... I donâ... t believe former lawyers should criticize former clients.â... But he expressed regrets. â... Although he vigorously denies using physical force, Mr. Weinstein has himself recognized that his contact with women was indefensible and incredibly hurtful,â... Boies told me. â... In retrospect, I knew enough in 2015 that I believe I should have been on notice of a problem, and done something about it. I donâ... t know what, if anything, happened after 2015, but to the extent it did, I think I have some responsibility. I also think that if people had taken action earlier it would have been better for Mr. Weinstein.â...

Weinstein also drafted individuals around him into his effortsâ... willingly and not. In December, 2016, Weinstein asked the actress Asia Argento, who ultimately went public in The New Yorker with her allegation of rape against Weinstein, to meet in Italy with his private investigators to give testimony on his behalf. Argento, who felt pressure to say yes, declined after her partner, the chef and television personality Anthony Bourdain, advised her to avoid the meeting. Another actress, who declined to be named in this story, said that Weinstein asked her to meet with reporters to extract information about other sources.

Weinstein also enlisted two former employees, Denise Doyle Chambers and Pamela Lubell, in what turned out to be an effort to identify and call people who might speak to the press about their own, or othersâ... , allegations. Weinstein secretly shared the lists they compiled with Black Cube.

Hofmeister, speaking on Weinstein's behalf, said, "Any lists that were prepared included names of former employees and others who were relevant to the research and preparation of a book about Miramax. Former employees conducting interviews for the book reported receiving unwanted contacts from the media."

Doyle Chambers declined an interview request. But Lubell, a producer who worked for Weinstein at Miramax decades ago, told me that she was manipulated into participating. In July, 2017, Lubell visited Weinstein's offices to pitch him on an app that she was developing. In the middle of the meeting, Weinstein asked Lubell if they could have a private conversation in his office. Lubell told me that a lawyer working with Weinstein was already there, along with Doyle Chambers. Weinstein asked if Lubell and Doyle Chambers could write a "fun book on the old times, the heyday, of Miramax." Pam, she recalled him saying, "write down all the employees that you know, and can you get in touch with them?"

A few weeks later, in August, after they had made the list, Weinstein "called us back into the office," Lubell recalled. "And he said, 'You know what, we're going to put a hold on the book.' He asked Doyle Chambers and Lubell to 'call some of your friends from the list and see if they got calls from the press.' In early September, Weinstein summoned Lubell and Doyle Chambers to his office and asked them to start making calls to people connected to several actresses. It got kind of intense," Lubell recalled. "We didn't know these people, and all of a sudden this was something very different from what we signed up for. Several of the targeted women said that they felt the calls they received from Lubell and Doyle Chambers, and from Weinstein himself, were frightening."

Lubell told me that hours before the first Times story broke, on October 5th, Weinstein summoned her, Doyle Chambers, and others on his team, including the attorney Lisa Bloom, who has since resigned, to his office. "He was in a panic," Lubell recalled. "He starts screaming, 'Get so-and-so on the phone.' After the story was published, the team scrambled to respond to it. Bloom and others pored over pictures that, like the ones featured in the Kroll e-mails, showed ongoing contact between Weinstein and women who made allegations. He was screaming at us, 'Send these to the board members,'" Lubell recalled. She e-mailed the photographs to the board ahead of the crisis meeting at which Weinstein's position at his company began unravelling.

Since the allegations against Weinstein became public, Lubell hasn't slept well. She told me that, although she knew that Weinstein "was a bully and a cheater," she "never thought he was a predator." Lubell has wondered if she should have known more, sooner.

After a year of concerted effort, Weinstein's campaign to track and silence his accusers crumbled. Several of the women targeted, however, said that Weinstein's use of private security agencies deepened the challenge of speaking out. "It scared me," Sciorra said, "because I knew what it meant to be threatened by Harvey. I was in fear of him finding me." McGowan said that the agencies and law firms enabled Weinstein's behavior. As she was targeted, she felt a growing sense of paranoia. "It was like the movie Gaslight," she told me. "Everyone lied to me all the time. For the past year, she said, 'I've lived inside a mirrored fun house.'"

ATTACKS AGAINST DNC WITNESSES

RICO Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act demand for co-operative filing of RICO charges in association with The U.S. Department of Justice

WHEREAS, public officials and investigators have provided proof of RICO violations to all parties with jurisdiction in these charges.

WHEREAS the publication known as THE INTERCEPT is funded by Gawker Media... s backers and that publication has published the following overview which describes in detail the methods used by Defendants against Plaintiffs:

â... One of the many pressing stories that remains to be told from the Snowden archive is how western intelligence agencies are attempting to manipulate and control online discourse with extreme tactics of deception and reputation-destruction. Itâ... s time to tell a chunk of that story, complete with the relevant documents.

Over the last several weeks, I worked with NBC News to publish a series of articles about â... dirty trickâ... tactics used by GCHQâ... s previously secret unit, JTRIG (Joint Threat Research Intelligence Group). These were based on four classified GCHO documents presented to the NSA and the other three partners in the English-speaking â... Five Eyesâ... alliance. Today, we at the Intercept are publishing another new JTRIG document, in full, entitled â... The Art of Deception: Training for Online Covert Operations.â...

By publishing these stories one by one, our NBC reporting highlighted some of the key, discrete revelations: the monitoring of YouTube and Blogger, the targeting of Anonymous with the very same DDoS attacks they accuse â... hacktivistsâ... of using, the use of â... honey trapsâ... (luring people into compromising situations using sex) and destructive viruses. But, here, I want to focus and elaborate on the overarching point revealed by all of these documents: namely, that these agencies are attempting to control, infiltrate, manipulate, and warp online discourse, and in doing so, are compromising the integrity of the internet itself.

Among the core self-identified purposes of JTRIG are two tactics: (1) to inject all sorts of false material onto the internet in order to destroy the reputation of its targets; and (2) to use social sciences and other techniques to manipulate online discourse and activism to generate outcomes it considers desirable. To see how extremist these programs are, just consider the tactics they boast of using to achieve those ends: â... false flag operationsâ... (posting material to the internet and falsely attributing it to someone else), fake victim blog posts (pretending to be a victim of the individual whose reputation they want to destroy), and posting â... negative informationâ... on various forums. Here is one illustrative list of tactics from the latest GCHQ document weâ... re publishing today:

Other tactics aimed at individuals are listed here, under the revealing title â... discredit a targetâ... :

Then there are the tactics used to destroy companies the agency targets:

- Leak confidential information to companies / the press via blogs etc
- Post negative information on appropriate forums
- Stop deals / ruin business relationships

TOP SECRET//COMINT//REL TO USA, AUS, CAN, GBR, NZL

GCHQ describes the purpose of JTRIG in starkly clear terms: “... using online techniques to make something happen in the real or cyber world,”... including “... information ops (influence or disruption).”...

- “Using online techniques to make something happen in the real or cyber world”
- Two broad categories:
  - Information Ops (influence or disruption)
  - Technical disruption
- Known in GCHQ as Online Covert Action
- The 4 D's: Deny / Disrupt / Degrade / Deceive

TOP SECRET//COMINT//REL TO USA, AUS, CAN, GBR, NZL

Critically, the â... targetsâ... for this deceit and reputation-destruction extend far beyond the customary roster of normal spycraft: hostile nations and their leaders, military agencies, and intelligence services. In fact, the discussion of many of these techniques occurs in the context of using them in lieu of â... traditional law enforcementâ... against people suspected (but not charged or convicted) of ordinary crimes or, more broadly still, â... hacktivismâ... , meaning those who use online protest activity for political ends.

The title page of one of these documents reflects the agencyâ... s own awareness that it is â... pushing the boundariesâ... by using â... cyber offensiveâ... techniques against people who have nothing to do with terrorism or national security threats, and indeed, centrally involves law enforcement agents who investigate ordinary crimes:

No matter your views on Anonymous, â... hacktivistsâ... or garden-variety criminals, it is not difficult to see how dangerous it is to have secret government agencies being able to target any individuals they want â... who have never been charged with, let alone convicted of, any crimes â... with these sorts of online, deception-based tactics of reputation destruction and disruption. There is a strong argument to make, as Jay Leiderman demonstrated in the Guardian in the context of the Paypal 14 hacktivist persecution, that the â... denial of serviceâ... tactics used by hacktivists result in (at most) trivial damage (far less than the cyber-warfare tactics favored by the US and UK) and are far more akin to the type of political protest protected by the First Amendment.

crimes, and even though their actions have no conceivable connection to terrorism or even national security threats. As Anonymous expert Gabriella Coleman of McGill University told me, “... targeting Anonymous and hacktivists amounts to targeting citizens for expressing their political beliefs, resulting in the stifling of legitimate dissent.”... Pointing to this study she published, Professor Coleman vehemently contested the assertion that “... there is anything terrorist/violent in their actions.”...

Government plans to monitor and influence internet communications, and covertly infiltrate online communities in order to sow dissension and disseminate false information, have long been the source of speculation. Harvard Law Professor Cass Sunstein, a close Obama adviser and the White House’s former head of the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, wrote a controversial paper in 2008 proposing that the US government employ teams of covert agents and pseudo-“... independent”... advocates to “... cognitively infiltrate”... online groups and websites, as well as other activist groups.

Sunstein also proposed sending covert agents into “... chat rooms, online social networks, or even real-space groups”... which spread what he views as false and damaging “... conspiracy theories”... about the government. Ironically, the very same Sunstein was recently named by Obama to serve as a member of the NSA review panel created by the White House, one that “... while disputing key NSA claims “... proceeded to propose many cosmetic reforms to the agency’s powers (most of which were ignored by the President who appointed them).

But these GCHQ documents are the first to prove that a major western government is using some of the most controversial techniques to disseminate deception online and harm the reputations of targets. Under the tactics they use, the state is deliberately spreading lies on the internet about whichever individuals it targets, including the use of what GCHQ itself calls “... false flag operations”... and emails to people’s families and friends. Who would possibly trust a government to exercise these powers at all, let alone do so in secret, with virtually no oversight, and outside of any cognizable legal framework?

Then there is the use of psychology and other social sciences to not only understand, but shape and control, how online activism and discourse unfolds. Today’s newly published document touts the work of GCHQ’s “... Human Science Operations Cell,”... devoted to “... online human intelligence”... and “... strategic influence and disruption”... :

SECRET//SI//REL TO USA, FVEY

We submitted numerous questions to GCHQ, including: (1) Does GCHQ in fact engage in â... false flag operationsâ... where material is posted to the Internet and falsely attributed to someone else?; (2) Does GCHQ engage in efforts to influence or manipulate political discourse online?; and (3) Does GCHQâ... s mandate include targeting common criminals (such as boiler room operators), or only foreign threats?

As usual, they ignored those questions and opted instead to send their vague and nonresponsive boilerplate: â... It is a longstanding policy that we do not comment on intelligence matters. Furthermore, all of GCHQâ... s work is carried out in accordance with a strict legal and policy framework which ensures that our activities are authorised, necessary and proportionate, and that there is rigorous oversight, including from the Secretary of State, the Interception and Intelligence Services Commissioners and the Parliamentary Intelligence and Security Committee. All our operational processes rigorously support this position.â...

These agenciesâ... refusal to â... comment on intelligence mattersâ... â... meaning: talk at all about anything and everything they do â... is precisely why whistleblowing is so urgent, the journalism that supports it so clearly in the public interest, and the increasingly unhinged attacks by these agencies so easy to understand. Claims that government agencies are infiltrating online communities and engaging in â... false flag operationsâ... to discredit targets are often dismissed as conspiracy theories, but these documents leave no doubt they are doing precisely that.

Whatever else is true, no government should be able to engage in these tactics: what justification is there for having government agencies target people â... who have been charged with no crime â... for reputation-destruction, infiltrate online political communities, and develop techniques for manipulating online discourse? But to allow those actions with no public knowledge or accountability is particularly unjustifiable.

Adrian Covert: Character Assassin and Hired AntiFa Blogger

Adrian Covert advertises himself as a "Character Assassin". He works for Hillary Clinton and Obama campaign financiers, like John Podesta, and for Corrupt White House staff like Robert Gibbs, Jay Carney and David Axelrod. Covert is in charge of media resources for political crony payola kick-back scams using tax payer dollars. These facts are able to be proven before a federal Grand Jury, in FBI 302 Reports and in Congressional hearings. Let's take a look at his illicit, unethical and potentially criminal activities in a 2000+ page background investigation forwarded to the FBI and the U.S. Congress:

- Adrian Covert accepts money, and other remuneration, for his attempts to kill people, who he is hired to destroy, by politicians and corrupt political financiers.
- Adrian Covert has earned an investigation on himself, his associates and his family for the rest of his life, because of his crimes and these attacks on innocent Americans and their businesses.
- Cover also runs â... hit-jobsâ... personally, for the DNCâ... s Elon Musk, George Soros and Eric Schmidt.
- At CNN, Covert helped coordinate the character assassination of Donald Trump in order to help put Hillary Clinton in office. Covert is said, by former Gawker and CNN staff, to be the person who helped convert CNN from a news network to a Fake News Network, often called The Clown News Network. CNN, thanks to Covert and his associated shill bloggers was turned into a propaganda service for Hillary Clinton:

Covert is part of Gawker Media, Gizmodo Media and Univision; who are world famous for their malicious character assassinations on behalf of the DNC and corrupt Silicon Valley campaign finance billionaires.

At CNN Fraud News Network, Covert helps destroy the lives, brands, careers and income of anyone who might expose crimes conducted by the DNC:

"Covert's sexuality is arguable, while he worked for reknown anal sex enthusiast: Nick Denton, along with a cadre of young, emotionally disturbed young men; he also claims to have a "wife". He often bragged, at evening venues, of his chronic masturbation needs, according to some. Peter Theil, a famous gay technologist, put Covert's Gawker Media out of business and Covert was said to be the supplier of the stories that defamed Peter Theil. Possibly Covert will stick his business into any opportunity, no matter the gender or species. Only time will tell." -Taki Magazine Comments

A high net worth victim of Covert's attacks (Possibly Theil) is known to have invested many millions of dollars in private investigators and surveillance services targeting Adrian Covert for his suspected crimes.

Covert's life could be changed in an instant when he is forced into court for his crimes. Covert has caused billions of dollars of damages to individuals and their company revenues, as he intended, with his malicious actions. Covert intended to harm the revenue of others by his actions. Some are trying to force Covert to sue them in order to trick Covert, and his associates, into creating a jury trial that will bypass the dismissal (or demurrer) phase of a trial. In the past, Covert, and his assassin brothers, have tried to get cases against them dismissed before they can reach a jury. Now Covert must allow any cases against him into trial or be forced to put them in trial himself.

Look like Covert is skunked and every asset of his will eventually be taken by the Court. On top of that, every device he owns is under surveillance for life. If he buys a rent-boy, hooker or drugs; it will be recorded!

Alex Jones's company, Free Speech Systems, LLC, has sued PayPal for the its ban of Infowars because the controversial website "promoted hate and discriminatory intolerance against certain communities and religions."

In the complaint filed by Jones's lawyers, Marc Randazza Legal group, they accuse PayPal of banning Infowars "for no other reason than a disagreement with the message plaintiff conveys" and call ban "unconscionable" because PayPal has never advised users that "it might ban users for off-platform activity."

It is at this point well known that large tech companies, located primarily in Silicon Valley, are discriminating against politically conservative entities and individuals, including banning them from social media platforms such as Twitter, based solely on their political and ideological viewpoints. Jones's lawyers claim in the 15-page complaint.

Jones claims PayPal's decision was based purely on viewpoint discrimination. He also says the decision was made based on conduct that had nothing to do with the PayPal platform, which purportedly violates Infowars' contract with the payment-processing giant.

If PayPal's decision were allowed to stand, it would set "a dangerous precedent for any person or entity with controversial views," the lawsuit alleges.

Here's what happened in Jones' own words:

On September 21, 2018, after 18 years of service, and without any prior warning, Defendant PayPal notified Plaintiff in a phone call that, in 10 business days, it would issue a permanent limitation on Plaintiff's PayPal accounts. This limitation will be permanent, and cannot be appealed.

The limitation will prevent Plaintiff from withdrawing, sending, or receiving money through PayPal, effectively preventing it from using the PayPal accounts at all. The loss of the PayPal accounts and future ability to use PayPal will significantly reduce Plaintiff's income in an amount that is not susceptible to calculation, but more importantly PayPal deciding to kick Plaintiff off its platform has harmed the legitimacy of Plaintiff as a news organization in the eyes of the general public and has already led to a loss of good will.

The purported basis for the permanent limitation PayPal provided is that content on the News Sites violated PayPal's so-called Acceptable Use (AU) Policy. Specifically, a PayPal representative stated that, after extensively looking at the News Sites, PayPal determined instances that promoted hate and discriminatory intolerance against certain communities and religions.

The AU Policy provides four categories of â... Prohibited Activities.â... Notably, the prohibited activities only provide that a user â... may not use the PayPal service for activities thatâ... fall into one or more of the categories. Sub-paragraph 2 of the Prohibited Activities section provides that a user may not use PayPal for activities that â... relate to transactions involving . . . (f) the promotion of hate, violence, racial or other forms of intolerance that is discriminatory or the financial exploitation of a crime . . .

These terms are purposely vague, and could conceivably (and unconscionably) be applied to any speech at all, given the opaque manner in which PayPal has applied them. The AU Policy mentions nothing about valuating a userâ... s off-platform activities as the basis for a finding that the user has violated the policy

For those asking, this is how Infowars describes Infowars in the lawsuit:

The News Sites contain content that expresses negative views against politically liberal people, communists, socialists, and religious fanatics. Contributors to the News Sites, including Mr. Jones, have often criticized specific members of political parties, including former President George W. Bush and former candidate Hillary R. Clinton.

On information and belief, it is this highly political content that PayPal claims constitutes a violation of its AU Policy.

Jones accuses "large tech companies" located in Silicon Valley, of "discriminating against politically conservative entities and individuals, including banning them from social media platforms such as Twitter, based solely on their political and ideological viewpoints."

Plaintiff has been the victim of this recently, as it has been banned from various online platforms based solely on the viewpoints expressed on Plaintiffâ... s programming.

Jones also alleges that Paypal banned him from its payment-processing platform "for no reason other than disagreement with the messages Plaintiff conveys. PayPal engaged in this viewpoint-based censorship despite stating that, in determining whether a user violated its acceptable use policy, it would only consider conduct actually involving the use of PayPal. PayPalâ... s decision to kick Plaintiff off its platform had nothing to do with such activities."

While one can claim that PayPal, as a private company, has every right to ban whomever it wants, even if it results in outright discrimination, Jones disagrees and to plead his case invokes the California Unruh Civil Rights Act:

PayPal discriminated against Plaintiff based on its political viewpoints and politically conservative affiliation, thus violating the California Unruh Civil Rights Act. PayPal is engaged in unfair business practices by enforcing its contractual terms in an unconscionable manner, namely arbitrarily banning Plaintiff from its platform for off-platform speech despite never claiming it might ban users for off-platform activity. In doing so, it also violated the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing with Plaintiff.

What is Unruh?

The Unruh Civil Rights Act (â... Unruhâ... ) guarantees that â... all personsâ... are â... entitled to full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, or services in all business establishments of every kind whatsoever.â...

Although the Unruh Act specifically forbids business establishments from discriminating based on sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, genetic information, marital status, sexual orientation, citizenship, primary language, or immigration status, this statutorily enumerated list is illustrative, and not exhaustive, of the characteristics on which business establishments may not discriminate.

Discrimination based on political affiliation or ideology is forbidden under Unruh, as it is a personal characteristic.

So as Jones finds his business impaired as a result of the ban...

PayPal is restraining Plaintiff's commerce because it is politically conservative and sells to a conservative audience. PayPal's actions amount to discrimination based on political viewpoint and affiliation, which is forbidden under Unruh.

... a ban which is not justified based on the acceptable use policy:

The UA provides several examples of situations where PayPal might issue a limitation, including "[i]f we reasonably believe you have violated the Acceptable Use Policy. None of these examples allow PayPal to issue a limitation based on off-platform activity, and all the examples are geared towards activity that involves risky, fraudulent, or illegal financial transactions.

... Jones also throws in allegations of PayPal being a monopoly (which is not too far off) and thus once banned, he is effectively precluded from online commerce.

There is no adequate payment alternative to PayPal for Plaintiff's business model, as PayPal has eliminated competitors and has taken a dominant market position in online payment processing. Having effectively cornered the market, it is now using that market power to restrain conservative trade and commerce.

Defendant's method of enforcing the AU Policy and UA is an unfair business practice under the UCL. It is fundamentally oppressive, unethical, and injurious to customers because it allows PayPal to lie to parties who use its services by claiming that terminations and restrictions due to violations of the AU Policy will be limited to activities that actually use the PayPal service, while in fact looking at the user's off-platform activity.

As a result, "PayPal's actions go far beyond any reasonable interpretation of the language of its policies, and it is apparent that PayPal is using its policies as a pretext to engage in political discrimination without actually saying so."

Jones seeks damages and an injunction to stop PayPal from permanently restricting his account.

For its part, PayPal explained its rationale for banning Infowars in a statement on its website Sept. 21: "We undertook an extensive review of the Infowars sites, and found instances that promoted hate and discriminatory intolerance against certain communities and religions that run counter to our core value of inclusion."

PayPal spokesman Justin Higgins said the company rejects the allegations in Jones's complaint: "PayPal is aware of the filing and believes the claims in the complaint are without merit," Higgins said in an email.

"PayPal looks forward to vigorously defending itself."

Will Jones be successful in getting PayPal to "unban" him? Probably not, but whatever the outcome the case will likely be closely watched by other members of the media, and especially other conservatives, to see if they have any legal claims in similar situations, because for all his other faults, Jones is correct in accusing Silicon Valley of cracking down on the "right" as both Twitter and Google have admitted on various occasions in recent weeks. And since it is the tech companies that are the true mass media of our times, what, if any, legal remedies the general public - or targeted entities - has against them is increasingly becoming a critical question.

Leak investigation that led to Senate aide's indictment puts spotlight on sex starved New York Times reporter

Sarah Ellison and Paul FarhiWashington Post

The first known leak investigation of the Trump administration has put under scrutiny a 20-something New York Times reporter, who enjoyed a meteoric rise through Washington's journalism ranks that began while she was still in college.

Times reporter Ali Watkins hasn't been charged in the Justice Department's investigation of the leak of classified information from the Senate Intelligence Committee. But the revelation late Thursday that the FBI had secretly seized years' worth of Watkins' phone and email records, dating back to when she was a student at Temple University, raised questions about her relationship with the man at the center of the investigation.

Watkins' romantic involvement with former intelligence committee aide James Wolfe â... who was indicted on Thursday â... focused attention on her reporting for such news organizations as McClatchy's Washington bureau, BuzzFeed and Politico.

The news of the seizure of Watkins' records surfaced Thursday when Wolfe, 57, was arrested and charged with lying to investigators about his contacts with three reporters, including Watkins, who is now 26. Wolfe's case is the first known instance of the Justice Department seizing a reporter's data under the Trump administration.

Watkins joined the Times in December, after her relationship with Wolfe had ended. She told the Times about the relationship when she was hired, according to the Times.

But it appears Watkins left previous employers in the dark about her relationship with Wolfe even while she was reporting on the intelligence committee.

Editors at McClatchy said Friday that they were not aware of Watkins' relationship with Wolfe while she was with the news organization's Washington bureau, first as an intern and stretching from mid-2013 to the end of 2014.

During that time, Watkins was part of a team of three reporters that produced a series of stories about the intelligence committee's investigation of the CIA and its "enhanced interrogation" or torture program. The series was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize in national reporting in 2015.

"We were not aware of these allegations that Mr. Wolfe had a relationship with Ali Watkins until the news of the indictment broke," said Tim Grieve, vice president of news for McClatchy.

Grieve, who joined McClatchy after Watkins left the company, said he did not know whether Watkins used Wolfe as a source in her stories. "We need to figure that out," he said. "We just don't know" whether Wolfe provided information to her.

But he added, "It's clearly inappropriate for a reporter to be in a relationship with a source and to be reporting on him."

Watkins did not respond to requests for comment. Wolfe declined to answer reporters' questions after a hearing Friday.

McClatchy's series, which was published throughout 2014, was chockablock with revelations about the internal workings of the intelligence committee. Among other stories in its Pulitzer package were stories headlined, "Senate intelligence panel staffer took secret CIA papers years before agency discovered them missing" and "FBI probing alleged removal of documents from CIA by Senate staffers."

Watkins learned of the seizure of her email and cellphone data in a letter sent from the Department of Justice in February, but she didn't notify the Times of the investigation until Thursday, according to the newspaper. Watkins' reporting for the Times is not part of the leak investigation.

When asked about the delay between Watkins' receipt of the FBI letter and the notification of the Times, Eileen Murphy, a Times spokeswoman, said it was up to Watkins to respond. She added, "We obviously would have preferred to know."

In a follow-up email, Murphy noted that Watkins made the decision not to share the information of her surveillance with the Times after consulting with her attorney. Watkins's attorney, Mark MacDougall, declined to comment.

The story under scrutiny in the Wolfe indictment was written while Watkins worked at BuzzFeed in early 2017. "A former campaign adviser for Donald Trump met with and passed documents to a Russian intelligence operative in New York City in 2013," the story began. The indictment of Wolfe noted that the investigation sought to learn how Watkins had learned that Russian spies had tried to recruit the former adviser, Carter Page.

The indictment notes the relationship between Wolfe and Watkins between 2014 and 2017 involved the exchange of "tens of thousands of electronic communications, often including daily texts and phone calls, and they frequently met in person at a variety of locations including Hart Senate Office Building stairwells, restaurants, and [the reporter's] apartment."

Ben Smith, the editor of BuzzFeed News, praised Watkins as a reporter. "The way the indictment is written is clearly aimed at launching a disgusting smear of a reporter, and it has had that effect," he said.

Smith also tweeted his concern about the Justice Department's investigation: "We are deeply troubled by what looks like a case of law enforcement interfering with a reporter's constitutional right to gather information about her own government," he wrote.

Watkins has had a stunning rise through the ranks of Washington news organizations and developed a track record of breaking stories. Even before her graduation from Temple in 2014, she was involved in McClatchy's reporting on the intelligence committee.

A spokesman for Politico, which Watkins joined in May of last year and left in December, said she didn't disclose her relationship with Watkins when she was hired. Upon learning of the relationship a month into her tenure, she was "managed accordingly," the spokesman said, meaning she was kept from reporting any stories involving the committee.

Watkins covered national security and law enforcement for Politico, including topics relating to China, international espionage and Cuba.

Matthew Miller, the former chief spokesman for the Department of Justice under attorney General Eric Holder Jr., who had dramatically increased the number of leak investigations over prior administrations, said the department "went too far," in leak investigations, but that Holder then "put safeguards in place to prevent this from happening, except in the most exceptional cases."

The DOJ, under its own guidelines, is to exhaust all other means of obtaining information before seizing a reporter's phone and email records. "It's hard to imagine that the Justice Department did that in this case," Miller said.

Jameel Jaffer, executive director of the Knight First Amendment Institute at Columbia University, said in a statement: "Government surveillance of a reporter's communications would be concerning under any circumstances, but it is especially so here. It is unclear whether the government exhausted other options before seizing Watkins' phone and email records. It's also not apparent why it was necessary to collect years' worth of sensitive information. Finally, there is a question whether Watkins was notified in a timely way of the surveillance. It is thus unclear whether the search complied even with the Justice Department's own guidelines relating to surveillance of the media."

By Rowan Scarborough - The Washington Times - Wednesday, December 12, 2018

British ex-spy Christopher Steele, who wrote the Democrat-financed anti-Trump dossier, said in a court case that he was hired by a Democratic law firm in preparation for Hillary Clinton challenging the results of the 2016 presidential election.

He said the law firm Perkins Coie wanted to be in a position to contest the results based on evidence he unearthed on the Trump campaign conspiring with Moscow on election interference.

His scenario is contained in a sealed Aug. 2 declaration in a defamation law suit brought by three Russian bankers in London. The trio's American attorneys filed his answers Tuesday in a libel lawsuit in Washington against the investigative firm Fusion GPS, which handled the former British intelligence officer.

SEE ALSO: Read Christopher Steele's London court declaration

---

In an answer to interrogatories, Mr. Steele wrote: "Fusion's immediate client was law firm Perkins Coie. It engaged Fusion to obtain information necessary for Perkins Coie LLP to provide legal advice on the potential impact of Russian involvement on the legal validity of the outcome of the 2016 US Presidential election.

"Based on that advice, parties such as the Democratic National Committee and HFACC Inc. (also known as "Hillary for America") could consider steps they would be legally entitled to take to challenge the validity of the outcome of that election."

The Democrats never filed a challenge, but Mr. Steele's answer suggested that was one option inside the Clinton camp, which funded Mr. Steele's research along with the Democratic National Committee.

The U.S. intelligence community concluded that Moscow interfered in the election by hacking Democratic Party computers and stealing emails that it released via WikiLeaks.

No Trump associate has been charged with collusion.

In a previous court filing in a second case in April-May 2017, Mr. Steele said his job was to find links between Trump associates and Moscow.

Hired by Fusion in June 2016, he wrote a 17-memo dossier alleging a "extensive conspiracy" between the two, which two years later hasn't been proven publicly by special counsel Robert Mueller or Congress.

In his most recent London court filing, Mr. Steele is defending against a libel lawsuit by citing a discredited story about a computer server, Trump Tower and a Russian bank.

The suit was brought by three Russian oligarchs who control Moscow's Alfa Bank. Mr. Steele, under the dossier heading of election interference, accused them of paying cash bribes to Russian President Vladimir Putin.

The bankers "Mikhail Fridman, Petr Aven and German Khan" also sued Fusion GPS.

The case was dismissed by a D.C. Superior Court judge. Lawyers filed an appeal in U.S. District Court and attached Mr. Steele's August declarations given in the London court.

"Internet traffic data suggested that a computer server of an entity in which the Claimants have an interest, Alfa Bank, had been communicating with a computer server linked to the Trump Organization," Mr. Steele stated.

His goal was to show that his unverified dossier was correct when he wrote of an "extensive conspiracy."

But the server story has fallen into the â... fake newsâ... category by most accounts.

When it began appearing on social media in 2016, some online sleuths looked at the serverâ... s IP address and other data. They traced the server to a location outside Philadelphia that spewed marketing spam.

A Trump Organization official told The Washington Times last year that some of the spam went to Alfa Bank employees who perhaps stayed in Trump hotels. Thatâ... s how Alfa turned up in some emails.

The New York Times investigated and said the FBI basically came to the same conclusion.

Mr. Steele didnâ... t mention the server theory in the dossier itself.

Fusion GPS co-founder Glenn R. Simpson did try to sell the idea to the Justice Department, despite The New York Timesâ... finding. He met with then-Associate Deputy Attorney General Bruce Ohr.

Trying to prompt an investigation, Mr. Simpson told him the Times story was wrong and the server was used for direct communication, according to Mr. Ohrâ... s notes turned over to Congress.

In his court filing, Mr. Steele sought to show cronyism between Trump and the bank by noting that Alfa hired then-private attorney Brian Benczkowski to investigate the server allegation.

Mr. Benczkowski is now assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Departmentâ... s Criminal Division, having won Senate confirmation in a near-party line vote.

Fusion GPS, in defending against the Russiansâ... libel lawsuit, depicts the three men as corrupt Putin cronies.

Mr. Steele faces a second defamation suit in London, this one from Russian entrepreneur Aleksey Gubarev, owner of XBT Holdings and provider of computer servers to thousands of clients.

In his final December 2016 dossier memo, Mr. Steele accused Mr. Gubarev of actually performing the hacking on Democratic computers under duress from Russian intelligence. He said in a court filing that the allegation came from unsolicited call-ins.

Mr. Gubarev said the allegations are made up. In Florida, he also is suing BuzzFeed, the news website that published the entire dossier in January 2017.

At liberal tech companies, those who disagree on politics are attacked and black-listed

By Karen Weise

Shashi Ramchandani, who manages a team of engineers at Google, has never been shy about being a conservative working in Silicon Valley. He showed coworkers emails he exchanged with Ivanka Trump after he mailed her photos he took at the Republican convention, and on election night, he texted colleagues snapshots from the floor of Trump's victory party in New York City. "They saw me first as a Googler, then as a conservative," Ramchandani said.

In his 14 years at the company, he said he hasn't felt like he had to keep his mouth shut until last month when Google fired an engineer who penned a memo saying biological differences partly explain why more men work in tech than women.

Politics often doesn't mix easily at work, but it's particularly fraught in tech, where free thinking is prized yet the workforce is predominantly liberal. Now, as President Trump stirs up the culture wars at the same time as Silicon Valley faces a backlash for being so white and so male, conservatives in tech have their guards up like never before.

Ramchandani, whose parents came to the U.S. from India, wasn't a fan of the memo. He particularly objected to its assumption that Google's hiring favors women and minorities, which ran counter to his experience as a hiring manager. But he was also "extremely disappointed" Google fired the engineer. Ramchandani felt, for the first time, that he had to reconcile his love of Google with his conservative support for free speech and distaste for bureaucracy.

Tech has seen ousters for unpopular political or cultural views before, like when the chief technology officer at Business Insider was forced out in 2013 over old racist and homophobic tweets, and the next year when the CEO of Mozilla stepped down after facing criticism for a $1,000 donation he made to a group that opposed gay marriage. But those were executives. The Google memo, which exposed a rank-and-file engineer exposed in a public way, hit closer to home for many conservatives, who said the current environment is more hostile than ever before. "Before it was, I don't agree with you," but now it has evolved into this new thing that is much more aggressive, â... donâ... t even say something that is counter to what I believe,â... â... says Aaron Ginn, co-founder of Lincoln Network, which looks to connect conservative techies with government and political work.

Some fear losing their jobs while others worry theyâ... ll be ostracized by colleagues. (Thatâ... s in a sector where 76 percent of technical jobs are held by men, and blacks and Latinos make up only 5 percent of the workforce.) Adding to the stress is Silicon Valleyâ... s penchant for open floor plans, which make it hard to tune out an officemate on a rant, and the way companies encourage workers to socialize and bring their whole selves to their job. Several tech workers said they donâ... t post about politics on Facebook, where theyâ... re friends with many coworkers. â... My wife is very paranoid about me sharing my opinion, even on private WhatsApp groups with my friends,â... said a former Amazon engineer who now works at Oracle. Most employees who spoke asked not to be identified because they worried about their job security.

An engineer at Microsoft Corp. first realized just how in the minority his political views were back in 2004, when George W. Bush was up for re-election. At lunch one day, his coworkers one by one slammed the Republican candidate. The engineer, just a few years out of college, recalls saying, â... Iâ... m probably going to vote for him.â... He wasnâ... t prepared for the response. â... They said, â... You stupid person. How can you think about that?â... â... Things got so heated, he said, his manager sent a memo to his 100-person team, that said, in essence, â... Hey, cool it. We have engineering tasks we have to focus on.â...

As contentious as 2004 may have been, itâ... s nothing compared to the polarizing election and presidency of Trump. The Microsoft engineer said now itâ... s even harder to have a productive political conversation, as colleagues lump him with a president whom he said doesnâ... t represent his conservative values, threatening the ability to do his job well. "Thirty years ago, there was somebody in their garage doing something amazing,â... he said. â... Now these projects have thousands of people on them. People have to work with you and like you. If you get labeled as a bad person because you voted the wrong way and start getting ostracized, it will impede on your job because most people canâ... t flip modes. They canâ... t have a heated political debate with you and then flip modes and have a heated technical debate with you."

Googleâ... s office felt like a funeral the day after Trump was elected, according to an employee who describes himself as libertarian. â... A lot of people didnâ... t come,â... he said. â... The people who did were very quiet, almost like their aunt died.â...

This Google employee believes the now infamous memo was relatively well-reasoned and that Silicon Valley's diversity initiatives ignore data that conflict with their ideology. Heâ... s regularly reminded of what he refers to as the companyâ... s â... social justice agenda,â... like when he gets corporate email touting a donation to a non-profit that supports minorities, or hears an executive talk about hoping to have half of his leadership team be female, which he believes shows the company prioritizes some groups over others. He worries that the company is under pressure to reach 50-50 gender equity too fast, and it will impede the promotion opportunities for men. â... Just do the math,â... he says.

The Oracle engineer said the bro culture in tech is real and knows of female colleagues who face sexism, but with women making up fewer than a fifth of computer science graduates, the goal of reaching anything close to a 50-50 split feels â... misguidedâ... in the near term. â... Some people are better than others, and when I work with a woman who is below average, I always have a thought that maybe she is a diversity hire, and I donâ... t think thatâ... s healthy,â... he said. He bristles slightly when he hears about female colleagues being heavily recruited by top firms.

Some confide in colleagues they consider friends. One liberal Google product manager said a conservative teammate who used to work at Goldman Sachs told him the environment now reminds him of his time in banking during the Occupy Wall Street protests, when he tried to lay low.

Ramchandani, who said heâ... s fiscally conservative but socially liberal, said the pressure on conservatives is â... less of a Google thing than a Silicon Valley thing.â... In the suburban Bay Area at large, he said, â... I had more trouble coming out as a conservative than I did with my race or orientation or any other minority status.â... He believes Google should recognize his fellow conservatives more but is nervous that conservatives are becoming more polarized themselves in recent weeks. He said on internal Google employee email groups for conservatives, he noticed â... a few loud voicesâ... stoking an â... us versus themâ... mentality, for example contemplating legal action against the company. â... I found that distasteful because itâ... s biting the hand that feeds you,â... he said. â... We are here to do a job not expound political values.â...

The Oracle engineer, like some others, have opted to lay low during this tense time. â... Work is work, and not everything needs to be about politics,â... he said. While he sees liberal colleagues who sit nearby donâ... t seemingly need to filter their comments, heâ... s decided itâ... s not worth engaging, adding â... I donâ... t want to be known as that guy who wants to argue with everybody.â...

In the wake of reports that fired FBI Director James Comey is getting reprimanded for his defiance of authority in his handling of the Hillary Clinton email case, former CBS reporter Sharyl Attkisson, whoâ... s become a thorn in the side of the establishment media she once represented, issued a friendly reminder about what Comey originally wrote concerning Clintonâ... s â... grossly negligentâ... handling of classified information.

In his original draft of his famous press conference announcing his recommendations not to charge Clinton for gross negligence in handling classified information, Comey originally wrote:

There is evidence to support a conclusion that Secretary Clinton, and others, used the private email server in a manner that was grossly negligent with respect to the handling of classified information.

Attorney General Jeff Sessions fires former FBI deputy Andrew McCabe. Will SEC shills be next? Sessions fires McCabe before he can retire in epic 'Swamp Draining' move

Trump had repeatedly attacked the veteran FBI official

WASHINGTON â Attorney General Jeff Sessions late Friday night accepted the recommendation that former FBI Deputy Director Andrew McCabe, who took the reins of the agency during the turbulent days after the abrupt firing of James Comey, be terminated â two days before he was to retire and become eligible for full pension benefits.

Though McCabe â who has been attacked by President Donald Trump â stepped down as deputy director in late January, he remained on the federal payroll, planning to retire on Sunday. The firing places his federal pension in jeopardy.

Unlike Trump's removal of Comey last year, which produced widespread resentment inside the FBI, McCabe's termination was recommended by the agency he served for 21 years.

Sunday is McCabe's 50th birthday, which would have made him eligible for certain substantial retirement benefits.

RELATED: MCCABE: TRUMP WANTS TO DESTROY ME TO STOP MUELLER PROBE

The FBI's Office of Professional Responsibility proposed the termination, based on the findings of the Justice Department's inspector general. That office has been examining the bureau's handling of the Clinton e-mail investigation.

"After an extensive and fair investigation and according to Department of Justice procedure, the Department's Office of the Inspector General provided its report on allegations of misconduct by Andrew McCabe to the FBI's Office of Professional Responsibility," Sessions said in a statement at about 10 p.m. ET Friday night. "The FBI's OPR then reviewed the report and underlying documents and issued a disciplinary proposal recommending the dismissal of Mr. McCabe. Both the OIG and FBI OPR reports concluded that Mr. McCabe had made an unauthorized disclosure to the news media and lacked candor â including under oath â on multiple occasions."

In statement released after the firing was announced, McCabe said: "This attack on my credibility is one part of a larger effort not just to slander me personally, but to taint the FBI, law enforcement, and intelligence professionals more generally. It is part of this Administration's ongoing war on the FBI and the efforts of the Special Counsel investigation, which continue to this day. Their persistence in this campaign only highlights the importance of the Special Counsel's work."

RELATED: READ MCCABE'S FULL STATEMENT AFTER FIRING

As part of the inquiry, McCabe was questioned about conversations FBI officials had with a reporter in October 2016 regarding the FBI's investigation of the Clinton Foundation. The inspector general's report, which has not been made public, concluded that McCabe was not completely candid in answering questions about those conversations, according to officials familiar with the report.

The findings of the inspector general apparently played a role in McCabe's decision to step down in late January from the deputy director post.

In a message to employees at the time, FBI Director Christopher Wray said, "It would be inappropriate for me to comment on specific aspects of the IG's review right now. But I can assure you that I remain staunchly committed to doing this job, in every respect, 'by the book.' I will not be swayed by political or other pressure in my decision making."

White House deems public servant Andrew McCabe a "bad actor"

05:07

After Comey was fired in May 2017, McCabe became the FBI's acting director. Two days later, he was asked at a congressional hearing if the shake-up was affecting operations.

"Quite simply put, sir, you cannot stop the men and women of the FBI from doing the right thing, protecting the American people, and upholding the Constitution," he replied, a comment that cheered the FBI's rank and file.

But McCabe became a target of Republicans who questioned the FBI's impartiality in how the Clinton investigation was conducted.

When McCabe's wife, Jill, ran for the state Senate in Virginia in 2015, she accepted a donation from a political action committee controlled by Gov. Terry McAuliffe, a friend and supporter of Hillary Clinton's â... and that became the basis for a series of Twitter attacks from Trump.

"Problem is that the acting head of the FBI & the person in charge of the Hillary investigation, Andrew McCabe, got $700,000 from H for wife!" Trump wrote in July 2017, erroneously claiming that McCabe had a role in facilitating the contribution.

"Andrew McCabe FIRED, a great day for the hard working men and women of the FBI - A great day for Democracy. Sanctimonious James Comey was his boss and made McCabe look like a choirboy. He knew all about the lies and corruption going on at the highest levels of the FBI!" the president claimed.

In response to criticism that McCabe should not have played a role in the Clinton investigation, the FBI said he consulted with internal ethics officials who concluded that because his wife's campaign ended before the investigation began, there was no conflict.

The number-two official at the FBI is now Acting Deputy Director David Bowdich, who supervised the investigation of the deadly 2015 shooting at the San Bernardino, California, community center.

Won't your avoidance of the much more criminally overt actions cause your people to go to prison? The FBI's own senior personnel office is today debating firing McCabe before he can get his pension because he did the same exact cover-ups of public crimes. Don't you guys want your pensions?*

BARACK OBAMA MANIPULATED THE SERVERS AT WHITEHOUSE.GOV TO RIG THE RESULTS OF HUNDREDS OF FEDERAL PETITIONS.

THE SERVER STATS AND THE EX-IT STAFF PROVE IT.

OBAMA WANTED TO STOP ANY ATTEMPT TO EXPOSE THESE DANGEROUS TOXIC LITHIUM ION BATTERIES BECAUSE HE, HIS STAFF AND HIS FRIENDS OWNED THE STOCK MARKET FUNDS FOR LITHIUM ION!!!

Lamya Bouyirdane noticed her lithium ion powered phone was very hot after she asked her four-year-old son to pass it over. She said she threw the phone away when she realized it had â... swollen upâ... and smoke was coming out. The phone then caught fire and the back of the handset blew off. Her partner quickly extinguished it.

Bouyirdane, who resides in the southwestern French city of Pau, said she will sue Samsung.

Samsung recently recalled millions of its Galaxy Note 7 smartphones because of a problem that caused the batteries to overheat and catch fire. In fact, all devices with lithium ion batteries are a severe danger to the public.

Tesla, Fisker, Apple, Google, Samsung products explode because they use dangerous lithium ion batteries which are owned and controlled by the Obama Administrations campaign financiers. Sub-atomic issues and the highly explosive nature of lithium ion batteries cause them to explode all the time. Lithium ion batteries explode when they get wet, bumped, charged or cross certain types of high-energy fields. The lithium is mined in Afghanistan, Bolivia and other war-profiteering regions which are exploited by those very same campaign billionaires.

Federal investigators and federal MSDS records state that the thermal vapors from these batteries cause cancer, brain and liver damage, neurological damage and mutate the fetus in the womb. The FAA and the United Nations have published extensive new rules warning about the lethal dangers of lithium ion batteries. The â... lostâ... flight MH370 had a cargo hold full of lithium ion batteries which are suspected of crashing the plane. Erick Strickland, the head of the Obama auto safety agency quit the agency after being confronted with safety issue cover-up charges. Google and Tesla â... driver-less carsâ... seek to exploit their lithium ion holdings via DOT and DOE grants and subsidies financed by taxpayers.

A large percentage of the factory workers, that make lithium ion batteries, become poisoned and often die from the poisoning. Towns and villages near battery factories become permanently toxic. Lithium ion batteries can not be fully recycled and poison the landfills where they are dumped. The Obama Administration has ordered the DOT to not demand the recall of Tesla cars in order to protect Obama campaign financiers at Google, Kleiner Perkins, Draper-Fisher, Tesla and other political fronts. Lithium ion battery safety dangers may be one of the most covered-up consumer safety issues in history.

OBAMA INSIDERS WANT TO STOP YOU FROM KNOWING ABOUT THIS. YOU CAN CHANGE THAT CENSORSHIP!

BEWARE OF NEW GROUPS WHO PRETEND TO INVESTIGATE BUT ARE ACTUALLY DOING COVER-UPS!

A number of "new" news investigation groups have suddenly been announced. They say that they intend to investigate and expose Silicon Valley yet they are financed and staffed by Silicon Valley money.

Pierre Omidyar is part of some of them. He owns Ebay and Gawker Media loves to rig politics in multiple nations. Don't expect too much from anything he is involved in. Others get cash from deeply political billionaires. Don't expect anything but cover-ups from those outfits.

Aides to Donald Trump, the US president, hired an Israeli private intelligence agency to orchestrate a â... dirty opsâ... campaign against key individuals from the Obama administration who helped negotiate the Iran nuclear deal, the Observer can reveal.

People in the Trump camp contacted private investigators in May last year to â... get dirtâ... on Ben Rhodes, who had been one of Barack Obamaâ... s top national security advisers, and Colin Kahl, deputy assistant to Obama, as part of an elaborate attempt to discredit the deal.

The extraordinary revelations come days before Trumpâ... s 12 May deadline to either scrap or continue to abide by the international deal limiting Iranâ... s nuclear programme.

Jack Straw, who as foreign secretary was involved in earlier efforts to restrict Iranian weapons, said: 'These are extraordinary and appalling allegations but which also illustrate a high level of desperation by Trump and [the Israeli prime minister] Benjamin Netanyahu, not so much to discredit the deal but to undermine those around it.'

One former high-ranking British diplomat with wide experience of negotiating international peace agreements, requesting anonymity, said: 'It's bloody outrageous to do this. The whole point of negotiations is to not play dirty tricks like this.'

Sources said that officials linked to Trump's team contacted investigators days after Trump visited Tel Aviv a year ago, his first foreign tour as US president. Trump promised Netanyahu that Iran would never have nuclear weapons and suggested that the Iranians thought they could 'do what they want' since negotiating the nuclear deal in 2015. A source with details of the 'dirty tricks campaign' said: 'The idea was that people acting for Trump would discredit those who were pivotal in selling the deal, making it easier to pull out of it.'

According to incendiary documents seen by the Observer, investigators contracted by the private intelligence agency were told to dig into the personal lives and political careers of Rhodes, a former deputy national security adviser for strategic communications, and Kahl, a national security adviser to the former vice-president Joe Biden. Among other things they were looking at personal relationships, any involvement with Iran-friendly lobbyists, and if they had benefited personally or politically from the peace deal.

Investigators were also apparently told to contact prominent Iranian Americans as well as pro-deal journalists 'from the New York Times, MSNBC television, the Atlantic, Vox website and Haaretz, the Israeli newspaper among others' who had frequent contact with Rhodes and Kahl in an attempt to establish whether they had violated any protocols by sharing sensitive intelligence. They are believed to have looked at comments made by Rhodes in a 2016 New York Times profile in which he admitted relying on inexperienced reporters to create an 'echo chamber' that helped sway public opinion to secure the deal. It is also understood that the smear campaign wanted to establish if Rhodes was among those who backed a request by Susan Rice, Obama's final national security adviser, to unmask the identities of Trump transition officials caught up in the surveillance of foreign targets.

Although sources have confirmed that contact and an initial plan of attack was provided to private investigators by representatives of Trump, it is not clear how much work was actually undertaken, for how long or what became of any material unearthed.

Neither is it known if the black ops constituted only a strand of a wider Trump-Netanyahu collaboration to undermine the deal or if investigators targeted other individuals such as John Kerry, the lead American signatory to the deal. Both Rhodes and Kahl said they had no idea of the campaign against them. Rhodes said: '... I was not aware, though sadly am not surprised. I would say that digging up dirt on someone for carrying out their professional responsibilities in their positions as White House officials is a chillingly authoritarian thing to do.'

A spokesman for the White House's national security council offered '... no comment'... when approached. However, the revelations are not the first time that claims of '... dirty tricks'... have been aimed at the Trump camp. Special counsel Robert Mueller is leading an investigation into apparent attempts by Trump's inner-circle to dig up damaging information on Hillary Clinton during the 2016 presidential campaign.

Of particular interest is a meeting involving the US president's eldest son, Donald Trump Jr, his brother-in-law Jared Kushner and then-campaign chair Paul Manafort and a Kremlin-connected Russian lawyer who had promised damaging information about Clinton.

Trump has repeatedly signalled his intention to scrap the Iran deal, denouncing it as '... the worst deal ever'. In a January speech the US president accused his predecessor of having '... curried favour with the Iranian regime in order to push through the disastrously flawed Iran nuclear deal'.

Last Monday, Netanyahu, accused Iran of continuing to hide and expand its nuclear weapons know-how after the 2015 deal, presenting what he claimed was '... new and conclusive proof'... of violations.

However, European powers including Britain responded by saying the Israeli prime minister's claims reinforced the need to keep the deal.

On Thursday the UN secretary general Antonio Guterres urged Trump not to walk away from the deal, warning that there was a real risk of war if the 2015 agreement was not preserved. The following day details emerged of some unusual shadow diplomacy by Kerry, meeting a top-ranking Iranian official in New York to discuss how to preserve the deal.

It was the second time in around two months that Kerry had met foreign minister Javad Zarif to apparently strategise over rescuing a pact they spent years negotiating during the Obama administration. On Sunday Boris Johnson, the foreign secretary, will arrive in Washington, hoping to persuade Trump to keep the deal, known as the joint comprehensive plan of action (JCPOA).

Straw, who was foreign secretary between 2001 and 2006, said: '... The campaign against the JCPOA has been characterised by abuse and misinformation. It is the best chance of ensuring Iran never develops a nuclear weapons programme, and it is insane to suggest abandoning the deal could do anything but endanger international security.â€¦

Poisoned toothpaste that takes a month to end its target's life. Armed drones. Exploding cell phones. Spare tires with remote-control bombs. Assassinating enemy scientists and discovering the secret lovers of Islamic holy men.

A new book chronicles these techniques and asserts that Israel has carried out at least 2,700 assassination operations in its 70 years of existence. While many failed, they add up to far more than any other Western country, the book says.

Ronen Bergman, the intelligence correspondent for Yediot Aharonot newspaper, persuaded many agents of Mossad, Shin Bet and the military to tell their stories, some using their real names. The result is the first comprehensive look at Israel's use of state-sponsored killings.

Based on 1,000 interviews and thousands of documents, and running more than 600 pages, Rise and Kill First... makes the case that Israel has used assassination in the place of war, killing half a dozen Iranian nuclear scientists, for instance, rather than launching a military attack. It also strongly suggests that Israel used radiation poisoning to kill Yasser Arafat, the longtime Palestinian leader, an act its officials have consistently denied. Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat speaks at the signing of the Wye Peace Accord in the West Room of the White House in Washington on October 23, 1998. /

Bergman writes that Arafat's death in 2004 fit a pattern and had advocates. But he steps back from flatly asserting what happened, saying that Israeli military censorship prevents him from revealing what Arafat knew or if he knows.

ADVERTISEMENT

The book's title comes from the ancient Jewish Talmud admonition, "If someone comes to kill you, rise up and kill him first." Bergman says a huge percentage of the people he interviewed cited that passage as justification for their work. So does an opinion by the military's lawyer declaring such operations to be legitimate acts of war.

Despite the many interviews, including with former prime ministers Ehud Barak and Ehud Olmert, Bergman, the author of several books, says the Israeli secret services sought to interfere with his work, holding a meeting in 2010 on how to disrupt his research and warning former Mossad employees not to speak with him.

He says that while the U.S. has tighter constraints on its agents than does Israel, President George W. Bush adopted many Israeli techniques after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, and President Barack Obama launched several hundred targeted killings.

If someone comes to kill you, rise up and kill him first

The command-and-control systems, the war rooms, the methods of information gathering and the technology of the pilotless aircraft, or drones, that now serve the Americans and their allies were all in large part developed in Israel, Bergman writes.

The book gives a textured history of the personalities and tactics of the various secret services. In the 1970s, a new head of operations for Mossad opened hundreds of commercial companies overseas with the idea that they might be useful one day. For example, Mossad created a Middle Eastern shipping business that, years later, came in handy in providing cover for a team in the waters off Yemen.

There have been plenty of failures. After a Palestinian terrorist group killed Israeli athletes at the 1972 Munich Olympics, Israel sent its agents to kill the perpetrators and shot more than one misidentified man. There were also successful operations that did more harm than good to Israel's policy goals, Bergman notes.

Bergman raises moral and legal concerns provoked by state-sponsored killing, including the existence of separate legal systems for secret agents and the rest of Israel. But he presents the operations, for the most part, as achieving their aims. While many credit the barrier Israel built along and inside the West Bank with stopping assaults on Israeli citizens in the early 2000s, he argues that what made the difference was a massive number of targeted killings of terrorist operatives.

One of Bergman's most important sources was Meir Dagan, a recent head of Mossad for eight years who died in early 2016. Toward the end of his career, Dagan fell out with Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu partly over launching a military attack on Iran. Netanyahu said intelligence techniques such as selling the country faulty parts for its reactors which Israel and the U.S. were doing weren't enough.

Dagan argued back that these techniques, especially assassinations, would do the job. As Bergman quotes him saying, "In a car, there are 25,000 parts on average. Imagine if 100 of them are missing. It would be very hard to make it go. On the other hand, sometimes it's most effective to kill the driver, and that's that."

Benghazi Hero Drops Jaws, Reveals OBAMA'S And Comey's Character Assassination Squad

BY BEN MARQUIS

Share Tweet Email Print

When it was announced Friday evening that former FBI Deputy Director Andrew McCabe had been fired on the recommendation of both the Department of Justice Office of the Inspector General and the FBI's Office of Professional Responsibility, there were plenty of "hot takes" from politicians and media figures on both the right and left.

However, according to BizPac Review, the hottest take of all in regard to McCabe's termination may have come from one of the heroes who emerged from the deadly 2012 Benghazi terrorist attack, Kris Paronto.

WARNING: The following tweet contains profane language that some readers may find offensive.

Paronto, a former U.S. Army Ranger who was a security contractor in Benghazi at the time of the attack and helped fend off repeated waves of assaults by terrorists at the U.S. consulate and nearby CIA annex, took to Twitter to make his feelings known in regard to McCabe, as well as former FBI Director James Comey and former CIA Director John Brennan.

He began with a tweet which eviscerated McCabe's rebuttal claiming he had been "singled out" in an effort to "slander" him and the FBI in general by President Donald Trump and his administration.

Paronto tweeted, "Slander the FBI and Law Enforcement?! You've got to be shitting me Andy. You, James and your @BarackObama appointed syndicate brought nothing but lies, politics, corruption & disgrace to a once great FBI. @Comey #AndrewMcCabe #LockThemUp."

Slander the @FBI and Law Enforcement?! You've got to be shitting me Andy. You, James and your @BarackObama appointed syndicate brought nothing but lies, politics, corruption&disgrace to a once great FBI. @Comey #AndrewMcCabe#LockThemUp

"Kris Paronto (@KrisParonto) March 17, 2018

But it was the tweet he sent immediately following that which really garnered attention, as he appeared to indicate that partisan members of the FBI attempted to slap him and the other team members from Benghazi with excessive use of force charges, presumably in relation to their use of deadly force to defend the consulate and CIA annex from repeated attacks.

By the way, as you're on your way out I want to thank you, James and your @HillaryClinton supporting hacks at the @FBI for trying to pin excessive force use on myself and my team after coming home from Benghazi. You all are the worst scum of human. @Comey ð ð ¼#SorryNotSorry â... You all are the worst scum of human. @Comey #SorryNotSorry,â... the Benghazi hero tweeted.

That astonishing assertion â... that he and other Benghazi heroes were targeted for legal reprisal by partisan hacks at the FBI â... cannot be independently verified at this time. But it will be interesting to see if any further information in regard to this claim is shared by Paronto or one of his teammates, or perhaps even the upcoming DOJ-OIG report which has been looking into allegations of FBI misconduct.

But Paronto wasnâ... t quite done yet, as he then set his sights on Comey. He posted a tweet in response to the veiled threat issued to Trump by the former director that Comeyâ... s own version of events would be heard by the American people â... very soonâ... â... as in, as soon as his lucrative and profitable book tour kicks off.

Nor did he let the more open and unhinged threat against Trump from Brennan slide either, as he tweeted a short time later, â... This man knows a thing or two more than the average government bureaucrat about such things as honor, patriotism and service to country, and he isnâ... t the least bit afraid to let the partisan hacks who have infested the bureaucratic deep state know exactly how he feels about their duplicitous actions.

Hopefully more information will emerge in the near future to validate and support his claim of being targeted by those same slimy hacks in the aftermath of the Benghazi terror attack, now that a nonpartisan and less vindictive rule of law is being restored.

Bernie Sanders Reveals That Liberal Think Tank â... Smearsâ... Others In Hired Hit Job Attacks

BY Chris Walker

Vermont Senator Bernie Sanders, a candidate running for the Democratic Partyâ... s presidential nomination in the 2020 campaign, penned a letter this weekend that is critical of a liberal think tank. According to Sanders, the Center for American Progress is making what he believes are undue criticisms of himself and other progressive candidates.

Sanders wrote a letter to the organization, whose news site ThinkProgress recently published critical posts of the candidate, and explained his frustrations, according to reporting from the New York Times.

â... Last week, you published an article on ThinkProgress criticizing me for my appearance and for the income I earned from writing a book,â... Sanders wrote. â... Then, a day later, you published a video that dishonestly attacked me for hypocrisy in my effort to address income inequality in America â... a video that was excitedly discussed on many conservative websites.â...

Hmmâ...! ThinkProgress reports today that Bernie Sanders' frumpy clothing is a problematic example of white privilege. pic.twitter.com/1JTV8J9r6j

â... Lee Fang (@lhfang) April 11, 2019

His criticism didnâ... t stop with how ThinkProgress treated his own campaign in its reporting. Sanders also took issue in his letter with reporting the site had done on Massachusetts Senator Elizabeth Warrenâ... s claims of Native American ancestry, as well as the site striking a critical tone toward New Jersey Senator Cory Booker â... for moving in a progressive direction and joining with me on a prescription drug importation bill,â... Sanders wrote.

Both Warren and Booker are also candidates running for president in the Democratic primary.

Sanders added in his letter his hopes that ThinkProgress and its parent organization, the Center for American Progress, would change their ways.

â... The Democratic primary must be a campaign of ideas, not of bad-faith smears,â... Sanders said. â... Please help play a constructive role in the effort to defeat Donald Trump.â...

The Center for American Progress was founded by John Podesta, a close ally of Hillary Clintonâ... s who was rumored to be on the top of her list of choices to possibly become her chief of staff, had she won the 2016 election. Clinton and Sanders were involved in a fierce primary competition that year, with Clinton going on to win the nomination but lose the general election to Republican nominee Donald Trump.

On its website, ThinkProgress purports to be independent of its parent organization. â... Founded in 2005, ThinkProgress is an editorially independent project of the Center for American Progress Action Fund,â... the websiteâ... s â... Aboutâ... page states.

That sentiment was echoed by Jodi Enda, the editor for ThinkProgress, who said the websiteâ... s work is not reviewed before publication by the Center for American Progress.

CAP â... had nothing to do with the article or video about Senator Sanders or articles related to any other political leader,â... Enda said, adding that the site â... will not take sides in the Democratic primaries.â...

She offered a warning of her own, seemingly in response to Sandersâ... s concerns. â... Political leaders should not be able to muzzle or stop coverage that they consider critical,â... Enda said.

Bernie Sanders Reveals That Liberal Think Tank ... Smears... Others In Hired Hit Job Attacks

BY Chris Walker

Vermont Senator Bernie Sanders, a candidate running for the Democratic Party's presidential nomination in the 2020 campaign, penned a letter this weekend that is critical of a liberal think tank. According to Sanders, the Center for American Progress is making what he believes are undue criticisms of himself and other progressive candidates.

Sanders wrote a letter to the organization, whose news site ThinkProgress recently published critical posts of the candidate, and explained his frustrations, according to reporting from the New York Times.

â... Last week, you published an article on ThinkProgress criticizing me for my appearance and for the income I earned from writing a book,â... Sanders wrote. â... Then, a day later, you published a video that dishonestly attacked me for hypocrisy in my effort to address income inequality in America â... a video that was excitedly discussed on many conservative websites.â...

â... Lee Fang (@lhfang) April 11, 2019

His criticism didnâ... t stop with how ThinkProgress treated his own campaign in its reporting. Sanders also took issue in his letter with reporting the site had done on Massachusetts Senator Elizabeth Warrenâ... s claims of Native American ancestry, as well as the site striking a critical tone toward New Jersey Senator Cory Booker â... for moving in a progressive direction and joining with me on a prescription drug importation bill,â... Sanders wrote.

Both Warren and Booker are also candidates running for president in the Democratic primary.

Sanders added in his letter his hopes that ThinkProgress and its parent organization, the Center for American Progress, would change their ways.

â... The Democratic primary must be a campaign of ideas, not of bad-faith smears,â... Sanders said. â... Please help play a constructive role in the effort to defeat Donald Trump.â...

The Center for American Progress was founded by John Podesta, a close ally of Hillary Clintonâ... s who was rumored to be on the top of her list of choices to possibly become her chief of staff, had she won the 2016 election. Clinton and Sanders were involved in a fierce primary competition that year, with Clinton going on to win the nomination but lose the general election to Republican nominee Donald Trump.

On its website, ThinkProgress purports to be independent of its parent organization. â... Founded in 2005, ThinkProgress is an editorially independent project of the Center for American Progress Action Fund,â... the websiteâ... s â... Aboutâ... page states.

That sentiment was echoed by Jodi Enda, the editor for ThinkProgress, who said the websiteâ... s work is not reviewed before publication by the Center for American Progress.

CAP â... had nothing to do with the article or video about Senator Sanders or articles related to any other political leader,â... Enda said, adding that the site â... will not take sides in the Democratic primaries.â...

She offered a warning of her own, seemingly in response to Sandersâ... s concerns. â... Political leaders should not be able to muzzle or stop coverage that they consider critical,â... Enda said.

**Big Tech Demands Content Equality For â... Net Neutrality,â... But Not For Alex Jones**

Those who demanded Internet service providers treat all content equally are the very same platforms actively deciding what content is permissible for consumption.

By Tho Bishop

AUGUST 9, 2018

Alex Jones and InfoWarsâ... loss of platforms such as YouTube and Facebook has a number of layers to it, including the responsibilities social media companies have to free speech, particularly as the lines between Big Tech and Big Government are increasingly blurred.

While Iâ... I leave others to debate those subjects, these developments and reactions to it provide clarity to another heated tech-related debate: the hypocrisy of â... net neutralityâ... advocates. After all, there is a ton of overlap between those who advocated Title II regulation of the Internet and those celebrating Jonesâ... s deplatforming. This is particularly true among the most powerful players in this debate, including legislators and leaders in the industry.

Consider, for example, the reaction from Big Tech to the Federal Communications Commissionâ... s (FCCâ... s) repeal of Title II regulation last December. Facebookâ... s Sheryl Sandberg published a statement saying: â... An open internet is critical for new ideas and economic opportunityâ...!Weâ... re ready to work with members of Congress and others to help make the internet free and open for everyone.â...

Google encouraged online activists to â... take action,â... in order to â... protect the free flow of information and help make sure the Internet is available to everyone, everywhere.â... Apple went so far as to say: â... An open internet ensures that hundreds of millions of consumers get the experience they want, over the broadband connections they choose, to use the devices they love, which have become an integral part of their lives. What consumers do with those tools is up to them â... not Apple, and not broadband providers.â...

Fast-forward eight months later and now those who demanded Internet service providers treat all content equally are the very same platforms actively deciding what content is permissible for consumption.

This is hardly surprising to anyone who has paid attention to the debate. Google and Appleâ... s lip service to the importance of protecting tech startups has never jived with their app stores serving as the greatest filters to what new products consumers can easily access. Tellingly, both have caved to government pressure whenever an app, no matter how popular, has frustrated legal authorities.

All the more repulsive about the tech giantsâ... contributions to the net neutrality debate is how potentially dangerous their disingenuous crusade was to the future of Internet in America. After all, largely overlooked in FCC Chairman Ajit Paiâ... s willingness to stand up to Mark Zuckerberg, Larry Page, and the other titans of tech is that it was a major victory for the future of online service: 5G.

As industry analysts like Peter Rysavy have explained: â... [N]etwork slicing, a key architecture for 5G, will allow an operator to provide different services with different performance characteristics to address specific use cases. Itâ... s critical that quality of service management be employed in 5G because 5G is being designed for a wider range of use cases than prior technology generations and certain applications will need higher priority than other.â...

Even with access to new spectrum and peak throughputs that will exceed 1 Gbps, 5G networks will need to manage latency, reliability, massive numbers of connections, and a mix of stationary and mobile users, Rysavy added.

â... The United States has assumed global leadership in 4G and enjoys deep LTE penetration, leading smartphone platforms, and a vibrant application ecosystem. But globally, countries and companies are investing in and concentrating on what will come next with 5G. Constraining 5G with rules that unnecessarily undermine its potential is economic folly,â... he said.

Tellingly, the imposition of FDR-era regulation on Internet service providers correlated with a significant decrease in telecom investment, stalling the development of American 5G at a time where Americaâ... s tech dominance is threatened by rivals like China.

This is not to say that private companies have an inherent responsibility to place â... national interestâ... over their own bottom line. Companies have the right to behave cynically. At the same time, those same companies deserve to be exposed for such behavior, to allow consumers to react accordingly.

Net neutrality was about control and regulatory capture, not online freedom. Tech giants are now expecting that brand loyalty and market size will isolate them from the increased politicization of their content. That may not be working out so well for Netflix.

At the end of the day, in a market consumers are king. Will consumer apathy allow Silicon Valley to serve as Americaâ... s censor, or will we see a new kind of #WalkAway campaign?

Bin Laden Family Calls For Bloody Overthrow of Saudi Arabian Princes

BY BRIDGET JOHNSON

CHAT 70 COMMENTS

Hamza bin Laden (center) (CIA video)

Hamza bin Laden went after the Saudi kingdom's relationship with America in a new video intended to incite Muslims to rise up against Middle Eastern rulers they see as too allied with the West.

The video is the sixth episode in a series by the son of Osama bin Laden; Hamza said that in addition to trying to spur "our dear people in the Arabian Peninsula" to rise up "against the criminal tyrants and rulers of the country," al-Qaeda wants to incite people "to liberate the place of revelation from the Crusaders, and protect the Two Holy Mosques from the Safavids, and establish a complete and rightly guided Islamic system."

Al-Qaeda Bomb Tutorial Is a Free Download at Barnes & Noble

In the goal to "revive the jihad for the sake of Allah," bin Laden's heir pitched an al-Qaeda promise to "redistribute the riches of the country among the poor and the needy and the deserving, so that the sons of the country can live honorably and in strength in the shade of the Shariah of the Lords of the Worlds."

"It is incumbent upon our people in the Arabian Peninsula to prepare the equipment and materials, and prepare to protect the Two Holy Mosques," he urged, along with supporting AQAP "with money and men."

"Oh Muslim merchants, this is a chance for he who wants to obtain the honor of preparing an army to protect the Two Holy Mosques, and oh young Muslims, go forth lightly and heavily to your mujahidin brothers in Yemen the Land of Faith, to prepare the equipment and gain the necessary experience from them," he said.

Hamza bin Laden reached back to World War II to explain how the Saudi ruling family's "loyalty transformed from Britain to America with the end of the Second World War, after the British star faded, and the American star appeared in its place."

"The meeting of Abd al Aziz with Roosevelt was not ordinary but rather was a dangerous and fateful meeting that dragged the Islamic Ummah into calamities and disasters; which resulted in the establishment of stronger relationships with America at the expense of Britain, and Ibn Sa'ud agreed to allow American ships, and in using ports of the Land of the Two Holy Places as a large American air base, and became a region for the American army for a period of five years, then returned after that to as Sa'ud with all the facilities built in it," he said. "This was a dangerous step, the first beginning of the military crusader presence in the Land of the Two Holy Places."

The ethnic Saudi called King Abdulaziz bin Abdul Rahman, the founder of Saudi Arabia, "the greatest traitor."

"His sons and grandchildren still walk on the same path as their father," Hamza said, calling the head of the house "a scorpion."

Now in his late 20s, bin Laden was officially brought into the family business two years ago and was designated a terrorist by the United States in January 2017.

Bin Laden Docs Show Obama Misled, Politicized Intelligence During 2012 Campaign

Footage released last year by the CIA showed Hamza bin Laden at the Abbottabad compound in Pakistan, which was raided by the U.S. in 2011, resulting in Osama's death.

Osama's journal, also released by the CIA last week, shows the al-Qaeda leader talking about training Hamza on "Arab revolts"; Osama's writings revealed deep fascination with the Arab Spring uprisings. The elder bin Laden wrote about his son traveling to Qatar, "the safest side to avoid crises."

Hamza's mother is bin Laden's third wife, Khayriya Saber, who raised the boy in Iran after the 9/11 attacks per agreement between al-Qaeda and the regime in Tehran. Hamza would later receive some of his training from the Taliban.

He's been appearing more often in al-Qaeda propaganda as the terror group tries to woo the younger generation. In a November video and written statement, Hamza bin Laden urged retaliation against the specific Navy SEALs who raided the Abbottabad compound six years ago, killing his father, and urging young Muslims to revolt with a new, Shariah-based Arab Spring.

"The price of freedom is expensive, its bill exorbitant," he said. "Freedom cannot be earned with worthless pieces of paper cast inside a ballot box, nor by participation in polytheistic parliaments which legislate by man-made laws; itâ... s earned with the ultimate generosity, selfless sacrificeâ...! jihad and martyrdom."

Wikistrat bills itself as a â... crowdsourcedâ... analysis agency based in Washington. But interviews with current and former employees and documents tell a very different story.

EXCLUSIVE

KENDALL MCMINIMY/GETTY

In the fall of 2016, Donald Trump Jr. and other key aides to the future president reportedly met in Trump Tower with Joel Zamel, the founder of a company called Wikistrat.

Wikistrat bills itself as a â... crowdsourcedâ... geopolitical analysis firm based in Washington, D.C. But interviews with current and former employees and documents reviewed by The Daily Beast tell a different story: that the vast majority of Wikistratâ... s clients were foreign governments; that Wikistrat is, for all intents and purposes, an Israeli firm; and that the companyâ... s work was not just limited to analysis. It also engaged in intelligence collection.

Robert Muellerâ... s office is investigating Wikistrat and Zamel, according to The Wall Street Journal, as the special counselâ... s probe expands into Middle Eastern governmentsâ... attempts to influence American politics.

Publicly, Wikistrat touts its crowdsourcing interface it has described as â... Wikipedia meets Facebookâ... to develop reports for clients. The documents also highlight Wikistratâ... s heavy reliance on â... gamificationâ... â... applying game design features to encourage user engagementâ... to solicit information from sources. Former Wikistrat employees say its founder viewed himself as the Mark Zuckerberg of the national-security world.

But despite the firmâ... s purported commitment to â... transparent, open-source methodologies,â... the documents provided to The Daily Beast show something different: that the company exploits â... in countryâ...! informantsâ... as sources.

Wikistratâ... s â... Aboutâ... page includes mention of â... on-the-ground collection.â...

And according to internal Wikistrat documents marked â... highly confidential and sensitive material,â... 74 percent of the firmâ... s revenue came from clients that were foreign governments.

Although Wikistratâ... s clients were overwhelmingly foreign governments, the company boasted incredible access to top U.S. military and intelligence officials. The firmâ... s advisory council lists former CIA and National Security Agency director Michael Hayden, former national security adviser James L. Jones, former deputy director of the National Security Council Elliott Abrams, and former acting director of the Defense Intelligence Agency David Shedd, among others.

Perhaps itâ... s no surprise, then, that the companyâ... s website is adorned with the insignias of U.S. military agencies and that it claims D.C. as its headquarters.

But exactly how much of a connection these advisers have with the company isnâ... t totally clear. â... I have always been informalâ...! but I support the concept of their work (as my quote [on Wikistratâ... s website] points out),â... Hayden told The Daily Beast in an email. â... There is no paperwork between us and I have never been to a board meeting.â...

A former senior analyst for Wikistrat, James Kadtke, described his experience with the company to The Daily Beast. A physicist by training, Kadtke worked as a defense and technology adviser to Sen. John Warner from 2002-05 and as a senior fellow at the National Defense University before joining Wikistrat in 2016.

When Kadtke first interviewed with a couple of Wikistrat executives to discuss working for them, he said it became obvious to him that there was more to this company than meets the eye.

â... It was clear to me that both of these guys had intelligence backgrounds, intelligence professionals, not academics or analysts,â... Kadtke told The Daily Beast. â... They were using their experts for tacit information going on in various parts of the world. I got the impression they were doing things outside of Wikistrat. It seemed mysterious.â...

Working for Wikistrat didnâ... t seem to clear up Kadtkeâ... s questions. Kadtke said that, in retrospect, Wikistrat appeared to be more about intelligence collection than anything else.

Elad Schaffer, the Wikistrat CEO who succeeded Zamel this year, did not respond to a request for comment.

Asked about Kadtkeâ... s remarks about intelligence collection, one former high-ranking employee said, â... Could he [Wikistratâ... s founder] have done this? Yes, by all means,â... adding that Wikistratâ... s work â... was not limited to geopolitics.â...

HUSH HUSH

The documents provide rare insight into a company that Wikistrat employees repeatedly described as extraordinarily secretive.

â... Joel ran a very compartmentalized organization,â... one former high-ranking staffer said.

â... I felt like I had no real visibility into what the company was really doing,â... another former senior employee said.

â... He was very secretive, everything was highly compartmentalizedâ...! It was clear that he kept the entire company in the dark. Even [company executives] didnâ... t have the whole picture,â... a former employee said, adding that if someone took a photo at a company gathering, Zamel would leave the room.

â... He never allowed anyone to get near his phone, his laptop, stuff like that.â...

Even in the internal company documents, which include a page about the companyâ... s leadership, photos of each of the executives are includedâ... except Zamelâ... s.

â... I suspected he was involved in other stuff simply because a man without secrets doesnâ... t need to be secretive. If he had nothing to hide, he wouldâ... ve been much more open. I thought he was involved in other operations.â€¦

THE ISRAEL CONNECTION

If Wikistrat was engaged in intelligence collection, an obvious question arises: For whom?

Much of the reporting so far has focused on Wikistratâ€™s relationship with the United Arab Emirates. For instance, The New York Times recently reported a secretive Trump Tower meeting three months before the 2016 presidential election, between Donald Trump Jr., Zamel, and George Nader, an emissary for the UAE. The meeting drew comparison to the infamous Trump Tower meeting between Trump Jr., Jared Kushner, Paul Manafort, and a Russian lawyer with ties to the Kremlin.

Zamel is reported to have pitched Trump Jr. on a social-media manipulation strategy to help his father win the election. After Trump was elected, Nader is said to have paid Zamel a large sum of moneyâ€¦ as much as $2 million.

In light of the scrutiny of Zamelâ€™s ties to the UAE, itâ€™s natural that news coverage would focus on that country. But Wikistrat may, in fact, have stronger ties to Israel.

Zamel is a citizen of Israel and masterâ€™s graduate of IDC Herzliyaâ€¦ a small, elite college thatâ€™s often compared to U.S. Ivy League schoolsâ€¦ where he studied government, diplomacy, and strategy, specializing in counterterrorism and homeland security.

(The internal documents reviewed by The Daily Beast confirm that Zamel also owned the lionâ€™s shareâ€¦ 86 percentâ€¦ of Wikistrat, with the next biggest shareholder possessing less than 6 percent of the company.)

Though Wikistratâ€™s website lists its location as Washington, Kadtko said the company was run out of Israel the entire time he worked there.

A former Wikistrat employee confirmed the company was run out of Tel Aviv, with the D.C. office only handling sales and business development, he said.

â€¦ He knew a whole lot of people there [in Israel]. One of his connections was the former head of the [Israeli] intelligence directorate, Amos Yadlin.â€¦

In fact, each of Wikistratâ€™s principals listed Tel Aviv as their address in a 2015 copy of Wikistratâ€™s Virginia business license.

Former employees say that at the core of Wikistratâ€™s leadership were three Israelis: Daniel Green, the CTO, Elad Schaffer, formerly the COO and now the CEO, and Zamel, the founder and, until this year, its CEO.

â€¦ Those people were very close, and it wasnâ€™t just professional,â€¦ one former employee said.

That former employee added, â€¦ I had an initial conversation with Joel where I said, â€¦ One of the issues youâ€™re going to run into, if you want to be focused on [U.S.] government work, youâ€™re going to run into problems every day because of the Israeli connection.â€¦ He said, â€¦ Well, why is that? Theyâ€™re amazing allies?â€¦ â€¦

â€¦ There were many conversations internally [about this]... Israel is one of the top counterintelligence concerns for the U.S.â€¦

One of the internal documents reviewed by The Daily Beast lists a former â... major in [an] elite Israeli intelligence-analysis unit,â... Shay HersHKovitz, as its chief security officer and director of analytic community. That document also describes Schaffer as a former â... counterterrorism officer for Israeli intelligence.â...

â... Elad was involved in a very elite, select group of individuals performing a very important missionâ...! dealing with the height of the global war on terrorism,â... one former employee said. â... He did some collaborative work with U.S. special-operations counterparts who were working in the Middle East to deal with threats coming from al Qaeda.â...

â... Elad kept a very low profile.â...

Schaffer did not respond to a request for comment.

â... FLYNN TOOK A REAL SHINING TO JOELâ...

Zamel apparently wanted former national security adviser Michael Flynn to be a member of the firmâ... s advisory board; Zamel spoke with him about it on multiple occasions around the time Flynn was forming his ill-fated Flynn Intel Group, a former high-ranking Wikistrat employee told The Daily Beast.

â... Flynn took a real shining to Joel,â... the source said.

Another former Wikistrat employee appeared to confirm Zamelâ... s links to Flynn, saying a mutual contact, Adam Lovinger, helped introduce Zamel to numerous Pentagon officials. Lovinger, a Pentagon strategist and former Trump NSC analyst, had been named to the National Security Council by Flynn and was reportedly associated with Flynn Intel Group.

Flynn Intel Group would later be investigated by special counsel Robert Mueller in connection to a $530,000 payment it received from a company owned by a Turkish businessman close to Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan.

Lovinger told The Daily Beast that he had introduced Zamel to Pentagon officials after a Navy commander brought him to the Pentagonâ... s Office of Net Assessment.

â... I know both Joel and Mike Flynn, but I donâ... t know the extent of their relationship,â... Lovinger added.

Zamel had apparently been introduced to Flynn by Bijan Kian, Flynn Intel Groupâ... s former vice chairman of its board of directors, according to one source. Kian had been a partner at Flynn Intel Group and served as point man on Flynnâ... s discussions with Zamel.

Neither Flynn nor Kian responded to requests for comment.

â... Joel Zamel has never met Michael Flynn,â... Zamelâ... s attorney, Marc Mukasey, told The Daily Beast via telephone. Asked about Zamelâ... s relationship with Kian, Mukasey hung up.

However, shortly after this reportâ... s publication, Mukasey confirmed via email that Zamel had indeed communicated with Flynn. In an email to The Daily Beast, Mukasey wrote: â... Regarding Joel and Wikistrat, your information and your statistics and your numbers and your descriptions are flat-out wrong. Youâ... ve been fed misinformation (likely by a disgruntled ex-employee) or youâ... re simply making things up. By way of example, there was oneâ... and only oneâ... conversation with Flynn.â...

BUT WHY?

The appeal of working with a high-profile intelligence officer like Flynn is easy to see. Whatâ... s more opaque is why Zamel moved away from harvesting â... crowdsourcedâ... intel to making foreign deals.

The allure of quick and easy money from extravagantly wealthy Middle East leadership figures, coupled with an increasingly personal relationship with them, represented a â... shiny objectâ... that lured Zamel away from Wikistratâ... s original mission, a former senior Wikistrat employee said.

And although Zamel was rich, he might not have been wealthy enough to float Wikistrat on his own.

â... It was never clear to me how much Joel was actually paying out of pocket to subsidize the company vs. what was brought in,â... another former employee said. â... Clients paid decently but not enough to sustain the company. So Joel was either substantially funding the company or we were getting money from somewhere else. That naturally leads you to focus on non-U.S. sources of income.â...

The documents appear to corroborate this, showing that Wikistrat had been losing large amounts of money. For example, an income statement summary shows Wikistratâ... s income as -$603,000 in 2013, -$110,000 in 2014, and a projected -$773,000 for 2016.

Kadtke said that, toward the end of 2017, Wikistratâ... s ordinary operations (i.e., war games and analysis) went â... way down.â...

â... Around the beginning of 2017, the three people I knew there left very abruptlyâ...! The last study on the website was January 2017 (they used to do a lot). They seemed to have ceased operations,â... Kadtke said. â... It was very strange to me that they just sort of collapsed. It was probably a three-month period after which everyone I knew there left.â...

British Government Runs Secret Smear Campaigns

In 2015 the government of Britain launched a secret operation to insert anti-Russia propaganda into the western media stream.

We have already seen many consequences of this and similar programs which are designed to smear anyone who does not follow the anti-Russian government lines. The 'Russian collusion' smear campaign against Donald Trump based on the Steele dossier was also a largely British operation but seems to be part of a different project.

The 'Integrity Initiative' builds 'cluster' or contact groups of trusted journalists, military personal, academics and lobbyists within foreign countries. These people get alerts via social media to take action when the British center perceives a need.

On June 7 it took the the Spanish cluster only a few hours to derail the appointment of Perto Banos as the Director of the National Security Department in Spain. The cluster determined that he had a too positive view of Russia and launched a coordinated social media smear campaign (pdf) against him.

bigger

The Initiative and its operations were unveiled when someone liberated some of its documents, including its budget applications to the British Foreign Office, and posted them under the 'Anonymous' label at

The Initiative is nominally run under the (government financed) non-government-organisation The Institute For Statecraft. Its internal handbook (pdf) describes its purpose:

The Integrity Initiative was set up in autumn 2015 by The Institute for Statecraft in cooperation with the Free University of Brussels (VUB) to bring to the attention of politicians, policy-makers, opinion leaders and other interested parties the threat posed by Russia to democratic institutions in the United Kingdom, across Europe and North America.

It lists Bellingcat and the Atlantic Council as "partner organisations" and promises that:

Cluster members will be sent to educational sessions abroad to improve the technical competence of the cluster to deal with disinformation and strengthen bonds in the cluster community. [...] (Events with DFR Digital Sherlocks, Bellingcat, EuVsDisinfo, Buzzfeed, Irex, Detector Media, Stopfake, LT MOD Stratcom â... add more names and propose cluster participants as you desire).

The Initiative's Orwellian slogan is 'Defending Democracy Against Disinformation'. It covers European countries, the UK, the U.S. and Canada and seems to want to expand to the Middle East.

On its About page it claims: "We are not a government body but we do work with government departments and agencies who share our aims." The now published budget plans show that more than 95% of the Initiative's funding is coming directly from the British government, NATO and the U.S. State Department. All the 'contact persons' for creating 'clusters' in foreign countries are British embassy officers. It amounts to a foreign influence campaign by the British government that hides behind a 'civil society' NGO.

The organisation is led by one Chris N. Donnelly who receives (pdf) Â£8,100 per month for creating the smear campaign network.

From its 2017/18 budget application (pdf) we learn how the Initiative works:

To counter Russian disinformation and malign influence in Europe by: expanding the knowledge base; harnessing existing expertise, and; establishing a network of networks of experts, opinion formers and policy makers, to educate national audiences in the threat and to help build national capacities to counter it.

The Initiative has a black and white view that is based on a "we are the good ones" illusion. When "we" 'educate the public' it is legitimate work. When others do similar, it is disinformation. That is of course not the reality. The Initiative's existence itself, created to secretly manipulate the public, is proof that such a view is wrong.

If its work were as legit as it wants to be seen, why would the Foreign Office run it from behind the curtain as an NGO? The Initiative is not the only such operation. Its applications seek funding from a larger "Russian Language Strategic Communication Programme" run by the Foreign Office.

The 2017/18 budget application sought FCO funding of Â£480,635. It received Â£102,000 in co-funding from NATO and the Lithuanian Ministry of Defense. The 2018/19 budget application shows a planned spending (pdf) of Â£1,961,000.00. The co-sponsors this year are again NATO and the Lithuanian MoD, but also include (pdf) the U.S. State Department with £250,000 and Facebook with £100,000. The budget lays out a strong cooperation with the local military of each country. It notes that NATO is also generous in financing the local clusters.

One of the liberated papers of the Initiative is a talking points memo labeled Top 3 Deliverable for FCO (pdf):

- ◆ Developing and proving the cluster concept and methodology, setting up clusters in a range of countries with different circumstances
- ◆ Making people (in Government, think tanks, military, journalists) see the big picture, making people acknowledge that we are under concerted, deliberate hybrid attack by Russia
- ◆ Increasing the speed of response, mobilising the network to activism in pursuit of the '... golden minute'...

Under top 1, setting up clusters, a subitem reads:

- Connects media with academia with policy makers with practitioners in a country to impact on policy and society: (Jelena Milic silencing pro-kremlin voices on Serbian TV)

Defending Democracy by silencing certain voices on public TV seems to be a self-contradicting concept.

Another subitem notes how the Initiative secretly influences foreign governments:

We engage only very discreetly with governments, based entirely on trusted personal contacts, specifically to ensure that they do not come to see our work as a problem, and to try to influence them gently, as befits an independent NGO operation like ours, viz;

- Germany, via the Zentrum Liberale Moderne to the Chancellor's Office and MOD
- Netherlands, via the HCSS to the MOD
- Poland and Romania, at desk level into their MFAs via their NATO Reps
- Spain, via special advisers, into the MOD and PM's office (NB this may change very soon with the new Government)
- Norway, via personal contacts into the MOD
- HQ NATO, via the Policy Planning Unit into the Sec Gen's office.

We have latent contacts into other governments which we will activate as needs be as the clusters develop.

A look at the 'clusters' set up in U.S. and UK shows some prominent names.

bigger

Members of the Atlantic Council, which has a contract to censor Facebook posts, appear on several cluster lists. The UK core cluster also includes some prominent names like tax fraudster William Browder, the daft Atlantic Council shill Ben Nimmo and the neo-conservative Washington Post columnist Anne Applebaum. One person of interest is Andrew Wood who handed the Steele 'dirty dossier' to Senator John McCain to smear Donald Trump over alleged relations with Russia. A separate subcluster of so-called journalists names Deborah Haynes, David Aaronovitch of the London Times, Neil Buckley from the FT and Jonathan Marcus of the BBC.

A 'Cluster Roundup' (pdf) from July 2018 details its activities in at least 35 countries. Another file reveals (pdf) the local partnering institutions and individuals involved in the programs.

The Initiatives Guide to Countering Russian Information (pdf) is a rather funny read. It lists the downing of flight MH 17 by a Ukrainian BUK missile, the fake chemical incident in Khan Sheikhou and the Skripal Affair as examples for "Russian disinformation". But at least two of these events, Khan Sheikun via the UK run White Helmets and the Skripal affair, are evidently products of British intelligence disinformation operations.

The probably most interesting papers of the whole stash is the 'Project Plan' laid out at pages 7-40 of the 2018 budget application v2 (pdf). Under 'Sustainability' it notes:

The programme is proposed to run until at least March 2019, to ensure that the clusters established in each country have sufficient time to take root, find funding, and demonstrate their effectiveness. FCO funding for Phase 2 will enable the activities to be expanded in scale, reach and scope. As clusters have established themselves, they have begun to access local sources of funding. But this is a slow process and harder in some countries than others. HQ NATO PDD [Public Diplomacy Division] has proved a reliable source of funding for national clusters. The ATA [Atlantic Treaty Association] promises to be the same, giving access to other pots of money within NATO and member nations. Funding from institutional and national governmental sources in the US has been delayed by internal disputes within the US government, but w.e.f. March 2018 that deadlock seems to have been resolved and funding should now flow.

The programme has begun to create a critical mass of individuals from a cross society (think tanks, academia, politics, the media, government and the military) whose work is proving to be mutually reinforcing. Creating the network of networks has given each national group local coherence, credibility and reach, as well as good international access. Together, these conditions, plus the growing awareness within governments of the need for this work, should guarantee the continuity of the work under various auspices and in various forms.

The third part of the budget application (pdf) list the various activities, their output and outcome. The budget plan includes a section that describes 'Risks' to the initiative. These include hacking of the Initiatives IT as well as:

Adverse publicity generated by Russia or by supporters of Russia in target countries, or by political and interest groups affected by the work of the programme, aimed at discrediting the programme or its participants, or to create political embarrassment.

We hope that this piece contributes to such embarrassment.

The British government has been running a serious meddling into the US affairs:

<https://www.zerohedge.com/news/2018-11-23/mi6-scrambling-stop-trump-releasing-classified-docs-russia-probe>

"The UK's Secret Intelligence Service, otherwise known as MI6, has been scrambling to prevent President Trump from publishing classified materials linked to the Russian election meddling investigation.

... much of the espionage performed on the Trump campaign was conducted on UK soil throughout 2016."

A Steele & Skrupal's anti-Russian / anti-Trump saga: <https://spectator.org/big-dots-do-they-connect/>

"Gregory R. Copley, editor and publisher of Defense & Foreign Affairs, posited that Sergei Skripal is the unnamed Russian intelligence source in the Steele dossier. ... In Skripal's pseudo-country-gentleman retirement, the ex-GRU-MI6 double agent was selling custom-made Russian intelligence; he had fabricated material that went into the Steele dossier..."

For MI6 to expose this level of stupidity is stunning.

thanks b.... this movement in the west by gov'ts to pay for generating lies, hate and propaganda towards Russia is really sick... it is perfect for the military industrial complex corporations though and they seem to be calling the shots in the west, much more so than the voice of the ordinary person who is not interested in war.. i guess the idea is to get the ordinary people to think in terms of hating another country based on lies and that this would be a good thing... it is very sad what UK / USA leadership in the past century has come down to here.... i can only hope that info releases like this will hasten its demise...

Seems to me that this shows the primacy of the City of London, with its offshore network of illicit capital accumulation, within Britain. It is a state within a state or even a financial empire within a state, which, for deep historical reasons isn't subject to the same laws as the rest of the UK. The UK's pathological obsession with Russia only makes sense to me as the city's insistence on continued 90s style appropriation of Russia's wealth

Let the Doxx wars begin! Sure, Anonymous is not Russian but it will surely now be targeted and smeared as such which would show that it has hit a nerve. British hypocrisy publicly called out. How this all unravels is one to watch. Extra large popcorn and soda for me.

I think we've all noticed the euro-asslantic press (and friends) on behalf of, willingly and in cooperation with the British intelligence et al 'calling out' numerous Russians as G(R)U/spies/whatever for a while now yet providing less than a shred of credible evidence.

It seems to me that the UK has far more to lose from doxxing than Russia does. The interference in sovereign allied states to 'manage' who the UK thinks they should appoint does not bode well for such relations.

Meanwhile in Brussels they are having their cake and eating it, i.e. bemoaning Europe's 'weak response' to Russian propaganda:

<https://www.euractiv.com/section/global-europe/news/experts-lament-underfunding-of-eu-task-force-countering-russia>

"In 2015 the government of Britain launched a secret operation to insert anti-Russia propaganda into the western media stream."

I doubt very seriously that the British launched this operation without the CIA's implicit and explicit support. This has all the markings of a John Brennan operation that has been launched stealthily to prevent anyone from knowing its real origins.

The Brits don't act alone, and a project of this magnitude did not begin without Langley's explicit approval.

Now check out the wording in the above document:

"Funding from institutional and national governmental sources in the US has been delayed by internal disputes within the US government, but w.e.f. March 2018 that deadlock seems to have been resolved and funding should now flow."

Think about that.

What would have blocked the flow of USG support for this project??

Why, the allegations of collusion against Trump, of course. Naturally, the Republicans are not going to provide money to an operation that threatens to destroy the head of their own party. So, there has been no bipartisan agreement on funding for anti-Russia propaganda

BUT...the author assures us that the "deadlock seems to have been resolved and funding should now flow"

Huh??

In other words, the fix is in. Mueller will pardon Trump on collusion charges but the propaganda campaign against Russia will continue...with the full support of both parties.

I could be wrong, but that's how I see it...

This mob was created in the autumn of 2015, according to their site. That would have been about the time -- probably just after -- the Russians intervened in Syria. The Brits had plans for an invasion of Syria in 2009, according to their fave Guardian fish wrap. A lot of sour grapes with this so-called 'integrity initiative', IMO. BP was behind a lot of this, I would also think. When Assad pulled the plug on the pipeline through the Levant in 2009, the Brits hacked up a fur ball. It's gone downhill for them ever since. Couldn't happen to a nicer lot. If you can't invade or beat them with proxies, you can at least call them names.

Any

Pat Lang posted a report that strongly implies that charges of Russian influence on Trump are a deliberate falsification: THE CHIMERA OF DONALD TRUMP, RUSSIAN MONEY LAUNDERER:

If Trump was taking dirty money or engaged in criminal activity with Russians then he was doing it with Felix Sater, who was under the control of the FBI... And who was in charge of the FBI during all of the time that Sater was a signed up FBI snitch? You got itâ... Robert Mueller (2001 thru 2013) ...

It seems quite possible that what is alleged as "Russian meddling" is actually CIA-MI6 meddling, including:

Steele dossier

To create suspicion in government, media, and later the public

Leaking of DNC emails to Wikileaks (but calling it a "hack")

To help with election of Trump and link Wikileaks (as agent) to Russian election meddling

Cambridge Analytica

To provide necessary reasoning for Trump's (certain) win of the electoral college.

Note: We later found that dozens of firms had undue access to Facebook data. Why did the campaign turn to a British firm instead of an American firm? Well, it had to be a British firm if MI6 was running the (supposed) Facebook targeting for CIA.

As I have said before, MAGA is a POLICY RESPONSE to the challenge from Russia and China. The election of a Republican faux populist was necessary and Trump, despite his many flaws, was the best candidate for the job.

"things didn't go as planned for the expropriation of russia after the fall of the soviet union.. it seems the west is still hurting from not being able to exploit russia fully, as they'd intended..."

They shot at an elephant and failed to kill it.

So yes, out of the combo of frustration, resentment, and fear they hate the resurgent Russia and prefer Cold War II, and if necessary WWIII, to peaceful co-existence. Of course the usual corporate imperative (in this case weapons profiteering) reinforces the mass psychological pathology among the elites.

The ironic thing is that Putin doesn't prefer to challenge the neoliberal globalist "order" at all, but would happily see Russia take a prominent place within it. It's the US and its UK poodle who are insisting on confrontation.

Since UK has always blocked the "European Intelligence" initiative, on the basis of his pertenance to the "Five Eyes", and as UK is leaving the European Union, where it has always been the Troy Horse of the US, one would think that all these people belonging to the so called "clusters" should register themselves as "foreign agents" working for UK government...and in this context, new empowered sovereign governments into the EU should consider the possibility expelling these traitors as spies of the UK....

As if The Guardian needs any more persuasion or encouragement to recede deeper into its labyrinthine network of rabbit-holes. Britain has been a US dog for years, most overtly in Blair's time over Iraq and Afghanistan, but things haven't really changed. Britain's military has become more and more dependent on the US. There is no longer an independent nuclear deterrent - the weapons are rented from the US, and I'm certain that they couldn't be used without US approval (sure to be a backdoor somewhere in the electronics which would enable the US to turn them off, if the US disagreed). The F35s they've insisted on buying are probably in the same situation.

They're not slaves, or rather 'vassals' - the current word of sensitivity about the EU. More active collaborators, which implies initiatives also stemming from Britain.

One should also recall Britain's function as US agent in the European Union. They were opposed to many EU proposals, obviously to fit in with US desires. The most recent example is the Galileo GPS system - they were opposed to it for years, but as Ivan Rogers told us (former Brit ambassador to the EU), the opposition he was instructed to make failed.

It's all gone off a bit recently though. Trump is not interested in Britain in the way Obama was. Brexit is a nativist movement, not what America wants. If Brexit goes through finally, the interest of the US will be even less, as we can no longer intervene on the US's behalf in Europe.

@zanon... thanks, but the list given for usa/canada has only one person on it that appears to be a canuck - glen howard.. and unless it is a different glen howard, the guy is some curling wiz, but no mention of his anti-russian credentials... his e mail address is given as jamestown.org which is connected to the jamestown foundation.. turns out, he is not a canuck either - "Glen Howard President

Mr. Howard is fluent in Russian and proficient in Azerbaijani and Arabic, and is a regional expert on the Caucasus and Central Asia. He was formerly an Analyst at the Science Applications International Corporation bottom line - as a sensitive canuck, i think someone needs to change the list to say usa and remove canada, as no canucks are on the list from the small research i did...

that is the sad thing about canada - it gets lumped in with the usa for good and bad on a regular basis... maybe they could put crystia freelands name on this list... i think she would qualify as a rabid anti-russia canuck...

I don't think it was the Republican party that was the source of the deadlock.

I think it may have been Tillerson. He had close ties to Russia and in March 2018, he was forced out of State and Pompeo came in.

"President Donald Trump nominated Pompeo as Secretary of State in March 2018, with Pompeo succeeding Rex Tillerson after his dismissal."

That's a decent salary. He probably can work from home too - like Bellingcat. A fake NGO operating with fake "integrity" to identify "fake news". Everything is rather upside-down these days. Good to have all those names attached. Where's C Summers on the list? - maybe he never realized till now the monthly salaries available.

Russian disinformation is much less important than the work of the GRU which has been active in western elections and stirring up trouble in the Balkans and Ukraine. It's clear that Russian disinformation and lies were exposed by the indictment by Mueller of the Internet Research Agency. Russia is playing a divisive role on the western debate over immigration, refugees, foreign policy (NATO) etc., but the GRU has been doing the real damage.

The GRU was exposed hacking the campaign headquarters of France and the US turning the emails over to WikiLeaks in an attempt to elect Le Pen and Trump, respectively. GRU agents were identified on CCTV in the attempt to murder the Skripals. Both GRU agents were identified by Bellingcat. Bellingcat identified a second GRU agent in a failed attempt in a 2016 coup in Montenegro (<https://www.bellingcat.com/news/uk-and-europe/2018/11/22/second-gru-officer-indicted-montenegro-coup-unmasked>). The motive was preventing Montenegro from joining NATO (thus proving its necessity). Both GRU agents in the Montenegro coup attempt are currently wanted by Interpol. According to Bellingcat, their "....findings directly contradict Kremlinâ... s statements that â... Popovâ... was an innocent Russian tourist unjustly accused by a hostile foreign government....". This was the same alibi attempted by the Russian government before the two suspects in the attempted assassination of Skripal were identified as GRU agents.

The GRU continues to be active in the Balkans according to the Intercept (<https://interc.pt/2TdVvCN> by @mazmhussain):

".....As part of a broader program of support for illiberal forces in Europe, Russian President Vladimir Putin has also emerged as a patron of Dodik. With Russian assistance, the police forces of Republika Srpska have undertaken an ominous program of militarization, with weapons and training provided by Russian advisers. Russian-owned state media outlets have also been accused of spreading sectarian propaganda in the country, adding to a febrile climate of ethnic tension and atrocity denial that Dodik has been glad to capitalize on....."

Paul Goble adds

(<https://jamestown.org/program/moscow-using-serbs-against-bosnia-as-it-did-ethnic-russians-against-ukraine/>):

".....Suljagic.....said that â... the Kremlin wants to begin a conflict â... in the Ukrainian styleâ... in Bosnia-Herzegovinaâ... and to that end has been training police and paramilitary groups from the [Republika Srpska within Bosnia-Herzegovina] in Russia and providing them with weapons....."

The GRU have also been recently exposed in attempts to infiltrate the OPCW and a US nuclear energy company (<https://thebea.st/2O6EyLw?source=twitter&via=desktop> via @thedailybeast):

".....The Department of Justice revealed that the GRU targeted U.S. and international sports anti-doping agencies in cyberattacks, as well a U.S. nuclear energy company that supplied fuel to Ukraine, leading to charges of hacking, wire fraud, identity theft, and money laundering.

The Netherlands named four Russian military intelligence officers in a failed April cyberattack on the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW)â... the group responsible for investigating the Sergei Skripal poisoning and a Russia-linked chemical attack in Syria....."

While the GRU has seemed more like the Keystone cops than the perceived well oiled intelligence agency, they still can count as successful helping to elect Trump (whether it can be proven or not). Their work in the Balkans continues in a program of destabilization.

What I love about this whole saga was the insertion of a fanzine created on 4Chan. The stuff about the prozzies, the pee, Obama's bed was pure 4Chan, initially created to harass a Nevertrumper. It shows just how inept MI6, GCHQ and the CIA are, allowing their own prejudices to lead them into a wonderfully embarrassing situation. No matter how great their 'reach' as shown by this document dump, they chose to include the most preposterous nonsense in what was supposed to be serious research, and they paid a fortune for it.

CHARACTER ASSASSINATION PROGRAM AGAINST TRUMP STILL GOING STRONG

There was a great deal of news this past week about President Trump’s audacious disregard for the advice and warnings from his own intelligence community experts.

Perhaps there’s good reason for alarm.

But I think there’s one shocking aspect – perhaps a larger story – that’s gone virtually unreported. It appears that anonymous intelligence officials are executing an operation against the sitting commander-in-chief. It might not qualify as all-out mutiny, but it’s also not all that far from one.

Right under our noses, while still under investigation for allegedly orchestrating leaks and undermining candidate Trump in 2016, some in the intel community are orchestrating leaks and undermining President Trump in 2019.

There’s evidence of the existence of such an operation from the Inspector General, various congressional probes, and investigative reporting. They’ve alleged, and in some cases concluded, that some top intel officials improperly leaked information to the news media and engaged in politically motivated surveillance practices involving multiple Trump associates.

In the newest press salvo, unnamed intel officials fanned out to air anonymous grievances against their commander-in-chief. They provided details of classified briefings and made inflammatory charges, such as that President Trump is – endangering American security – with his – stubborn disregard – and – willful ignorance. Disseminating these details, if true, could be seen as assisting our enemies.

Also cause for concern is the media’s role in this operation, whether witting or not. Many in the press dutifully parroted these grievances in one-sided accounts with virtually no counterpoints, as if it’s inconceivable that these intel officials could be capable of flaws or conflicted by political motivations. Some reporters seem to think that – intel, – as distilled and presented by these officials, is somehow beyond question.

In fact, history teaches us the opposite can be true.

Past intel failures

The 9/11 terrorist attacks are perhaps the most dramatic modern example of failures within our intelligence community, and a reason to question intel assessments.

Because of the attacks, widespread reforms were instituted. Yet after the reforms, there’s been a legacy of intel abuses flagged by the Inspector General, investigative reporters and the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court overseeing sensitive requests for surveillance of U.S. citizens.

Further, some intel officials sometimes have proven they simply are not to be believed. For example, FBI Director Christopher Wray repeatedly has insisted there have been no – 702 – surveillance abuses – a reference to Section 702 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA), authorizing intelligence-gathering from internet traffic and phone calls – despite detailed findings from the Inspector General and the FISA Court saying just the opposite.

Former Director of National Intelligence James Clapper, now an anti-Trump activist, provided false information under oath to Congress in 2013 when he said no mass spying occurred on tens of millions of Americans. When his testimony was proven inaccurate, he apologized and said heâ misunderstood the question.

Former CIA Director John Brennan, also now an anti-Trump activist, falsely assured the Senate that the CIA had not spied on Senate staffers. He, too, later apologized after an inspector general confirmed the spying had happened.

Are such officials to be uncritically, automatically believed when they bring complaints about their political enemies to the press?

Besides alleged deception by some intel officials in the past, the judgment and assessments of the intelligence community have been called into question on occasion.

For example, Russia twice alerted our intel officials about a man who had come to the U.S. and was known to be affiliated with Islamic extremists. However, the FBIâ assessment didnâ find any particular risk. The man went on to become one of the Boston Marathon bombers in 2013, murdering three people and injuring several hundred. There are many other examples of foreign terrorist threats being on the intel communityâ radar but going unrecognized or undeterred.

On the anniversary of the 9/11 attacks in 2012, the intelligence community failed to anticipate potential risks in the Middle East. Even after protesters attacked the U.S. embassy in Egypt, U.S. officials failed to respond by repositioning resources in the area. Hours later, the terrorist attacks on the U.S. compound in Benghazi, Libya, seemed to catch officials by surprise; four Americans, including the U.S. ambassador, were killed. A post-mortem revealed there had been a great deal of intelligence that warned of an impending attack.

Presumably, presidential briefings and assessments prior to these events would have been flawed or incomplete.

Presidential interactions with intel

President Trump isnâ the first commander-in-chief to question his intelligence briefers, yet the officials typically didnâ go public with their gripes.

Some of the leaked information is designed simply to embarrass and discredit him, deriding his lack of knowledge. For example, one intel leaker said that, in a briefing, Trump didnâ know Nepal was an independent nation. Yet, no such official concern was expressed about gaffes or information lapses under other presidents.

In 2014, for example, President Obama publicly called ISIS the â J.V.â team, creating one of two implications: Either his intel briefings sorely failed to identify the threat of this emerging Islamic extremist terror group or, if they did correctly assess the ISIS threat and convey it to the president, he disagreed with them.

According to intel sources, there were instances of President Obama refusing intelligence on certain matters on which heâ made up his mind. In at least one case, he reportedly told a briefer not to bring him any more information on one terrorism topic; if the material were presented to him, he said, he wouldnâ read it.

President Obama withdrew from Iraq against the recommendations of his military advisers, generals and secretary of State. He approved the disastrous takedown of Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, and reportedly ordered aid to the wrong side in Syria, instead helping jihadist groups. All of these actions were either with the advice â... or against the advice â... of his intel officials.

And thereâ... s one infamous case where it can be argued that we could have benefitted from a president treating his intel with skepticism. Before President Bush launched the war against Iraq in 2003, a huge intelligence lapse led to the erroneous reporting that Iraq had weapons of mass destruction.

In the end, President Trump could be right or wrong. And the way he interacts with his intel officials deserves news coverage and scrutiny. But we should refrain from one-sided reporting based on anonymous, orchestrated leaks by people who clearly seek to use the media to sway public and political opinion.

Our intel community â... especially today, with its recent conduct under scrutiny â... should not be immune from healthy skepticism. These latest press reports are a pretty good indication that, for some intel officials, their operation against the commander-in-chief continues.

CHARACTER ASSASSINS AND RETRIBUTION SERVICES AGENCY: FUSION GPS

â... Journalism for rentâ... : Inside the secretive firm behind the Trump dossier

By Jack Gillum and Shawn Boburg December 11 at 12:50 PM

Fusion GPS founder explains why he started the research firm

Glenn Simpson, founder of Fusion GPS, spoke at the 2016 Double Exposure Investigative Film Festival and Symposium, an event conducted by 100Reporters. (Double Exposure Investigative Film Festival and Symposium)

Fusion GPS bills itself as a corporate research firm, but in many ways it operates with the secrecy of a spy agency. No sign marks its headquarters above a coffee shop in Northwest Washington. Its website consists of two sentences and an email address. Its client list is closely held.

The small firm has been under intense public scrutiny for producing the 35-page document known as the Trump dossier. Senior executives summoned to testify before Congress in October invoked their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, and the firm is resisting a congressional subpoena for bank records that would reveal who has paid for its services.

But hundreds of internal company documents obtained by The Washington Post reveal how Fusion, a firm led by former journalists, has used investigative reporting techniques and media connections to advance the interests of an eclectic range of clients on Wall Street, in Silicon Valley and in the nationâ... s capital. The firm has played an unseen role in stories that dominated headlines in recent years.

Today's Headlines newsletter

The day's most important stories.

In the years before it produced the dossier, records show, Fusion worked to blunt aggressive reporting on the medical-device company Theranos, which was later found to have problems with its novel blood-testing technology. It was also hired to ward off scrutiny of the nutritional supplement company Herbalife, which ultimately paid $200 million to distributors to settle claims by regulators.

In another case, the firm sought to expose what it called â... slimy dealingsâ... by a competitor of a San Francisco museum proposed by filmmaker and â... Star Warsâ... director George Lucas. And it dug up information about domestic disputes involving a former mayor of Beverly Hills, Calif., as part of an investigation into a proposed real estate development that the mayor supported.

Fusionâ... s other past research targets, documents show, included tech giants Google and Amazon; 2012 presidential candidates Mitt Romney and Barack Obama; and Republican Sens. Ted Cruz of Texas and Bob Corker of Tennessee. (Amazon chief executive Jeffrey P. Bezos owns The Washington Post.)

Fusion assigned code names to the projects â... many of them after cities in Texas and Maine â... and avoided identifying its clients in internal documents, making it difficult to determine who was paying for the research. The firm also minimized its public footprints by paying outside contractors to collect public records from courthouses, police stations and federal agencies.

The Post's review provides a glimpse at the tactics that have fueled Fusion's rise in the growing and secretive industry of opposition research and corporate intelligence. The review represents the most comprehensive look at the firm's work at a time when it is being examined by those who seek to gauge the veracity of the dossier, and it reveals methods that have drawn criticism from the targets of the company's research, including President Trump.

Fusion's work on the dossier went beyond ordinary opposition research, the kind that might explore a candidate's past legislative history or embarrassing gaffes known in the industry as votes and quotes. Instead, it paid a former British spy to compile intelligence from unnamed Russian sources.

Only a handful of internal documents obtained by The Post relate to the examination of Trump during the 2016 election, a project that was code-named Bangor and was financed in part by Hillary Clinton's campaign.

Fusion declined to comment on specific cases or identify clients, but said in a statement that it is proud of our methodology and the rigor of our research, amply demonstrated by the records cited by The Washington Post. They show what we've always stated: Our secret sauce is diligent and exhaustive analysis of public information.

It continued: The reason we are so effective is that we unearth facts that stand up to scrutiny presumably why we are still talking about our work detailing the connections between the Trump campaign and Russia more than a year later.

Exposing slimy dealings

Fusion founder Glenn Simpson, an accomplished former investigative reporter with expertise digging into financial crimes and corruption in Russia and elsewhere, left the Wall Street Journal in 2009 to start a research firm with Susan Schmidt, a two-time Pulitzer Prize winner from The Post. Without Schmidt, Simpson created Fusion GPS the following year, teaming up with former Wall Street Journal editor Peter Fritsch and a former Treasury official.

I call it journalism for rent, Simpson, 53, said in August of last year at the Double Exposure Investigative Film Festival and Symposium in the District, where he described Fusion's work on a panel titled, Investigations With an Agenda.

Fusion has about 10 employees, he said. It has worked on a broad array of cases, including matters related to marijuana dispensaries, health-care workers, a state insurance official and even a Florida homeowner's association, internal documents show.

Fusion has also quietly advocated causes and pet projects dear to wealthy and famous clients.

In April 2014, Lucas wanted to build a cultural arts museum on federal land at the foot of the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco, a site known as the Presidio. The museum was one of three proposals under consideration by a federal agency called the Presidio Trust.

A Fusion client who is not identified in the documents obtained by The Post suspected the agency was trying to block the Lucas museum, records show.

We want to understand where this resistance is coming from and why, Fritsch wrote in an email to his Fusion colleagues. Fritsch added that the â... client would like to expose the slimy dealingsâ... of a nonprofit competing with Lucas for the right to build on the land. The investigation was code named â... Tyler.â...

Ron Conway, one of Silicon Valleyâ... s most prolific start-up investors and an outspoken supporter of the Lucas museum, was copied on subsequent emails about the cost of the research. â... I donâ... t have any comment,â... Conway said by phone when asked if he had hired Fusion.

Over the next nine months, a contractor hired by Fusion blanketed the Presidio Trust and another federal agency with dozens of requests for a range of documents related to board members and a consultant who were judging the proposals â... expense reports, ethics forms, employment contracts and other records.

In February 2015, with Fusion still waiting for the documents, Conway sent an email to Fritsch with a link to a story in the San Francisco Chronicle. It was about a petition, signed by celebrities such as Hall of Fame quarterback Joe Montana and hip-hop artist MC Hammer, calling on the Presidio Trust to release some of the same records Fusion had requested.

â... WE ARE OFF AND RUNNING !!â... Conway wrote. Fritsch forwarded the email to other Fusion executives and said, â... GLORIOUS!!!â...

Itâ... s not clear whether the effort had the desired effect. The Presidio Trust ultimately rejected all three proposals. A spokeswoman for Lucas told The Post in a statement that Lucas was â... unaware of any research undertaken by Fusion GPS.â... A Presidio Trust spokesman did not respond to messages from The Post seeking comment.

Fusion has at times used hardball tactics, the documents show.

Last year, Fusionâ... s sleuths targeted a controversial proposal for a $1.2 billion hotel and condo project in Beverly Hills, in the heart of one of the nationâ... s wealthiest areas, records show. The investigation was code named â... Gray.â...

Fusionâ... s client is not identified in the records reviewed by The Post, but the documents show that Fusion investigated the activities of the Chinese developer behind the project, Wanda Group, there and in other U.S. cities.

As part of its research, Fusion took aim at a vocal supporter of the Beverly Hills project, then-mayor John Mirisch, records show. Fusion sought police reports from the city related to domestic disputes involving the mayor and his ex-wife that had occurred between 2008 and 2010, records show.

Former Beverly Hills mayor John Mirisch at City Hall in August 2016. (Ricardo DeAratanha/Los Angeles Times)

When city police balked at releasing some of the police reports, a Fusion contractor sued the city. Neither the public-records requests nor the legal complaint mentions Fusion. The suit was filed by former journalist Russell Carollo, who is described in court records as a public records consultant.

Fusion executive Jason Felch, a former investigative reporter with the Los Angeles Times, emailed Carollo on July 21, 2016, with a statement he could give reporters inquiring about the lawsuit. The statement suggested that the mayor might be supporting the Wanda Group project because he owed a favor to a retired police chief who worked for a firm that was lobbying the city on behalf of the hotel, records show. The statement also argued that the public had a right to see the records involving the mayor.

Two weeks later, Carollo was quoted in the local newspaper, the Beverly Hills Courier, under a story headlined: "... Pulitzer Prize-winning Journalist Petitions Court For Public Information On Mayor's Domestic Disputes With Ex-Wife..."

In an interview, Mirisch said he had no idea that Fusion was behind the renewed scrutiny of the years-old domestic disputes. "... It was dirty politics and misinformation," said Mirisch, now a city council member.

Carollo said in an interview that he worked for Fusion and was asked by the firm to file the lawsuit. In a statement, Fusion wrote: "... Our policy prohibits any employees or contractors from misrepresenting themselves as journalists or anything else..."

A spokesman for the Beverly Hills hotel project, which remains in planning stages, declined to comment. The retired police chief, Dave Snowden, said in an interview, "... Hearing this, that the mayor owed me a favor, is absurd on its face..."

Behind-the-scenes player

Fusion insists that the firm does not engage in public relations work or advertise its media connections to prospective clients. But Fusion executives have interceded with former colleagues in media when their clients came under scrutiny, records and interviews show.

In mid-2015, Fusion was conducting research on two competitors of Theranos, a Silicon Valley start-up that had created buzz in the health-technology industry. Around the same time, the Wall Street Journal was pursuing its own Theranos reporting, which ultimately raised doubts about the accuracy of the company's revolutionary lab-testing technology. Fusion, working on behalf of Theranos, tried to influence the Journal's early reporting, according to records and interviews.

Fusion called the case "... Ferris..."

A few weeks after Journal reporter John Carreyrou approached Theranos about his investigation into the company, Fritsch contacted him to create a back channel, according to documents and a person familiar with the Journal's reporting who was not authorized to speak publicly.

Fritsch advised the reporter that his approach with Theranos up to that point had been too blunt and aggressive, and he encouraged him to soften it, the person said. Fritsch also accompanied a Theranos delegation that went to the Journal's newsroom in June 2015 to discuss the story with Carreyrou and his editor. The delegation, made up mostly of lawyers, was headed by prominent attorney David Boies.

Over the ensuing years, Theranos "... once valued at $9 billion ..." faced regulatory actions, including in 2016 losing its certificate to operate a blood-testing lab in California and its eligibility to receive Medicare and Medicaid payments. The company reached a settlement in April with the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, agreeing not to operate a lab for two years in exchange for the restoration of its certificate.

... The Wall Street Journal published its award-winning series on Theranos despite legal threats and strenuous objections from the company and its representatives, "... a spokeswoman for the paper said in a statement.

A representative of Boies's law firm, Boies Schiller and Flexner, referred comment to Theranos. A Theranos representative declined to comment.

Fusion was also a behind-the-scenes player in a Wall Street battle between billionaire investor William Ackman and the supplement company Herbalife, records show.

Ackman had a huge financial stake in Herbalifeâ... s fate. He had taken a short position in the company â... meaning if the company failed, his investment would pay off big. Ackman held news conferences calling for regulatory and criminal investigations into Herbalife, alleging that the companyâ... s network of distributors was effectively a pyramid scheme.

Herbalife had Fusion working on its side in a project that carried the code name â... Rice,â... documents show. Fusion launched investigations into Ackman and his hedge fund, Pershing Square Capital Management, according to emails and internal documents.

Herbalifeâ... s attorney and outside publicist are copied on some emails that discussed strategy for uncovering public records that would expose whether Ackman was paying nonprofit groups to criticize Herbalife. Fusionâ... s contractors were looking for information that would spark government investigations into Ackman, documents show.

In June 2014, Richard Hynes, a contractor for Fusion, noted that the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission and the New York Attorney Generalâ... s Office had previously conducted investigations that touched on Ackman, emails show.

â... Nothing seems to have come from them,â... he wrote. â... I wonder what the SEC and NY AG DIDNâ... T have to make their cases. What else could we provide them this time to effect a different outcome,â... he asked. Simpson soon instructed a Fusion contractor to request the SECâ... s case file on closed investigations into Ackman or his firm, Pershing Square, documents show.

It was Herbalife that fell under investigation. In 2016, it agreed to a $200 million settlement with the Federal Trade Commission over allegations that it deceived buyers and sellers of its products. Herbalife did not respond to a request for comment, and Hynes did not respond to messages.

A â... no-stones-unturnedâ... approach

As Fusion has been thrust into the spotlight because of the Trump dossier, it has been forced to reveal details of its operations in court proceedings.

Over objections from Democrats, the Republican leader of the House Intelligence Committee, Rep. Devin Nunes (Calif.), subpoenaed Fusionâ... s bank records to try to identify the then-mystery client who paid for the dossier. In October, Fusion executives invoked their constitutional right not to answer questions from the committee.

Fusion founder Glenn Simpson, left, arrives for an appearance before a closed House Intelligence Committee hearing in Washington on Nov. 14. (Associated Press)

Simpson had previously sat for a 10-hour closed-door interview with members of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which is also looking into allegations of foreign influence in the 2016 U.S. presidential election. He has also testified before the House committee behind closed doors.

For its investigation into Trump, Fusion was initially hired in the fall of 2015 by the conservative Washington Free Beacon website. The publication is backed by billionaire GOP donor Paul Singer, who was then supporting Sen. Marco Rubio (Fla.) in the GOP primary.

The Post revealed in October that Fusion was paid, via a law firm, by the Clinton campaign and the Democratic National Committee for its work on the dossier.

After Trump won the primary, Fusion approached Marc Elias, a partner at the law firm Perkins Coie who represented the Democratic Party during the 2016 election. Perkins Coie decided the party needed to go deeper than traditional, issue-oriented opposition research groups â a â no-stones-urned approach,â according to a person familiar with the arrangement who was not authorized to speak publicly.

A spokeswoman for Perkins Coie said Trump â was unvetted by the political process â a businessman with significant real estate holdings both in the United States and around the globe, a history of litigation, financial problems and bankruptcies, and of a decidedly litigious nature,â adding that â the challenge of reviewing public-record information alone on his candidacy necessitated additional research.â

Simpson and Fritsch had worked on stories involving money laundering and Russian government officials while based in Brussels for the Journal. They knew how to pull documents around the world â a skill that had earned them work from top law firms.

â Iâ ve known Glenn for a long time,â said John W. Moscow, a former prosecutor and now a lawyer with the firm BakerHostetler, which hired Fusion to assist in defending the Russian company Prevezon in a civil money-laundering case. â When we need information from various parts of the world, he can go get it. We hire him on a per-case basis because heâ s good.â

Earlier this year, Prevezon settled the suit, brought by the Justice Department, for $5.9 million without admitting guilt.

For its work on the dossier, Fusion hired Christopher Steele, a former British intelligence officer who had worked extensively in Russia. In a statement, Fusion said Perkins Coie paid it $1.02 million for work in 2016, and it said Fusion paid Steeleâ s firm, Orbis Business Intelligence, $168,000.

[*\[Clinton campaign, DNC paid for research that led to Russia dossier\]*](#)

The dossier alleged that the Russian government had collected compromising information on Trump and that the Kremlin was trying to assist his campaign. Officials have said that the FBI has confirmed some of the information in the dossier but the most sensational details have not been verified and may never be.

As the dossier circulated among Washington journalists late last year, senior U.S. officials viewed the matter as serious enough to brief then-President-elect Donald Trump on its existence. And when BuzzFeed published the document online in early January, the dossier â particularly its more salacious claims â gripped the nation.

In recent weeks, Trump and congressional Republicans have seized on the Clinton campaignâ s role in the dossier to try to discredit suggestions that his campaign colluded with Russia.

At the August conference last year, Simpson said his firm upholds strict standards developed in his years as a journalist.

â You canâ t just say what you know. You have to say how you know it. And you have to be able to prove it,â he said. â That imposes a sort of discipline to the investigative process that people in other fields donâ t really absorb.â

He was candid about the money involved. Explaining why he left journalism, he joked: â We donâ t use the word â sold out.â We use the word â cashed in.â â â

Matt Zapotosky and Ellen Nakashima contributed to this report.

CIA Coined and Weaponized The Label Conspiracy Theory

The inception of the C.I.A. was in 1947 and this â... psychâ... dispatch went out in 1967. Ever been called a â... conspiracy theoristâ... ? Ever wonder where that term came from?

In 1976 the New York Times obtained a document they requested via the Freedom of Information Act.

This document was a C.I.A. Dispatch labeled â... psychâ... for â... psychological operationsâ... that was distributed in 1967, indicating they coined the phrase â... conspiracy theoryâ... and â... conspiracy theoristsâ... to attack anyone who challenged the official narrative from the Warren Commission. It also has a CS indicated on it, which stands for â... clandestine servicesâ... unit.

• Who will cave first over the government shutdown?

These labels have continued ever since they coined the phrase in the 1960s, with the intention of stifling any truths from getting out. Pay close attention to those using the labels and the information they are referring to. This will be your first clue that truth lies within and they are trying to deflect it. The bottom line is there are hundreds if not thousands of conspiracies taking place all around us legitimate ones. While they are busy misdirecting with their conspiracy theorist labels, evidence is being dug up, they are being exposed, and what they claim to be theory is TRUTH.

There are some disputes out there as to whether the C.I.A. was the first to use the term because it has been printed in a handful of political books from the late 1800s. The inception of the C.I.A. was in 1947 and this psych dispatch went out in 1967. It is from that point on that the term conspiracy theory and conspiracy theorist have been shoved down our throats. It was weaponized, just as so many other labels have been used to distract, manipulate and change the narrative to suit their agenda.

CIA Whistleblower Says He Was Targeted By Brennan, Mueller, Strzok

| Politics

Chuck Ross | Reporter

- A former CIA officer who revealed the agency's waterboarding program to the media claims that he was targeted for retribution by some of the same government officials investigating President Donald Trump.
- John Kiriakou tells The Daily Caller News Foundation what roles John Brennan, Robert Mueller, and Peter Strzok played in an investigation that he claims was intended to set him up with an espionage charge.
- Kiriakou claims he was targeted in a sting operation directed by Strzok.

When the FBI asked John Kiriakou to meet at the Washington field office in January 2012, the former CIA officer says he gladly agreed to the request.

“Anything for the FBI,” Kiriakou told the FBI agent who contacted him.

Months earlier, as a senior investigator on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Kiriakou had helped the FBI investigate a Japanese diplomat who had approached him offering a bribe.

Or so he thought.

Instead, Kiriakou says the FBI was running a sting operation against him for what he claims is payback for revealing secrets about the CIA's waterboarding program.

The government officials behind that investigation have resurfaced in the probe of the Trump campaign, which officially began as an FBI matter on July 31, 2016 and is now overseen by the special counsel's office.

As the Obama White House's number 2 official on the National Security Council at the time, John Brennan ordered the Justice Department to charge Kiriakou with espionage, Kiriakou says. As FBI director, Robert Mueller formed a 12-person task force to investigate the 15-year CIA veteran. And as a top counterintelligence official at the FBI's Washington office, Peter Strzok oversaw the investigation and arrested Kiriakou on Jan. 15, 2012.

“It's no coincidence that the same people who were implicated in my case are implicated in these attacks against the president,” Kiriakou told The Daily Caller News Foundation.

Kiriakou, 54, says that some of his supporters have directly raised the pardon issue with Trump.

Kiriakou's nightmare began years before his interview with the FBI, in December 2007, after he revealed in an on-camera interview with ABC News that the CIA had waterboarded Abu Zubaydah, a Saudi national who the CIA falsely believed was al Qaeda's No. 3 official. Kiriakou, the chief of counterterrorist operations in Pakistan, had helped capture Abu Zubaydah in March 2002.

He resigned from the CIA in 2004 and joined the private sector.

After the ABC interview, Kiriakou was approached by numerous journalists hoping to speak with the first former CIA official to go on the record to speak about the CIA torture program. In exchanges with three of those journalists, Kiriakou revealed the identities of two CIA officers, one of whom had helped him capture Abu Zubaydah.

Kiriakou maintains that his disclosure were inadvertent and that he believed he was confirming information that the journalists already had. While Kiriakou has expressed remorse for sharing the names with reporters, he and his supporters have argued that none of the officers were threatened or harmed, and no CIA methods exposed. The CIA submitted a "... crimes report..." after Kiriakou's comments, but the George W. Bush Justice Department decided against opening an investigation.

That changed just after President Barack Obama took office in January 2009.

"... What we found in discovery was a memo from John Brennan to the Justice Department saying '... charge him with espionage,'..." says Kiriakou.

When the Justice Department responded that Kiriakou had not committed espionage, Brennan responded, "... Charge him with espionage anyway and make him defend himself,"... says Kiriakou.

Years later, as CIA director for Obama, Brennan played an early role in the investigation of possible links between the Trump campaign and Russian government.

According to the book "... Russian Roulette,"... in August 2016, Brennan attempted to pressure then-Senate Minority Leader Harry Reid to publicize alleged links between the Kremlin and Trump campaign.

(RELATED: Congressional Investigators Trying To Get To The Bottom Of John Brennan's Role In Russia Investigation)

Brennan's Kiriakou memos have not been made public. Kiriakou says they were provided to his attorneys solely for his case and returned to the Justice Department.

Deputy Assistant FBI Director Peter Strzok testifies before a joint committee hearing of the House Judiciary and Oversight and Government Reform committees in the Rayburn House Office Building on Capitol Hill July 12, 2018 in Washington, DC. (Photo by Chip Somodevilla/Getty Images)

Kiriakou was aware that he attracted scrutiny following his media appearances but believed he faced no legal jeopardy. After a stint in the private sector, Kiriakou took the job with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which was chaired at the time by then-Massachusetts Sen. John Kerry. It was in that role that Kiriakou says he was targeted in the FBI sting attempt.

The operation was undertaken by a 12-man "... Kiriakou task force..." set up by Mueller, who served as FBI director until 2013. The FBI declined comment on a list of questions about its investigation of Kiriakou.

In early 2011, Kiriakou met with the Japanese diplomat as he did with many other foreign dignitaries as part of his job. The pair communicated in Arabic, which Kiriakou speaks fluently, because the Japanese diplomat spoke poor English.

At the end of their first meeting, Kiriakou says that the diplomat asked about his future plans. When Kiriakou said he was considering leaving the committee, the diplomat urged him to stay.

â... No, I will pay you money,â... the diplomat said, according to Kiriakou.

Kiriakou says he reprimanded the diplomat and reported the incident immediately to the Senate security office.

Days later, two FBI agents contacted Kiriakou and asked him to maintain contact with the diplomat and to arrange another lunch meeting. Kiriakou had four other meetings through April 2011 with the diplomat, summarizing all of them in detailed reports to the FBI.

Kiriakou recalls the day that he first met Strzok.

â... It was the worst day of my life,â... he told TheDCNF.

Kiriakou says he got a call from one of the FBI agents he had worked with on the Japanese diplomat case.

â... You remember you helped us with that case about a year ago. Well we have a similar case, and we need your help,â... Kiriakou recalls the FBI agent saying over the phone.

As The Washington Post reported on Aug. 13 in a profile of Strzok, the Kiriakou investigation helped cement the FBI agentâ... s reputation in the bureau. He would become better known â... infamous, perhaps â... after helping lead the investigations into former Secretary of State Hillary Clintonâ... s private email use and possible collusion between the Trump campaign and Russian government.

Strzok oversaw the latter investigation, which operated under the code name Crossfire Hurricane.

When Kiriakou visited the Washington Field Office, he says that he was asked to help investigators figure out how his photo and those of nearly two dozen more current and former CIA officers had ended up in the prison cell of a Guantanamo Bay prisoner.

Kiriakou told the agents he had no idea how the photographs ended up at Gitmo.

But about an hour into his interview, which was in a room used for conversations about classified topics, the FBI agents revealed their true interest in Kiriakou.

â... In the interest of full disclosure, I should tell you that right now weâ... re executing a search warrant at your house and seizing your electronic devices,â... one agent said, Kiriakou recalled to The New York Times in 2013.

Kiriakou first remembers Strzok after his interrogation.

â... When I came out of this interrogation, I heard him say, â... tell me he implicated himself,â... Kiriakou recalled of Strzok to TheDCNF.

â... The other FBI guy said, â... he didnâ... t, not really anyway.â...â...

â... Am I under arrest?â... Kiriakou asked.

â... Not yet,â... Strzok replied.

Kiriakou was arrested the following Monday. Strzok was the agent who handcuffed him.

â... What they did was they played on my patriotism. What they did is they tricked me into going down there to help them catch a spy,â... says Kiriakou.

Kiriakou, who now hosts a radio show for Sputnik International and works as an advocate for whistleblowers, was indicted on April 5, 2012 on five charges related to the disclosure of classified information, including the identities of covert CIA officers.

Kiriakou, who notes that he is the only CIA officer to face any charges related to the illegal torture program, initially planned to take his case to trial. But he says that the financial strain and a threat of decades in prison convinced him to accept a plea deal. He was sentenced to 30 months in federal prison on Jan. 25, 2013 after pleading guilty to leaking classified information to journalists.

Three espionage charges initially filed against him were dropped. He was released from prison on Feb. 3, 2015, after serving a 23-month sentence.

Kiriakou is unable to hide his satisfaction at Strzokâ... s sudden downfall.

â... Washingtonâ... s a small town, and karmaâ... s a bitch,â... Kiriakou says of Strzokâ... s fate. â... And now itâ... s Peter Strzokâ... s turn to have his career and his reputation dragged through the mud.â...

Confessions of An "Economic Hitman" - Peels Back A Thick Layer of What's Going On \(books\)

by duh\_1234

The book goes into how "economists" will propose an idea like building a bridge or dam. Then the country will take out debt to build it hoping to make a return based on the projections. Next, big corporations come in and do the work for juicy margins. Except the projections are way above what they will ever get. So then the country has to make mineral concessions to satisfy the debt.

Oh, and if a country refuses or tries to skip payment, then there are coups if not invasions. If the big news corps are running campaigns about how X is the next great evil, then it shows who the next smear campaign is against.

One by one countries got this treatment. Now the only countries left are those in the West. And would you look at where that script just happens to be rolling against now....

You can find the book in all major bookstores and there are probably other versions floating around since it sold a good number of copies.

I think the whole structure he lays out is literally how the CIA funds itself, or rather the way US intel colludes and uses private corporations to take over or overthrow countries and economies. Heâ... s very careful not to directly point a finger at the CIA directly, but there is no chance private corporations would be allowed to run direct scams for the IMF and World Bank like that without a major military arm concenting to it at the very least. Another book on exactly how the CIA runs it own private corporations and even political candidates completely secret from even the POTUS and National security council is â... The Secret Teamâ... by Fletcher Proudly, the real life CIA insider Oliver Stone put in the end scene of JFK on the park bench with Kevin Cosner. State, County and local Govt's do this all the time. Especially with School projects in Blue State Northeastern US. They come out with a proposal to re-surface a gymnasium or add an extension to a school building. The costs are exceptionally high, then balloon up even higher. Almost always the Contractor is related to or a political crony of someone in the County or locality, and they get the contract, an the taxpayers get soaked with the bill. A never ending cycle of corruption and insider deals. The Book is by J. Perkins, a VERY good read for the Summer by the pool or at the beach, and very accurate in it's presentations:

This support thread from LinkedIn proves that LinkedIn is monitoring and restricting views of your postings based on their own â... Approvedâ... political beliefs, and it explicitly says so in LinkedIn's own support thread.

Please share this with your network so we can put as much pressure as possible on LinkedIn to change this censorship policy.

The following is a support thread from LinkedIn regarding a political discussion about James Comey, director of the FBI. The discussion was critical of his decision not to recommend prosecution of Hillary Clinton over the use of a private email server. The full text of the censored discussion posted on LinkedIn follows this blog posting here, and can be viewed on LinkedIn at Click here.

<https://www.linkedin.com/pulse/clinton-lynch-comey-time-line-does-add-up-dana?trk=mp-author-card>

The posts from the support thread are in chronological order:

It starts with me submitting a support request to LinkedIn asking why one of the comments on a posting I created was removed.

Auto-response from LinkedIn.

Some back and forth and submitting additional evidence of censorship.

You can scroll down to the disturbing parts ...

Scroll Down ...

Scroll Down ...

Scroll Down ...

Scroll Down ...

Notice the claim here that "LinkedIn would never proactively delete a comment..."

Scroll Down ...

Scroll Down ...

Here the LinkedIn support person admits that LinkedIn removed the comment and for a very disturbing reason ... LinkedIn does not allow discussions about certain "political beliefs", as of yet, unidentified.

So I asked for a list of those political beliefs that are not allowed on LinkedIn ...

A new LinkedIn support person takes over and completely contradicts all previous responses by LinkedIn. They also attempt to repeat a lie, even though the response was proven to be a lie earlier in the thread ...

At this point the LinkedIn support person abruptly closed the case, I reopened it immediately...

Then suddenly, for no apparent reason, the number of views on this posting went from almost zero, to almost 20 in a couple of hours. And this was weeks after it was originally posted, so the interest in the topic of the article had waned by that time.

The above graph tells me that after I caught them in the act of censoring my posts, LinkedIn subsequently changed some "view limiter" setting that allowed this post to receive more views. However I doubt they removed the limitation completely, given the censorship mentality revealed.

In this reply from LinkedIn, they are not even attempting to pretend they do not have a censorship list based on political views.

They say the list exists and is internal and private!!!

They also say there was a "miscommunication" about the comment being deleted by LinkedIn. Since we already know that LinkedIn deleted the comment, I interpret this to mean that the support person was not supposed to tell me they deleted it.

Are we, the LinkedIn users, on some sort of super-secret double probation that only LinkedIn knows about?

Again the LinkedIn support person closed the case. Again I immediately reopened the case, and recognizing a dead end, I asked that my issue be escalated to the next support level.

And it appears that we will be discussing the list of disallowed political beliefs with a new LinkedIn support person soon ...

And it begins again ... sigh. The new LinkedIn support person attempts to disavow any knowledge of censorship at LinkedIn, and it is a person from the same group identified previously as the group who initiated the censorship!

I tell the new support person that censorship is not the issue anymore, it has been proven and acknowledged by LinkedIn. The issue is making the list of disallowed political views public so that LinkedIn customers know whether or not to express an opinion on these topics.

Another response from LinkedIn, another denial, kinda, sorta ... This time they admit to censorship "through automated tools", then deny the automated tools locate or remove content based on political views. OK, then on what basis are the automated tools removing content? Please provide that list of rules, that is all I am asking for!

Here I ask for the censorship rules for reviewing content associated with the automated tools referenced in the last response by LinkedIn Support:

Just when I think that LinkedIn support can't get any more despicable, they prove me wrong! They just got even more despicable, they closed the support ticket without response and without notification in the hope that I wouldn't notice and it would just go away. I NOTICED!

I reopen the case and ask it to be immediately escalated to LinkedIn Management.

In the latest response, LinkedIn Support completely ignores my request to escalate this to LinkedIn Management, and they do not address the fact they attempted to close the case without response or notification. Again they admit they censor content using automated tools but refuse to tell the LinkedIn users what the censorship rules are governing those tools. Again they close the case without resolution.

I reopen the case and identify the latest reply from LinkedIn Support as being not responsive to my request to escalate this case to LinkedIn Management. Again I request escalation...

This support case has been open for over a month now and LinkedIn support is ignoring it.

Stay tuned to the continuing saga...

I exposed millions in fraud and CRIMINAL RETALIATION by BellevueWASchools. They wasted over a million dollars destroying me for a decade as a union officer who defended the rights of dozens of workers. LinkedIn retaliated with a corrupt sponsor of illegal activity at BellevueWASchools. They routinely limited views on my posts and just eliminated thousands of followers with my account. I've helped the FBI take down much bigger criminals than these wanbabes.

This makes sense because I noticed after I posted a document off of document Cloud about Trump's old lawyer speaking to Congress for 3 days and Trump's net worth. Dana, I read the entire thread, and I can very much understand your frustration and concern. LinkedIn's responses not only obfuscate the obvious, but also pander without really addressing the reality. I will look forward to any future developments (but not really optimistically that anything will actually be done by LinkedIn - they seem to be in the same position as Facebook)....

liberalism is baked into the social media cake. Free speech is under assault, most obviously on many college campuses, but also in the news media, which presents a conformist view to its audience and gets a politically segregated audience in return.

So many inexplicable occurrences for we who are more Conservative politically. As a for instance, a few weeks ago - I was posting articles and comments, but no one was replying or commenting on the articles which were extremely unusual. A couple of my friends emailed me privately to ask me why I had deleted my profile. I hadn't deleted my profile, but none of my friends and contacts could not see the profile, my comments or the articles posted. I could still log in and everything looked normal from my end. Everything looked to post as usual. I emailed LI help center to ask why no other person in the Linkedin universe could see my profile but me and mentioned the term "veiled discrepancy". Immediately my profile was taken down so even I couldn't see my profile any longer. Next LI sent me a message that I would have to furnish a copy of my driver's license front and back and they would see if they could restore my profile. I complied and was immediately restored. The kicker was I then asked repeatedly why they took my profile down and they repeatedly said, "It was just a LI mistake". Really? A mistake? Now I ask you, why would LI take down my profile - a paying customer - and require DL pictures after being on LI since 2009 with 23,500+ contacts, recommendations and endorsements of people I have done business with at this time without viewing the profile and telling me why they were taking my profile down. BTW - I don't use bad language or personally attack anyone. Any idea why they would do such a thing to an Independent Constitutional Conservative?

Reading the original discussion will help to understand why LI did what they did. By interpreting the message's tone and political-severity of the topic(s); I think would help to know the "why" in all this. I think it's terrible what happened and any discussions on politics should be treated fairly and with respect for one another's views.

HOW TO FIGHT BACK:

EVERY EXECUTIVE AND INVESTOR FROM LINKEDIN IS NOW HAVING THESE TACTICS UNDERTAKEN AGAINST THEM. AS A MEMBER OF THE PUBLIC, YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF TO HELP WIPE OUT CORRUPT LINKEDIN:

HOW WE ARE ENDING CORRUPTION IN AMERICA - THE PROCESS

- Every member of the public should join in these citizen sleuth and crowd-sourced anti-corruption actions to wipe out corrupt LINKEDIN

This is what they did to us simply because we reported a crime to federal law enforcement....so we watched, we learned, we waited and now we have struck back! If it was legal for them to try to execute us, our lives and our brands this way, then it must be legal for us to do it right back to every single one of them for the rest of their lives. There is now nothing they can do to stop what is coming. Even if we are dead, a billion others have already taken our place!

These are the 100% legal steps, tactics, methodologies and procedures being used to end political corruption in America. Every citizen, in every nation, is encouraged to engage in these efforts:

- Draft versions of FBI "302 Reports", on each and every suspect in the associated list of targets, (in these related documents) are being authored and submitted to the FBI. We will teach you how to write and submit them too!
- These sites, and the associated evidence repositories, have been electronically made available to every FBI agent, Interpol Agent and law enforcement agency in the world.
- Criminal complaints and investigation demands are being authored and submitted to the DOJ, FTC, FEC, SEC, SSA, OSC, CIA, GAO, Congress and each Inspector General.
- We have forced over 100 agency heads to resign simply by providing them with copies of the Draft versions of FBI "302 Reports" on them that we intend to submit.
- We have produced an analysis chart template, with the help of Wikileaks, ICIJ, Sunshine Groups, Follow-the-Money and other database efforts. This chart depicts a graphic analysis of each suspects collusion's, bribes and compromised assets.
- We are teaching and providing forensics and criminal investigation training to the public so that the public is as resourced as any special agent. A vast number of "how to be a private investigator" books have been published on Amazon, E-Book sites and shared online.

- Confirming copies of all submitted reports are digitally carbon-copied to the press, the public and global "dead-man switch" torrent archives.
- We created a new series of public lawsuits, anti-trust lawsuits, RICO lawsuits and class-action lawsuits by the public and against the targets. These lawsuits have now placed permanent public transparency on record and changed the law to help the public and stop the crooks.
- We have exposed their Silicon Valley Bay Area, New York And Florida executive sex trafficking rings.
- Billions of members of the public are monitoring the suspects via public database information and public shared observation of their activities, locations, owner-ships and transactions via each member of the public's personal computers.
- We identified and listed every person, organization and company involved in the attacks and RICO law violations and provided that list to The U.S. Congress and every agency.
- We opened our own private investigator and crowd-sourced investigations into the following:
  - - Every stock market account they or their family owns
  - - Every Uber or Lyft ride they ever took for any meeting or transport of sex workers
  - - Every flight manifest they appeared on
  - - Every bank account they have ever held
  - - Every lawsuit, divorce record and police record they have ever appeared in
  - - Every trust fund they or their family holds
  - - Every shell corporation they, or their family holds
  - - Every person named in the Epstein Pedo book:
<https://www.scribd.com/document/416207833/Jeffrey-Epsteins-Little-Black-Book-Redacted> cross referenced across all of the other databases and then supplied to the FBI and Child Protection Agencies
  - - Every item in the Swiss Leaks that cross connects to their holdings
  - - Every item in the Panama Papers Leaks that cross connects to their holdings
  - - Every item in the WikiLeaks that cross connects to their holdings
  - - Every item in the Snowden Leaks that cross connects to their holdings
  - - Every sex trafficking incident that connects to each of them alone, and in groups
  - - Every financial transaction between any of the parties on the master list and the character assassination and hit job firms of: Google, Univision, Gawker Media, Unimoda, Jalopnik, Gizmodo, Black Cube, Fusion GPS, Media Matters, Think Progress, IN-Q-Tel, K2 Intelligence, WikiStrat, Podesta Group, YouTube, Alphabet, David Drummond, Larry Page, Facebook, Correct The Recor, Stratfor, ShareBlue, Sid Blumenthal, David Brock, Eric Schmidt, Sunshine Sachs, Covington and Burling, BuzzFeed, Perkins Coie and Wilson Sonsini or their derivatives with common owners.
  - - Every use of Mossack Fonseca and related crooked CPA's, Banks and Tech Law Firms they engaged in
  - - Every item in the Quest Leaks that cross connects to their holdings
  - - Every tactical deployment, by a campaign financier, of the tactics listed in this manual:
<https://www.cia.gov/library/readingroom/docs/CIA-RDP89-01258R000100010002-4.pdf>
  - - Every sex service that their credit card payments every connect too
  - - Every person leaving or entering locations where they sleep
  - - Every real estate transaction that any name or company they, or their family, were involved in, tracks to

..... and hundreds of thousands of other information points about them that prove that they benefit from crimes that they engage in for others who engage in crimes using the America public policy system.

It all goes into shared 100% legal public collaborative databases that work like XKEYSCORE, or MS Access, or Oracle Databases.

The proof of collusion, organized criminal actions and raw covert corruption is indisputable. The actors are all the same people. The beneficiaries are all the same people. The communications between the parties all coordinate the same actions.

The suspects will never get away with these crimes and these actions and investigations will be conducted on a permanent basis and passed from person-to-person and generation-to-generation.

Every new candidate for office suspected of similar bribes and collusion's will undergo the same circumspection.

We are not a club or membership group. You are us. If you are reading this, just start doing the things listed here and do them as professionally as you can.

We are freely providing the tools, technologies and mass publishing systems, to the billions of members of the public who would like to be involved in anti-corruption actions. All of the technology is open-source.

Character Assassin David Brock from Media Matters Was Behind Lisa Bloom Effort To Bring Forward Sexual Harassment Claims Against Trump

by Joshua Caplan

- 1.7KShare
- 222Tweet
- Email

Veteran Democrat activist David Brock contributed funds to attorney Lisa Bloom's effort to bring forward sexual harassment allegations against Donald Trump prior to election day.

As The Hill's John Solomon recently reported, Bloom's efforts to bring forward accusers included offering to sell alleged victims' stories to TV outlets in return for a commission for herself, arranging a donor to pay off one Trump accuser's mortgage and attempting to secure a six-figure payment for another woman who ultimately declined to come forward after being offered as much as $750,000.

New York Times reports:

Ms. Bloom would not identify the donors. But two Democrats familiar with the arrangements said a nonprofit group founded by Mr. Brock, American Bridge 21st Century Foundation, gave $200,000, while the fashion entrepreneur Susie Tompkins Buell, a major donor to Mr. Brockâ... s suite of groups, gave $500,000 to Ms. Bloomâ... s firm for the last-ditch effort. [â...]

Mr. Brock declined to comment, and representatives from Mrs. Clintonâ... s campaign said they were unaware of his work with Ms. Bloom.

In October, Brock told POLITICO that he would bankroll any Trump accusers who sought to come forward.

â... We would pay for the legal defense of Trump accusers,â... Brock told POLITICO.

In the same report, disgraced attorney Gloria Allred told POLITICO, â... If any women who are making allegations of inappropriate [conduct] contact me, I would be happy to speak to them and then decide if I would be able to represent them.â...

*The Hill*â... s John Solomon reported on December 18th that accuser Jill Harth begged Donald Trump to be his makeup artist before her sexual assault allegations against the candidate resurfaced during the 2016 presidential election. Harth was represented by none other than Gloria Allredâ... s daughter, Lisa Bloom.

The Hill reports:

A New York cosmetics executive who publicly alleged Donald Trump sexually assaulted her in the 1990s repeatedly solicited the future president to become his campaign makeup artist and to pitch her new product line in the months before her story roiled the 2016 race, according to the woman and her contemporaneous emails.

â... Hi Donald, you are doing a tremendous job of shaking things up in the United States. I am definitely on Team Trump as so many others are,â... Jill Harth wrote the future president in an Oct. 1, 2015, email sent to him through his New York companyâ... s headquarters.

â... I canâ... t watch television without seeing you or hearing your name everywhere! Itâ... s a good thing for sure but PLEASE let me do your makeup for a television interview, a debate, a photo session, anything!â... Harth wrote.

In an email written on January 5th, 2016, Harth even promised to made public statements in support of Trump as a man of integrity that â... treated women nicely, including herself.â...

â... I also want to put it out there that I would be willing to say at a rally or somewhere how [Trump] helped me with my self-confidence and all positive things about how he is with women to counter any potential negativity that may come out at some point in the campaign,â... Harth wrote to Trumpâ... s business assistant Rhona Graff.

House Democrats mistakenly release transcript confirming big payout to Clinton Character Assassins Sidney Blumenthal And David Brock

Sidney Blumenthal, a longtime confidant of Hillary Clinton's, told congressional investigators he earned "about $200,000 a year" from a pro-Clinton nonprofit. (Susan Walsh / Associated Press)

By Evan Halper

The Democrats on the House Benghazi committee released their final conclusions from the inquiry into attacks on Americans in that Libyan city in 2012, and in the report they say, once again, that the investigation is a politically motivated sham aimed at damaging the reputation of Hillary Clinton.

But the report, which the Democrats published as a preemptive strike before the Republican majority releases findings likely to charge ineptitude and deception by the former secretary of State, also revealed, apparently unintentionally, details about the eye-popping amount of money a close Clinton friend and advisor made in a contract with a pro-Clinton nonprofit.

Democrats released but redacted a transcript of Clinton confidant Sidney Blumenthal answering the committee's questions to make the point that Republicans do not want the public to know what went on during the his interrogation, during which GOP members arguably used their subpoena power to conduct political opposition research unrelated to Benghazi.

Election 2016 | Live coverage on Trail Guide | Sign up for the newsletter

But the redaction marks are easily erased by anyone able to use a computer's cut-and-paste function. Once the marks are lifted, the transcript portion reveals some unflattering things for any partisans on the committee, Republican or Democrat. It shows that Republicans did, indeed, leverage their subpoena of Blumenthal for political gain, digging into his financial contracts with David Brock and forcing him to reveal the details of a lucrative financial arrangement that congressional sources would ultimately leak to Fox News.

And for Democrats, the exchange exposes once again the absurd amounts of money people in the orbit of the Clintons sometimes seem to rake in just for, well, being in the orbit of the Clintons. "I'd say it's about $200,000 a year," Blumenthal said when asked by a committee member how much the part-time work offering up advice and ideas was worth.

Redacted due to Chairman Gowdy's refusal to allow release of transcript, says a footnote to the pages of thick black redaction marks. "If released, the transcript would show that Republicans asked Mr. Blumenthal questions about his relationship with Media Matters, David Brock and Correct the Record. Brock is a longtime Clinton loyalist, and Correct the Record and Media Matters are among the nonprofits he uses to attack Clinton opponents.

And how did Blumenthal get such a contract? "I have had a very long friendship with the chairman of Media Matters, whose name is David Brock, from before he founded this organization, and I have sustained that friendship. And he asked me to help provide ideas and advice to him and his organizations," Blumenthal said.

Actually, the two got to know each other during the impeachment of Bill Clinton, during Brock's former incarnation as a right-wing hit man journalist. He was starting to undergo his political conversion and in the process was feeding then-White House aide Blumenthal intelligence about what the right was plotting against Bill Clinton. Both men wrote about it in their books.

Below is the full transcript excerpt that Democrats intended not to publish. It is unclear who the questioner is in the first section.

Q: Did you ever receive any payment from an organization called Media Matters?

A: Oh, yes. I did. I did receive payment in that period from Media Matters.

Q: Okay. And what was your relationship with Media Matters at that time period?

A: I was a consultant to Media Matters. I'm sorry I'm...

Q: That's okay.

A: I overlooked that.

Q: When did you become a consultant for Media Matters?

A: I would say the very end of 2012.

Q: Okay. And how did that come about, that you became a consultant for Media Matters?

A: I have had a very long friendship with the chairman of Media Matters, whose name is David Brock, from before he founded this organization, and I have sustained that friendship. And he asked me to help provide ideas and advice to him and his organizations.

Q: So you began your relationship, your paid relationship, with Media Matters at the end of 2012.

A: Right.

Q: Does that continue to this day?

A: It does.

Q: Okay. And what is your salary or your contract with Media Matters? How much money are you earning from them?

A: I'd say it's about $200,000 a year.

Q: And has that been roughly consistent from when you began receiving payment from Media Matters?

*[redacted due to Chairman Gowdy's refusal to allow release of transcript].

A: I would say it's... I'd have to check. I think it's increased a little bit. It's increased some.

Q: Okay. Are you familiar with the organization American Bridge?

A: Yes.

Q: Have you received any compensation from American Bridge over the last five years?

A: Yes.

Q: Okay. And how much compensation have you received from American Bridge?

A: Well, when I talk about that amount of money, I mean all of those organizations.

Q: So all of David Brock's entities are...

A: Right.

Q: ... combined are 200,000?

A: About.

Q: Okay.

A: Something like that.

Q: Okay. So there's American Bridge.

A: Yes.

Q: There's Media Matters.

A: Right.

Q: Are there any other organizations on which you have done work for Mr. Brock?

A: Correct the Record

Q: Okay.

A: ... is another organization.

Q: Okay.

A: And then there's the American Independent Institute, which is a journalistic foundation.

Q: So, when you receive your paycheck, who signs the paycheck? Where does that come from?

A: It's deposited directly. I imagine it comes from David Brock.

Q: Okay. Not David Brock personally but one of his ...

A: Whoever ... whoever is responsible for that payment.

Blumenthal and Republican Select Committee Member Mike Pompeo had the following exchange about Correct the Record:

Q: Fair enough. I'm going to jump around a little bit. You said I think earlier this morning that you still are working for Correct the Record?

A: I am.

Q: And tell me what the mission of Correct the Record is.

A: Correct the Record is pretty much what it says, to correct â... itâ... s a nonprofit organization to correct the record about public misstatements about prominent Democrats.

Q: Including this committee. If this committee said something, Correct the Record might comment on things that it said incorrectly and indeed it has?

A: That may well be so.

Q: Have you written any of that?

A: No.

Q: Yeah. So you havenâ... t made any comments as part of your role in Correct the Record related to this committeeâ... s work? You havenâ... t written any â...

A: I have not written those.

Cisco sneaks another hardcoded secret root backdoor into video surveillance kit

Who watches the watchers? Anybody who has the login

By Richard Chirgwin 22  SHARE

It's a giant city-destroying bug - geddit, bug? Software bug?

If you run Cisco's video surveillance kit, hop over to Switchzilla's support site and download the latest version of its management software.

Late last week, the networking giant admitted that its Cisco Video Surveillance Manager Appliance has an undocumented root account with static hard-coded credentials.

Reading between the lines, someone created the `secret` account during product development, and forgot about it: The root account of the affected software was not disabled before Cisco installed the software on the vulnerable platforms.

Because the hard-coded account has administrator-grade root privileges, an attacker able to reach the equipment over the network can do anything once they've logged in.

From its CVE-2018-15427 advisory: "A vulnerability in Cisco Video Surveillance Manager (VSM) Software running on certain Cisco Connected Safety and Security Unified Computing System (UCS) platforms could allow an unauthenticated, remote attacker to log in to an affected system by using the root account, which has default, static user credentials.

This vulnerability affects Cisco Video Surveillance Manager (VSM) Software Releases 7.10, 7.11, and 7.11.1 if the software was preinstalled by Cisco and is running on the following Cisco Connected Safety and Security Unified Computing System (UCS) platforms: CPS-UCSM4-1RU-K9; CPS-UCSM4-2RU-K9; KIN-UCSM5-1RU-K9; KIN-UCSM5-2RU-K9.

Products in the clear are releases earlier than VSM Software 7.9; later versions if they were installed as upgrades to VSM 7.9; or VSM Software VMWare's ESXi platform. ®

Former Director of National Intelligence (DNI) turned CNN commentator James Clapper not only leaked information related to the infamous "Steele dossier" to CNN's Jake Tapper while Clapper was in office - it appears he also lied about it to Congress, under oath.

Clapper was one of the "two national security officials" cited in CNN's report -published minutes after BuzzFeed released the full Steele dossier.

The revelation that Clapper was responsible for leaking details of both the dossier and briefings to two presidents on the matter is significant, because former Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) director James Comey wrote in one of four memos that he leaked that the briefing of Trump on salacious and unverified allegations from the dossier was necessary because â... CNN had them and were looking for a news hook.â... -The Federalist

So Comey said that Trump needed to be briefed on the Dossier's allegations since CNN "had them" - because James Clapper, the Director of National Intelligence at the time, provided that information to the same network he now works for.

And who's idea was it to brief Trump on the dossier? JAMES CLAPPER - according to former FBI Director James Comey's memos:

â... I said there was something that Clapper wanted me to speak to the [president-elect] about alone or in a very small group.â... Comey wrote.

The revelations detailing Clapper's leak to CNN can be found in a 253-page report by the House Intelligence Committee majority released on Friday - which also found "no evidence that the Trump campaign colluded, coordinated, or conspired with the Russian government."

As Sean Davis of The Federalist bluntly states: "Clapper leaked details of a dossier briefing given to then-President-elect Donald Trump to CNNâ s Jake Tapper, lied to Congress about the leak, and was rewarded with a CNN contract a few months later."

From Clapper's Congressional testimony:

MR. ROONEY: Did you discuss the dossier or any other intelligence related to Russia hacking of the 2016 election with journalists?

MR. CLAPPER: No.

Clapper later changed his tune after he was confronted about his communications with Tapper:

â Clapper subsequently acknowledged discussing the â dossier with CNN journalist Jake Tapper,â and admitted that he might have spoken with other journalists about the same topic,â the report reads. â Clapperâ s discussion with Tapper took place in early January 2017, around the time IC leaders briefed President Obama and President-elect Trump, on â the Christopher Steele information,â a two-page summary of which was â enclosed inâ the highly-classified version of the ICA,â or intelligence community assessment.

Indeed it is Don - as The Federalist's Mollie Hemmingway wrote in January - Comey's account of Trump's briefing on the dossier suggested that it was a setup from the beginning - and that it was only done in order to legitimize the story and justify leaking the unverified and salacious details to journalists.

Let's bring it home with Mollie Hemmingway's summary from January which hits the nail on the head:

So Comey, at Clapperâ... s expressed behest, told Trump that CNN was â... looking for a news hookâ... to publish dossier allegations. He said this in the briefing of Trump that almost immediately leaked to CNN, which provided them the very news hook they sought and needed.

This briefing, and the leaking of it, legitimized the dossier, which touched off the Russia hysteria. That hysteria led to a full-fledged media freakout. During the freakout, Comey deliberately refused to say in public what he acknowledged repeatedly in private â... that the President of the United States was not under investigation. He even noted in his memos that he told the president at least three times that he was not under investigation. Comeyâ... s refusal to admit publicly what he kept telling people privately led to his firing. -The Federalist

We look forward to James Clapper talking his way out of this on CNN during carefully scripted conversations with fellow talking heads.

Clinton Camp Promoted the DNC-Funded Steele Dossier During General Election in Press Release â... Then Scrubbed It

The Hillary Campaign and DNC paid for the bogus Steel dossier during the election.

The document was a collection of bogus accusations on Donald Trump and his campaign fed to Fusion GPS by Russian operatives.

The DNC knew all about the dossier but hid this from the American public until October 2017 when it was published in the Washington Post.

Now there is evidence the Hillary Campaign promoted the bogus dossier during the election in a press release.

The press release has since been scrubbed from the internet.

Comey DELETED Obamas Name From Hillary Hacked Emails Report

WASHINGTON â... Former FBI director James Comey is vulnerable to a possible obstruction of justice charge for his conduct in the Hillary Clinton email investigation. Comey deleted Barack Obamaâ... s name from the Bureauâ... s report to conceal Obamaâ... s knowledge of the illegal server, and also deleted evidence that Clintonâ... s emails were hacked by foreign adversaries.

Comeyâ... s firing by President Donald Trump in 2017 is at the center of Comeyâ... s friend Robert Muellerâ... s attempt to charge President Trump for obstruction of justice. Mueller previously announced that he would try to wrap up an obstruction case by September 11, having found no evidence of Trump-Russia collusion. Mueller will try to argue that Trump fired Comey because Comey was investigating General Flynn and the Russia case.

But Comeyâ... s own deletion of important records to protect Obama and Clinton â... not to mention his leaking of classified information to the press and his own statement under oath that he does not believe Trump obstructed justice â... could be the final nail in the coffin of Muellerâ... s case.

Inspector general Michael Horowitzâ... s report reveals Comeyâ... s duplicity.

Trending: An Army of FBI Whistleblowers Are Ready To Testify Against Mueller

â... A statement that the FBI assessed that it was â... reasonably likelyâ... that hostile actors gained access to Clintonâ... s private email server was changed to â... possible,â... â... according to the report, on page iv.

â... A paragraph summarizing the factors that led the FBI to assess that it was possible that hostile actors accessed Clintonâ... s server was added, and at one point referenced Clintonâ... s use of her private email for an exchange with then President Obama while in the territory of a foreign adversary. This reference later was changed to â... another senior government official,â... and ultimately was omitted,â... the report states, on page iv.

Thus, James Comey deleted Barack Obamaâ... s very name in order to conceal the extent to which her emails were breached by foreign actors.

The fact that Clinton and Obama were swapping emails on her non-secure private server in â... the territory of a foreign advisoryâ... presents a clear argument to charge both Clinton and Obama with an Espionage Act violation.

Of course, Obama not only knew about Clintonâ... s server, he even used a FAKE NAME to email with her. Politico was even forced to report that.

James Comeyâ... s brother Peter Comey, meanwhile, works for the law firm that did the Clinton Foundationâ... s taxesâ...!.during the period in which the firm was doing the Clinton Foundationâ... s taxes. The fact that they conversed during the Clinton investigations presents another major liability for Comey and his defenders on the Mueller team.

James Comeyâ... s brother Peter Comey does not deny speaking with his brother James Comey during his brotherâ... s investigation of Hillary Clinton and the Clinton Foundation, but he denies talking about Clinton with his brother.

In a defensive interview with Big League Politics, Peter Comey â... a top executive at the DLA Piper law firm that did the Clinton Foundationâ... s taxes and performed the â... independent auditâ... of the Clinton Foundation during the case â... would not deny that conversations with his brother took place during the

Counterintelligence operation deployed against U.S. campaigns by Obama

BY SHARYL ATTKISSON,

5,064

Autoplay: On | Off

It may be true that President Trump illegally conspired with Russia and was so good at covering it up heâs managed to outwit our best intel and media minds who've searched for irrefutable evidence for two years. (We still await special counsel Robert Muellerâs findings.)

But thereâs a growing appearance of alleged wrongdoing equally as insidious, if not more so, because it implies widespread misuse of Americaâs intelligence and law enforcement apparatus.

ADVERTISEMENT

Here are eight signs pointing to a counterintelligence operation deployed against Trump for political reasons.

Code name

The operation reportedly had at least one code name that was leaked to The New York Times: â Crossfire Hurricane.â

Wiretap fever

Secret surveillance was conducted on no fewer than seven Trump associates: chief strategist Stephen Bannon; lawyer Michael Cohen; national security adviser Lt. Gen. Michael Flynn; adviser and son-in-law Jared Kushner; campaign chairman Paul Manafort; and campaign foreign policy advisers Carter Page and George Papadopoulos.

The FBI reportedly applied for a secret warrant in June 2016 to monitor Manafort, Page, Papadopoulos and Flynn. If true, it means the FBI targeted Flynn six months before his much-debated conversation with Russiaâs ambassador, Sergey Kislyak.

The FBI applied four times to wiretap Page after he became a Trump campaign adviser starting in July 2016. Pageâs office is connected to Trump Tower and he reports having spent â many hours in Trump Tower.â

CNN reported that Manafort was wiretapped before and after the election â including during a period when Manafort was known to talk to President Trump.â Manafort reportedly has a residence in Trump Tower.

MORE FROM SHARYL ATTKISSON

- For Mueller, a question of three conflicts
- Facts continue supporting Trump's decision to fire James Comey
- Legal patchwork does little to keep foreign interests out of American politics

---

Electronic surveillance was used to listen in on three Trump transition officials in Trump Tower â... Flynn, Bannon and Kushner â... as they met in an official capacity with the United Arab Emiratesâ... crown prince.

The FBI also reportedly wiretapped Flynnâ... s phone conversation with Kislyak on Dec. 31, 2016, as part of â... routine surveillanceâ... of Kislyak.

NBC recently reported that Cohen, Trumpâ... s personal attorney, was wiretapped. NBC later corrected the story, saying Cohen was the subject of a â... pen registerâ... used to monitor phone numbers and, possibly, internet communications.

National security letters

Another controversial tool reportedly used by the FBI to obtain phone records and other documents in the investigation were national security letters, which bypass judicial approval.

Improper use of such letters has been an ongoing theme at the FBI. Reviews by the Department of Justiceâ... s Inspector General found widespread misuse under Mueller â... who was then FBI director â... and said officials failed to report instances of abuses as required.

Unmasking

â... Unmaskingâ... â... identifying protected names of Americans captured by government surveillance â... was frequently deployed by at least four top Obama officials who have subsequently spoken out against President Trump: James Clapper, former Director of National Intelligence; Samantha Power, former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations; Susan Rice, former national security adviser; Sally Yates, former deputy attorney general.

Names of Americans caught communicating with monitored foreign targets must be â... masked,â... or hidden within government agencies, so the names cannot be misused or shared.

However, itâ... s been revealed that Power made near-daily unmasking requests in 2016.

Prior to that revelation, Clapper claimed ignorance. When asked if he knew of unmasking requests by any ambassador, including Power, he testified: â... I don't know. Maybe it's ringing a vague bell but I'm not â... I could not answer with any confidence.â...

Rice admitted to asking for unmasked names of U.S. citizens in intelligence reports after initially claiming no knowledge of any such thing.

Clapper also admitted to requesting the unmasking of â... Mr. Trump, his associates or any members of Congress.â... Clapper and Yates admitted they also personally reviewed unmasked documents and shared unmasked material with other officials.

Changing the rules

On Dec. 15, 2016 â... the same day the government listened in on Trump officials at Trump Tower â... Rice reportedly unmasked the names of Bannon, Kushner and Flynn. And Clapper made a new rule allowing the National Security Agency to widely disseminate surveillance material within the government without the normal privacy protections.

Media strategy

Former CIA Director John Brennan and Clapper, two of the most integral intel officials in this ongoing controversy, have joined national news organizations where they have regular opportunities to shape the news narrative â... including on the very issues under investigation.

Clapper reportedly secretly leaked salacious political opposition research against Trump to CNN in fall 2017 and later was hired as a CNN political analyst. In February, Brennan was hired as a paid analyst for MSNBC.

Leaks

Thereâ... s been a steady and apparently orchestrated campaign of leaks â... some true, some false, but nearly all of them damaging to President Trumpâ... s interests.

A few of the notable leaks include word that Flynn was wiretapped, the anti-Trump â... Steele dossierâ... of political opposition research, then-FBI Director James Comey briefing Trump on it, private Comey conversations with Trump, Comeyâ... s memos recording those conversations and criticizing Trump, the subpoena of Trumpâ... s personal bank records (which proved false) and Flynn planning to testify against Trump (which also proved to be false).

Friends, informants and snoops

The FBI reportedly used one-time CIA operative Stefan Halper in 2016 as an informant to spy on Trump officials.

Another player is Comey friend Daniel Richman, a Columbia University law professor, who leaked Comeyâ... s memos against Trump to The New York Times after Comey was fired. We later learned that Richman actually worked for the FBI under a status called â... Special Government Employee.â...

The FBI used former reporter Glenn Simpson, his political opposition research firm Fusion GPS, and ex-British spy Christopher Steele to compile allegations against Trump, largely from Russian sources, which were distributed to the press and used as part of wiretap applications.

These eight features of a counterintelligence operation are only the pieces we know. It can be assumed thereâ... s much we donâ... t yet know. And it may help explain why thereâ... s so much material that the Department of Justice hasnâ... t easily handed over to congressional investigators.

Sharyl Attkisson (@SharylAttkisson) is an Emmy-award winning investigative journalist, author of The New York Times bestsellers â... The Smearâ... and â... Stonewalled,â... and host of Sinclairâ... s Sunday TV program, â... Full Measure.â...

Court rules people can sue Google for defamation when Google refuses to end character assassination attacks that Google hosts

Associated Pressâ...¢

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) â... An Australian man who alleges Google defamed him on Wednesday won a court battle to sue the search engine giant.

Milorad "Michael" Trkulja was shot in the back in 2004 in a restaurant in Melbourne, Australia's second largest city.

Related SearchesDoctor Sues Patient For DefamationBill Cosby Defamation

The Australian High Court unanimously ruled in favor of Trkulja, supporting his allegation that a Google search of his name could indicate to an ordinary person he was "somehow associated with the Melbourne criminal underworld."

Trkulja had successfully argued in the Victoria state Supreme Court in 2012 that Google defamed him by publishing photos of him linked to hardened criminals of Melbourne's underworld.

Four years later, the Victorian Court of Appeal overturned the decision, finding the case had no prospect of successfully proving defamation. The High Court disputed that ruling and ordered Google to pay Trkulja's legal costs.

Google searches for "Melbourne criminal underworld photos" bring up images of Trkulja alongside gangland figures, his lawyer Guy Reynolds told the High Court in March.

However, Google's lawyers argued it would be "irrational" for someone to assume photos in a Google image search for underworld figures are all of criminals, because the same search would also bring up the Google logo, movie posters, images of crime victims and photos of actor Marlon Brando.

Trkulja is also claiming defamation around Google's "autocomplete" options for his name, which have included phrases like "is a former hit man," "criminal" and "underworld."

However, the court heard autocomplete is an automatic function and that previous searches influence future suggestions.

The defamation suit is expected to go back to the Victoria Supreme Court for trial.

Trkulja said he would continue the legal action until he gets the result he wants, fearful someone will see the images and tell his grandchildren he's a hardened criminal.

"I will sue Google ... and I will sue them till they stop. I want them to block my pictures," he said. "I'm not a criminal, I've never been involved and I will make sure these people are not going to ruin my family â... I have grandchildren," he added.

Google said in a statement: "We will continue to defend the claim. We decline to comment further on ongoing legal matters."

After mobilizing a disinformation campaign across Europe, documents show that the Integrity Initiative is now infiltrating the US...

A bombshell domestic spy scandal has been unfolding in Britain, after hacked internal communications exposed a covert U.K. state military-intelligence psychological warfare operation targeting its own citizens and political figures in allied NATO countries under the cover of fighting â... Russian disinformation.â...

The leaked documents revealed a secret network of spies, prominent journalists and think-tanks colluding under the umbrella of a group called â... Integrity Initiativeâ... to shape domestic opinionâ... and to smear political opponents of the right-wing Tory government, including the leader of the opposition Labour Party, Jeremy Corbyn.

Until now, this Integrity Initiative domestic spy scandal has been ignored in the American media, perhaps because it has mostly involved British names. But it is clear that the influence operation has already been activated in the U.S.. Hacked documents reveal that the Integrity Initiative is cultivating powerful allies inside the State Department, top D.C. think tanks, the FBI and the Department of Homeland Security, where it has gained access to Katharine Gorka and her husband, the fascist-linked cable news pundit Sebastian Gorka.

The Integrity Initiative has spelled out plans to expand its network across the U.S., meddling in American politics and recruiting â... a new generation of Russia watchersâ... behind the false guise of a non-partisan charity. Moreover, the group has hired one of the most notorious American â... perception managementâ... specialists, John Rendon, to train its clusters of pundits and cultivate relationships with the media.

Back in the U.K., Member of Parliament Chris Williamson has clamored for an investigation into the Integrity Initiativeâ... s abuse of public money.

The Integrity Initiative story is just growing and growing. Many are rightly outraged that this Tory government could fund a political smear unit.

Questions need to be answered. Share this video on Facebook to make that happen.
<https://t.co/MGepaIEfGw> â... Chris Williamson MP #GTTO (@DerbyChrisW) December 14, 2018

In a recent editorial, Williamson drew a direct parallel between the group's collaboration with journalists and surreptitious payments the CIA made to reporters during the Cold War.

â... These tactics resemble those deployed by the CIA in Operation Mockingbird that was launched at the height of the cold war in the early 1950s. Its aims included using the mainstream news media as a propaganda tool,â... Williamson wrote.

â... They manipulated the news agenda by recruiting leading journalists to write stories with the express purpose of influencing public opinion in a particular way,â... the Labour parliamentarian continued. â... Now it seems the British Establishment have dusted off the CIA's old playbook and is intent on giving it another outing on this side of the Atlantic.â...

Unmasking a Smear Machine

The existence of the Integrity Initiative was virtually unknown until this November, when the email servers of a previously obscure British think tank called the Institute for Statecraft were hacked, prompting allegations of Russian intrusion. When the group's internal documents appeared at a website hosted by Anonymous Europe, the public learned of a covert propaganda network seed-funded to the tune of over $2 million dollars by the Tory-controlled U.K. Foreign Office, and run largely by military-intelligence officers.

Through a series of cash inducements, off-the-record briefings and all-day conferences, the Integrity Initiative has sought to organize journalists across the West into an international echo chamber hyping up the supposed threat of Russian disinformation... and to defame politicians and journalists critical of this new Cold War campaign.

A bid for funding submitted by the Integrity Initiative in 2017 to the British Ministry of Defense promised to deliver a â... tougher stance on Russiaâ... by arranging for â... more information published in the media on the threat of Russian active measures.â...

The Integrity Initiative has also worked through its fronts in the media to smear political figures perceived as a threat to its militaristic agenda. Its targets have included a Spanish Department of Homeland Security appointee, Pedro Banos, whose nomination was scuttled thanks to a media blitz it secretly orchestrated; Jeremy Corbyn, whom the outfit and its media cutouts painted as a useful idiot of Russia; and a Scottish member of parliament, Neil Findlay, whom one of its closest media allies accused of adopting â... Kremlin messagingâ... for daring to protest the official visit of the far-right Ukrainian politician Andriy Parubiy â... the founder of two neo-Nazi parties and author of a white nationalist memoir, â... View From The Right.â...

These smear campaigns and many more surreptitiously orchestrated by the Integrity Initiative offer a disturbing preview of the reactionary politics it plans to inject into an already toxic American political environment.

Aggressive Expansion

A newly released Integrity Initiative document reveals that the outfit plans an aggressive expansion across the U.S.

The Integrity Initiative claims to have already established a â... simple officeâ... in Washington, D.C., though it does not say where. It also boasts of partnerships with top D.C. think tanks like the Atlantic Council, the Center for European Policy Analysis, Center for Naval Analyses (CNA) and its close relationships with U.S. officials.

A major hub of Integrity Initiative influence is the State Department's Global Engagement Center, a de facto U.S. government propaganda operation that was established by President Barack Obama to battle online ISIS recruitment, but which was rapidly repurposed to counter Russian disinformation following the election of Trump.

The Integrity Initiative has also recruited one of the most infamous American PR men to organize its clusters of journalists and political figures.

He is John Rendon, best known as â... The Man Who Sold The Warâ... â... several wars, in fact, but most notoriously the Iraq invasion. Rendon was the self-described â... information warriorâ... who planted fake news in major U.S.-U.K. media about non-existent WMD threats. With deep ties to the CIA and other military-intelligence agencies, his PR firm was paid $100 million to organize and sell Ahmed Chalabi's Iraqi National Congress. In 2002, The New York Times exposed a Pentagon program using Rendon to plant â... disinformationâ... â... including â... false storiesâ... and â... the blackest of black PRâ... â... in media outlets around the world, in order to shape public opinion and sell the Iraq invasion.

John Rendon (left) with Maj. Gen. Michael Snodgrass, US Africa Command Chief of Staff (US Africom Public Affairs)

Journalist James Bamford outlined a catalogue of disinformation feats Rendon performed for the Pentagon, such as identifying â... the biases of specific journalists and potentially obtain an understanding of their allegiances, including the possibility of specific relationships and sponsorships.â... Bamford also found proposals and programs Rendon was involved in that aimed to â... â... coerceâ... foreign journalists and plant false information overseasâ...! [and] find ways to â... punishâ... those who convey the â... wrong message.â... â...

These tactics seem particularly relevant to his work with the Integrity Initiative, especially considering the internal documents that reveal further Rendon-style plans to produce reports and studies to be â... fed anonymously into local media.â... (Among the outlets listed as friendly hosts in Integrity Initiative internal memos are BuzzFeed and El Pais, the center-left Spanish daily.)

Keeping up With the Gorkas

Internal documents also refer to interactions between Integrity Initiative Director Chris Donnelly and top Trump officials such as Katharine Gorka, a vehemently anti-Muslim Department of Homeland Security official, as well as her husband, Sebastian, who earned right-wing fame during his brief tenure in Trump's White House.

The latter Gorka is an open supporter of the Hungarian Vitezi Rend, a proto-fascist order that collaborated with Nazi Germany during its occupation of Hungary. Following Trump's election victory in 2016, Gorka appeared for televised interviews in a black Vitezi Rend uniform.

Gorka was among the first figures listed on an itinerary for Donnelly to Washington this Sept. 18 to 22. The itinerary indicates that the two had breakfast before Donnelly delivered a presentation on â... Mapping Russian Influence Activitiesâ... at the federally funded military research center, CNA.

According to the itinerary, Donnelly was granted access to Pentagon officials such as Mara Karlin, an up-and-coming neoconservative cadre, and John McCain Institute Executive Director Kurt Volker, another neoconservative operative who also serves as the U.S. special representative for Ukraine. Numerous meetings with staffers inside the State Department's Office of Global Engagement were also detailed.

Foreign Agent in State?

Of all the State Department officials named in Integrity Initiative documents, the one who appeared most frequently was Todd Leventhal. Leventhal has been a staffer at the State Department's Global Engagement Center, boasting of "20 years of countering disinformation, misinformation, conspiracy theories, and urban legends." In an April 2018 Integrity Initiative memo, he is listed as a current team member:

Funded to the tune of $160 million this year to beat back Russian disinformation with counter-propaganda, the State Department's Global Engagement Center has refused to deny targeting American citizens with information warfare of its own. My old job at the State Department was as chief propagandist, I confessed former Global Engagement Center Director Richard Stengel. I am not against propaganda. Every country does it and they have to do it to their own population and I don't necessarily think it's that awful.

At a Council on Foreign Relations forum about "fake news," former Editor at Time Magazine Richard Stengel directly states that he supports the use of propaganda on American citizens - then shuts the session down when challenged about how propaganda is used against the third world pic.twitter.com/CIAT5POv7G William Craddick (@williamcraddick) May 11, 2018

Like so many of the media and political figures involved in the Integrity Initiative's international network, the Global Engagement Center's Leventhal has a penchant for deploying smear tactics against prominent voices that defy the foreign policy consensus. Leventhal appeared in an outtake of a recent NBC documentary on Russian disinformation smugly explaining how he would take down a 15-year-old book critical of American imperialism in the developing world. Rather than challenge the book's substance and allegations, Leventhal boasted how he would marshal his resources to wage an ad hominem smear campaign to destroy the author's reputation. His strategic vision was clear: when confronting a critic, ignore the message and destroy the messenger.

Integrity Initiative documents reveal that Leventhal has been paid $76,608 dollars (60,000 British pounds) for a 50 percent contract.

While those same documents claim he has retired from the State Department, Leventhal's own LinkedIn page lists him as a current Senior Disinformation Advisor to the State Department. If that were true, it would mean that the State Department was employing a de facto foreign agent.

As a cut-out of the British Foreign Office and Defense Ministry, the Integrity Initiative's work with current and former U.S. officials and members of the media raises certain legal questions. For one, there is no indication that the group has registered under the Justice Department's Foreign Agent Registration Act, as most foreign agents of influence are required to do.

Grants from Neocon Foundation

An Integrity Initiative memo states that the right-wing Smith Richardson Foundation has also committed to ponying up funding for its U.S. network as soon as the group receives 501 c-3 non-profit status. The foundation has already provided it with about $56,000 for covert propaganda activities across Europe.

The Smith Richardson Foundation has old ties to the U.S. intelligence community and controversial cold war influence operations. According to reporter Russ Bellant, the foundation was secretly bankrolling radical right-wing â... indoctrination campaigns for the American public on Cold War and foreign policy issuesâ... â... programs that got the attention of Senator William Fulbright, who warned then-President John F. Kennedy of their dangers. At one of these indoctrination seminars, a Smith Richardson Foundation director â... told attendees that â... it is within the capacity of the people in this room to literally turn the State of Georgia into a civil war college,â... in order to overcome their opponents.â...

Smith Richardson has funded a whoâ... s who of the neoconservative movement, from hyper-militaristic think tanks like the American Enterprise Institute to the Institute for the Study of War. â... To say the [Smith Richardson] foundation was involved at every level in the lobbying for and crafting of the so-called global war on terror after 9/11 would be an understatement,â... wrote journalist Kelley Vlahos.

Besides Smith Richardson, the Integrity Initiative has stated its intention to apply for grants from the State Department â... to expand the Integrity Initiative activities both within and outside of the USA.â... This is yet another indicator that the U.S. government is paying for propaganda targeting its own citizens.

â... Main Eventâ... in Seattle

An Integrity Initiative internal document argues that because â... DC is well served by existing US institutions, such as those with which the Institute [for Statecraft] already collaborates,â... the organization should â... concentrate on extending the work of the Integrity Initiative into major cities and key State capitals [sic] across the USA.â...

This Dec. 10, the Integrity Initiative organized what it called its â... main eventâ... in the U.S. It was a conference on disinformation held in Seattle, under the auspices of a data firm called Adventium Labs. Together with the Technical Leadership Institute at the University of Minnesota, the Integrity Initiative listed Adventium Labs as one of its â... first partners outside DC.â...

Adventium is a Minneapolis-based research and development firm that has reaped contracts from the U.S. military, including a recent \$5.4 million cyber-security grant from the Pentagonâ... s Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, or DARPA.

Inside a modest-sized hotel conference room, the Adventium/Integrity event began with a speech by the Integrity Initiativeâ... s Simon Bracey-Lane. Two years prior, Bracey-Lane appeared on the American political scene as a field worker for Bernie Sandersâ... 2016 presidential primary run, earning media write-ups as the â... Brit for Bernie.â... Now, the young operator was back in the U.S. as the advance man for a military-intelligence cut-out that specialized in smearing left-wing political figures like Jeremy Corbyn, the Labour leader widely regarded as the British version of Sanders.

Bracey-Lane opened his address by explaining that Integrity Initiative director Chris Donnelly had been unable to appear at the event, possibly because he was bogged down in the scandal back home. He proceeded to read remarks prepared by Donnelly that offered a window into the frighteningly militaristic mindset the Integrity Initiative aims to impose on the public through their media and political allies.

According to Donnellyâ... s comments, the West was no longer in a â... peace time, rules based environment.â... From the halls of government to corporate boardrooms to even the U.K.â... s National Health System, â... the conclusion is that we have to look for people who suit a wartime environment rather than peacetime.â...

During a Q&A, Bracey-Lane remarked that â... we have to change the definition of war to encompass everything that war now encompasses,â... referring vaguely to various forms of â... hybrid warfare.â...

â... There is a great deal to be done in communicating that to young people,â... he continued. â... When we mean being at war we donâ... t mean sending our boys off to fight. Itâ... s right here in our homes.â...

The emphasis on restructuring society along martial lines mirrored the disturbing thinking also on display in notes of a private meeting between Donnelly and Gen. Richard Barrons in 2016. During that chat, the two officers decided that the British military should be removed from democratic supervision and be able to operate as â... an independent body outside politics.â...

While Bracey-Laneâ... s presentation perfectly captured the military mindset of the Integrity Initiative, the speakers that followed him offered a diverse array of perspectives on the concept of disinformation, some more nuanced than others. But one talk stood out from the rest â... not because of its quality, but because of its complete lack thereof.

Theorist of â... Red-Brownâ... Networks

The presentation was delivered by Alexander Reid Ross, a half-baked political researcher who peddles computer-generated spiderweb relationship charts to prove the existence of a vast hidden network of â... red-brownâ... (or fascist-communist) alliances and â... syncretic mediaâ... conspiracies controlled by puppeteers in Moscow.

Ross is a lecturer on geography at Portland State University with no scholarly or journalistic credentials on Russia. But with a book, â... Against the Fascist Creep,â... distributed by the well-known anarchist publishing house, AK Press, the middling academic has tried to make his name as a maverick analyst.

Before the Integrity Initiative was exposed as a military-intelligence front operation, Ross was among a small coterie of pundits and self-styled disinformation experts that followed the groupâ... s Twitter account. The Integrity Initiative even retweeted his smear of War Nerd podcast co-host John Dolan.

In a series of articles for the Southern Poverty Law Center last year, Ross attempted to bring his warmed-over Cold War theories to the broader public. He wound up trashing everyone from the co-author of this piece, Max Blumenthal, to Nation magazine publisher Katrina Vanden Heuvel to Harvard University professor of international relations Stephen Walt as hidden shadow-fascists secretly controlled by the Kremlin.

The articles ultimately generated an embarrassing scandal and a series of public retractions by the editor-in-chief of the Southern Poverty Law Center, Richard Cohen. And then, like some Dr. Frankenstein for discredited and buried journalism careers, the British Ministry of Defense-backed Integrity Initiative moved in to reanimate Ross as a sought-after public intellectual.

Bevensee, a PhD candidate at the University of Arizona and self-described â... Borderlands anarcho into tech and crypto,â... concluded her presentation by asserting a linkage between the alternative news site, Zero Hedge, and the â... physical militarized presence in the borderlandsâ... of anti-immigrant vigilantes.

Like Bevensee, Ross has written for C4SS in the past.

The irony of contributors to an anarchist group called the â... Center for a Stateless Societyâ... auditioning before The State â... the most jackbooted element of it, in fact â... for more opportunities to attack anti-war politicians and journalists, can hardly be overstated.

But closer examination of the history of C4SS veers from irony into something much darker and more unsettling.

White Nationalist Associates

C4SS was co-founded in 2006 by a confessed child rapist and libertarian activist, Brad Spangler, who set the group up to promote â... Market anarchismâ... to â... replace Marxism on the left.â...

When Spanglerâ... s child rape confessions emerged in 2015, the Center for Stateless Society founder was finally drummed out by his colleagues.

Thereâ... s more: Spanglerâ... s understudy and deputy in the C4SS, Kevin Carson â... currently listed as the groupâ... s â... Karl Hess Chair in Social Theoryâ... â... turned out to be a longtime friend and defender of white nationalist Keith Preston. Prestonâ... s name is prominently plastered on the back of Kevin Carsonâ... s book, hailing the C4SS man as â... the Proudhon of our timeâ... â... a loaded compliment, given the unhinged anti-Semitism of Pierre-Joseph Proudhon, the influential 19th Century French anarchist.

The C4SS group currently participates in the annual Koch-backed International Students For Liberty conference in Washington, D.C., LibertyCon, a whoâ... s who of libertarian think-tank hacks and Republican Party semi-celebrities like Steve Forbes, FCC chairman Ajit Pai, and Alan Dershowitz.

In 2013, C4SSâ... s Kevin Carson tweeted out his dream fantasy that four Jewish leftistsâ... Mark Ames, co-author of this article; Yasha Levine; Corey Robin, and Mark Potok â... would die in a plane crash while struggling over a single parachute. Potok was an executive editor at the Southern Poverty Law Center, which last year retracted every one of the crank articles that Alexander Reid Ross published with them and formally apologized for having run them.

For some reason, the super-sleuth Ross conveniently failed to investigate the libertarian group, C4SS, that he has chosen to partner with and publish in. That ability to shamelessly smear and denounce leftists over the most crudely manufactured links to the far-right... while cozying up to groups as sleazy as C4SS and authoritarian as the Integrity Initiative ... is the sort of adaptive trait that MI6 spies and the Rendon Group would find useful in a covert domestic influence operation.

Ross did not respond to our request for comment on his involvement with the Integrity Initiative and C4SS.

Disinformation for Democracy

As it spans out across the U.S., the Integrity Initiative has stated its desire to ... build a younger generation of Russia watchers.... Toward this goal, it is supplementing its coterie of elite journalists, think tank hacks, spooks and State Department info-warriors with certifiable cranks like Ross.

Less than 24 hours after Ross's appearance at the Integrity Initiative event in Seattle, he sent a menacing email to the co-author of this article, Ames, announcing his intention to recycle an old and discredited smear against him and publish it in The Daily Beast ... a publication that appears to enjoy a special relationship with Integrity Initiative personnel.

Despite the threat of investigation in the U.K., the Integrity Initiative's ... network of networks... appears to be escalating its covert, government-funded influence operation, trashing the political left and assailing anyone that gets in its way; all in the name of fighting foreign disinformation.

... We have to win this one, ... Integrity Initiative founder Col. Chris Donnelly said, ... because if we don't, democracy will be undermined....

DIANNE FEINSTEIN'S MEDIA CHARACTER ASSASSINATION TEAM

The Feinstein and Pelosi squad are not interested in serious debate or mannerly conversation. Civility is not their strong suit. Tactics vary along a spectrum of readily predictable talking points, false assertions, vituperation and obscenity, the stock in trade of those they hire in the media who have come to be known as trolls. Who and what is a troll?

Feinstein's staff have been caught hiring Fusion GPS and Black Cube to pit hit jobs on citizens they don't like.

Originally, trolls were unsightly folklore creatures dwelling in caves, forests, and, as in the famous folk tale, under bridges. Unlike their doppelg ngers in the Disney film, they were not sweet and innocent powder-blue creatures resembling the Smurfs and the Na vi, but gnarled and revolting specimens of indiscriminate voracity. Distinctly hostile and governed by an appetite for human flesh, they became the source of the contemporary internet troll.

The modern troll is the digital form of the contract killer. He lives in the shadows; is prone to using an alias behind which he hides; has no known street address or postal code; is often paid for his services by some powerful figure whose public presence may be known   say, a bloviating multi-billionaire with a highly dubious personal history who manages to evade the law; has no conscience and is not very intelligent but is as cunning as he is unscrupulous   in short, the internet troll is a coward who    kills   in the dark. He is motivated by envy and resentment and has neither self-respect nor moral fiber. He is devoid of productive talents and lacks the ability to make a success of his life. He is, in the current idiom, a loser.

Of course, not every troll is a hired gun. Some like to devour their prey as self-elected vigilantes who need not bother with the labor of constructing a convincing counter-argument   that, after all, takes real work. But in either case, they are the gremlins of the internet world, sniping away at the legitimate participants in the cultural debate or infesting the Twittersphere, often under the cloak of anonymity and the camouflage of fake accounts. They are not part of the conversation but the dregs of the hermeneutic exchange.

Trolls come from all across the political gamut but the vast majority, as noted, hail from the left. There can be no doubt about this. The    families   of the left constitute a political mafia that holds the country to ransom to further their own ends, operating a protection racket to dwarf all such criminal undertakings. They profit from open borders to swell their voting ranks; domination of the school system to create a cohort of political bosses, cultural enforcers, lying informants, and foot soldiers; high taxes to impoverish working people and the middle class whom they treat the same way as ants milk aphids;    trade deals   to fill their own pockets; collusion with enemies of the nation to solidify their fiefdoms and promote their seditious policies; and scams like    global warming   and single-payer health care to distribute resources to their cronies and hangers-on and to centralize command of the economy. And as in all such rackets, authority is assured via various forms of coercion, whether threat of sanction, public vilification,    canceling   legal action, fiscal ultimatums, censorship, blackmail, ban, or boycott   and, as we   ve seen, dispatching swarms of internet assassins to harry, insult, and bludgeon their designated targets with obscenities on the one hand and false data on the other.

Trolls are particularly obnoxious when they leave the shelter of the internet and band together to raise petitions and agitate as mobs to get people fired from their jobs, to crowdfund for disreputables, to disbench an unpopular judge who merely followed the rule of law, or to support women who file claims of sexual assault without credible evidence or testimonial consistency, a staple of the #MeToo movement. On the Net as commenters to articles and interviews, their effect is largely insectoid. They disgrace only themselves. Engaging with them is pointless and only inflates their counterfeit sense of importance. Trolls are either talking-point automatons who never entertained an original thought or vulgarians by nature oblivious to the usages of decorum, or both.

Indeed, trolling has become a cultural practice amounting almost to an obsession, rooted in the satisfaction that more and more people seem to derive from the act of contending, attacking, denying, and slandering in prolonged disputations   feeds and chains   without the benefit of strenuous knowledge and cordial deportment. Clearly no one is exempt from such failings but the progressivist woke have a virtual monopoly on them. Indeed, the phenomenon has been exponentially amplified by the internet with its easy access to slippery Wikipedian data, the picking up of hearsay and rumor, and the temptation to pontificate without analytical rigor or good faith, often incognito. Thankfully, the smart communicant is not helpless and is immune to noxious or maladroit persuasion. Using common sense, practicing the art of skepticism, doing at least a modicum of diligent research, and keeping one's cool is a response the troll cannot abide. He can be dismissed with silent contempt and effortlessly put to shame... assuming so coarse a sensibility is capable of feeling shame.

What is especially significant is that the psychology of trollism is spilling into all the domains of public discourse and institutional transactions affiliated with the various sectors of cultural Marxism... feminism, social justice, media depravity, climate change advocacy, corporate agendas, and leftist political rhetoric and action, which rely equally on fallacious arguments and the debasement of discursive etiquette. The value of trolls, if one can use that term, is that they are symptomatic. They show how far the standard of reasoned dialogue has fallen in the culture and how the capacity for independent thought has virtually ceased to exist in the progressivist world. Indeed, one might regard the left as a vast collectivist troll feasting on the greatest civilization known to history.

The only antidote to the great decline, so far as I can see, is to keep doing one's homework... reading, thinking, arguing from fact, resisting the infusion of the moral and lexical contaminants that vitiate the conduct of the left, and standing one's ground in the public domain... in genuine debate, in authorship, in daily life, in electoral politics. Nothing beats an educated and resolute mind.

POLITICAL KILL ORDERS AND STATE-SPONSORED CHARACTER ASSASSINATIONS

How A Modern Character Assassination and Political "Kill Order" Is Executed By the Silicon Valley Oligarchs and their total control of propaganda media

Patrick George At Jalopnik attacks outsiders under contract with Elon Musk and the DNC. Silicon Valley campaign finance oligarchs hire him to run hatchet jobs on innocent outsiders and then Gawker-Gizmodo-Jalopnik uses their financial partnership with the DNC's Google to push the character assassination articles to the top of Google web products and searches. Patrick George, Adrian Covert, John Hermann and Nick Cook are the sexually degenerate cabin boys that report to boy-loving sleaze-tabloid oligarch Nick Denton. They created the Fake News crisis in the media by flooding the internet with defamation posts and reprisal hatchet job articles designed to damage political enemies of the Socialists. They coordinate a large number of the character assassination efforts at Gawker, Gizmodo, Jalopnik, CNN, New York Times and other propaganda outlets. These Millennial boys are "Media Rapists" and should be treated as abusers.

How and why did a Donald Trump stripper-date named "Stormy" or an Elon Musk sex party or a Kavanaugh drinking incident or the Moonves and Weinstein indiscretions suddenly hit the news at about the same time in news history?

In addition to actual murder, Politicians and Silicon Valley Oligarchs hire operatives to end people's lives in other creative ways.

It is all part of the modern trend in vendetta, revenge and political payback when a Senator or a tech oligarch issues a "kill order" on an opponent.

The client does not like to get their hands dirty so the actual social hit job is performed by companies such as:

IN-Q-Tel - (DNC); Gawker Media - (DNC); Jalopnik - (DNC); Gizmodo Media - (DNC); K2 Intelligence - (DNC); WikiStrat - (DNC); Podesta Group - (DNC); Fusion GPS - (DNC/GOP); Google - (DNC); YouTube - (DNC); Alphabet - (DNC); Facebook - (DNC); Twitter - (DNC); Think Progress - (DNC); Media Matters - (DNC); Black Cube - (DNC); Mossad - (DNC); Correct The Record - (DNC); Sand Line - (DNC/GOP); Blackwater - (DNC/GOP); Undercover Global Ltd (DNC/GOP) Stratfor - (DNC/GOP); ShareBlue - (DNC); Wikileaks (DNC/GOP); Cambridge Analytica - (DNC/GOP); Sid Blumenthal- (DNC); David Brock - (DNC); PR Firm Sunshine Sachs (DNC); Covington and Burling - (DNC), BuzzFeed - (DNC) Perkins Coie - (DNC); Wilson Sonsini - (DNC) and hundreds of othersâ€¦! These are the people and companies that except cash, revolving door jobs, political appointments, insider trading stock in Silicon Valley tech companies, prostitutes and real estate in exchange for destroying the lives of others.

These attackers deserve to be punished for the rest of their lives for taking away the lives of others in exchange for cash. Any company who is corrupt enough to hire any of these assassins should be forced out of business. These attack services are responsible for 90% of the "Fake News" problem in the world because they are the authors of most fake news. Congress must act to make these kinds of companies illegal!

These digital assassination services offer hit-jobs, character assassinations and economic reprisal programs to famous billionaires and corrupt politicians who are seeking revenge, retribution and vendetta executions.

In the case of reporters getting targeted for attacks, President Donald Trump has been accused by the liberal corporate media of whipping up a hateful frenzy against the press. But while CNNâ€¦ s Jim Acosta grandstands against Trump, real journalists are still reeling from the draconian extrajudicial measures that Barack Obama and his administration used to target them for exposing truth.

This secretive targeting occurred while Obama speechwriter and hate-filled ANTIFA supporter Ben Rhodes was running â€¦ Operation Echo Chamber,â€¦ which reportedly continues, in which he fed information to willing corporate media scribes. â€¦ They literally know nothing,â€¦ Rhodes said of the twentysomething journalists he easily manipulated.

The Freedom of the Press Foundationâ€¦ s Trevor Timm published documents showing how former attorney general Eric Holder changed the rules to more effectively intimidate and surveil members of the press.

Timm writes: â€¦ Today, we are revealingâ€¦ for the first timeâ€¦ the Justice Departmentâ€¦ s rules for targeting journalists with secret FISA court orders. The documents were obtained as part of a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit brought by Freedom of the Press Foundation and Knight First Amendment Institute at Columbia University.â€¦

Trending: Brennan and Clapper Accused of Hacking John Roberts To Blackmail Him

Here is the memo published by the Foundation, which dropped the documents in their entirety:

Obama is also clearly linked to the plot to obtain fraudulent FISA warrants on President Trumpâ€¦ s team, as evidenced by Peter Strzok and Lisa Pageâ€¦ s texts confirming that Obama was overseeing their fly-by-night operation.

Larry Schweikart reported for Big League Politics:

For months pundits and researchers have been pondering the mystery of the FISA approval that led to the illegal and historically titanic scandals to ever hit the U.S. government. Some have argued that Assistant Attorney General Rod Rosenstein knew the FISA was bogus when he extended it. Others have wondered if Special Counsel Robert Mueller knew about the fraudulent basis of the FISA when he used it, in part, to indict Michael Flynn. Other still, that Mueller was fooled by the FBI.

This is what President Trump calls â... SPYGATEâ... .

It may well be that the surveillance that was conducted began with UK intelligence services and then was fed back to the White House of Barack Obama. Hereâ... s the kicker:

President Barack Obama did not need a FISA warrant to authorize spying/electronic surveillance on Trump because Obama all along had legal authorization to by-pass the normal court vetting process. According to 50 U.S. Code 1802, the â... Electronic Surveillance Authorizationâ... () â... Foreign intelligence in relation to a US person (Trump or his associates) is information thatâ... s necessary for the US to protect against attack, hostile acts, sabotage, . . . as well as other clandestine activities by a foreign power . . . OR . . . information relevant to national defense/security of the US, or the conduct of foreign affairs of the U.S.â... Such an authorization by Obama required certification by Attorney General Loretta Lynch that must be logged with the FISC court. (â... The [AG]+ shall immediately transmit under seal to the court [FISC] a copy of his certification.â... )

In short, the DOJ has this. If we are correct, a copy of that certification is currently under seal at least with the DOJ and the FISC.

This is what they are hiding.

However, the Act requires the AG to keep the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Senate Committee on Intelligence informed of these authorizations and unmaskings therein. See 1803 (a) (1) (C) If indeed this is what happened, did Lynch reportâ... or only selectively reportâ... to the committees in a way that excluded non-friendlies? Can you see why Adam Schiff, Mark Warner, and their ilk are terrified?

- 1) Obama authorized spying/electronic surveillance on Team Trump, by-passing normal judicial oversight.
- 2) To create â... foreign intelligence,â... John Brennan and others organized for UK intelligence to conduct surveillance on Trump and his associates, either from the UK or from UK assets within the U.S. This is another reason revealing this will unleash an excrement storm: the UK is about to be caught meddling bigly in an American election.
- 3) Lynch certified Obamaâ... s authorization which is now held under seal by DOJ (and FISC).

From this authorization, all unmaking followed, as well as the FBI fraudulent counter intel investigation and perhaps the FISA warrant too. Obama knew this was all fake when he made the authorization; Lynch knew it was fake when she certified it; the entire inner circle, including the FBI, all knew. This takes the U.S. into uncharted territory, and could imperil any politician in the British government who supported this or had knowledge of it. Proving any of this would be difficult, as if confronted Lynch would almost certainly cover up and Obama would simply deny knowledge. Without a paper trail, a conviction might be a bridge too far. This is only one of thousands of "kill order" tactics introduced by the Obama Administration.

These are the playbook tactics that Senators and tech oligarchs most often use to destroy the lives of their political and business enemies:

- Government agency bosses sometimes solicit the target victims with false promises of future loans, contracts or grants from their agency and cause the target victims to expend millions of dollars and years of their time for projects which those government bosses had covertly promised to their friends. They use the target victims as a â... smokescreenâ... to cover their illegal government slush-funds for the victims competitors and personal enemies. By using this tactic, the attackers can drain the target victims funds and force them into an economic disaster in plain view of everyone without the government bosses fearing any reprisal for their scam.

- Every match.com, okcupid.com, Plenty Of Fish, Seeking Arrangements and all other IAC-owned, or similar, dating sites (IAC is managed by Hillary Clinton's daughter) have had their profiles, texts, and inter-member communications, since those companies were started, hacked or purchased. The attack service providers use Palantir and In-Q-Tel financed data analysis software to analyze every activity in those dating services in order to find honey-trap, blackmail, sextortion and social conflict exploitation opportunities. If you had a bad date with someone, that someone will be hunted down and convinced to help harm, #metoo or "rape charge" the intended target. All dates involve a search for sex, so the likelihood that a sexual disappointment experience will exist in each persons dating history is high. Searching every past dating email and text of a subject is quite easy with modern software and hacking techniques. A synthetically amplified, PR-agency optimized sex scandal can destroy any target. Your dating experiences from the 70's or 80's will come back to haunt you decades later. Most dates involve drinking alcohol and taking drugs. If you were unattractive or had bad sexual skills your bad date will be called "date rape", "drugging your date for sex" and related twisted narratives that are designed to shame you, the target. If you try to get a date in the future, your potential date will be contacted by a third party who will slander and libel you to make sure your potential first date gets cancelled. Your social life will, essentially, end. Every photo on every dating site is cross checked with every other photo on the internet in order to cull your Facebook, Linkedin, Snapchat and other social media together to create a total psychological manipulation profile data file on you. A single photo on a dating site can be cross searched on every mugshot archive, photo album and corporate database in the worth within minutes using modern super-computers. Your sex life will be on public record in a flash.

- Social Security, SSI, SDI, Disability and other earned benefits are stone-walled. Applications of targets are â... lostâ... . Files in the application process â... disappearedâ... . Lois Lerner hard drive â... incidentsâ... are operated in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.

- Government officials and tech oligarchs contact members of the National Venture Capital association (NVCA) and created national â... black-listsâ... to blockade target victims from ever receiving investor funding. This was also confirmed in a widely published disclosure by Tesla Motors Daryl Siry and in published testimony. If Silicon Valley political campaign finance oligarchs black-list you (see the "AngelGate" Scandal and the "High Tech No Poaching Class Action Lawsuit" cases) you will never get investor funding again.

- FOIA requests are hidden, frozen, stone-walled, delayed, lied about and only partially responded to in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.

- State and federal employees will play an endless game of Catch-22 by arbitrarily determining that deadlines had passed that they, the government officials, had stonewalled and obfuscated applications for, in order to force these deadlines that they set, to appear to be missed. This can bankrupt a target victim.

- Some Victims found themselves strangely poisoned, not unlike the Alexander Litvenko case. Heavy metals and toxic materials were found right after their work with the Department of Energy weapons and energy facilities. Many wonder if these â... targetsâ... were intentionally exposed to toxins in retribution for their testimony. The federal MSDS documents clearly show that a number of these people were exposed to deadly compounds and radiations, via DOE, without being provided with proper HazMat suits which DOE officials knew were required.

- Victims employers are called, and faxed, and ordered to fire target victims from their places of employment, in the middle of the day, with no notice, as a retribution tactic.

- On orders from Obama White House officials, DNC-financed Google, YouTube, Gawker Media and Gizmodo Media produce attack articles and defamation videos. Google locks this attack media on the internet on the top line, of the front page of all Google searches for a decade in front of 7.5 billion people, around the world. This attack-type uses over $40 million dollars in server farms, production costs and internet rigging. The forensic data acquired from tracking some of these attacks proves that Google rigs attacks against individuals on the internet and that all of Google's impressions are manually controlled by Google's executives who are also the main financiers and policy directors of the Obama Administration. This data was provided to the European Union for its ongoing prosecution of Google's political manipulation of public perceptions.

- Victims HR and employment records, on recruiting and hiring databases, are embedded with negative keywords in order to prevent the victim targets from ever gaining future employment.

- Gary D. Conley, Seth Rich, Rajeev Motwani and many other whistle-blowers in these matters, turned up dead under strange circumstances. It is very possible that some of these attack services, operated by former CIA operatives, even offer discrete murder-for-sale services using high-tech assassination tools that make murders look like heart attacks and brain failures.

- Disability and VA complaint hearings and benefits are frozen, delayed, denied or subjected to lost records and "missing hard drives" as in the Lois Lerner case.

- Paypal (A DNC-biased operation) and other on-line payments for on-line sales are de-platformed, delayed, hidden, or re-directed in order to terminate income potential for target victims who competed with the attackers interests and holdings.

- DNS redirection, "website spoofing" sends target victims websites to dead ends where no sales orders or customer inquiries actually get back to the target. These internet revenue activity manipulations are conducted using Google and Amazon servers. All commercial storefronts and on-line sales attempts by target victims, will have had their sites hidden, or search engine de-linked by a massively resourced facility located in Virginia, Texas or Palo Alto, California in order to terminate revenue potentials for the target victims.

- Over 50,000 trolls, shells, botnets and synth-blog deployments are deployed to place defamatory statements and disinformation about victims in front of 7.5 billion people around the world on the internet in order to seek to damage their federal testimony credibility by a massively resourced facility.

- Campaign finance dirty tricks contractors are hired by campaign financiers to attack the friends and family members of the target victim in order to create low morale for the target victims psyche and motivation.

- Are you getting weird headaches and hearing a "buzzing sound" in your head? The U.S. Government has now acknowledged that the Cuban, Chinese and other embassy "sonic attacks" are from a known microwave beam weapon. Any one of the technical departments of the attack services listed at the top of this article can build such a biological harassment weapon. It can be aimed at the target victims office, bedroom or vehicle and, within a week, have caused biological and emotional damage using a weapon that has no visible track of trajectory. It is designed to make the target victim think they are "going crazy" or "hearing sounds in their head". While this may sound pretty out there, web search "Embassy sonic attacks" on the top 5 non-Google search engines and read the very credible reports of these attacks.

- In one case covert political partner: Google, transferred large sums of cash to dirty tricks contractors and then manually locked the media portion of the attacks into the top lines of the top pages of all Google searches globally, for years, with hidden embedded codes in the links and web-pages which multiplied the attacks on Victims by many magnitudes.

- Covert Cartel financier: Google, placed Google's lawyer: Michelle Lee, in charge of the U.S. Patent Office and she, in turn, stacked all of the U.S. Patent Office IPR and ALICE review boards and offices with Google-supporting employees in order to rig the U.S. Patent Office to protect Google from being prosecuted for the vast patent thefts that Google engages in. Google has hundreds of patent lawsuits for technology theft and a number of those lawsuits refer to Google's operations as "Racketeering", "Monopolistic Cartel" and "Government Coup-like" behaviors. Thousands of articles and investigations detail the fact that Google, "essentially" ran the Obama White House and provided over 80% of the key White House staff. A conflict-of-interest unlike any in American history. Google's investors personally told Applicant they would "kill him". Google and the Obama Administration were "the same entity". Applicant testified in the review that got Michelle Lee terminated and uncovered a tactical political and social warfare group inside Google who were financed by Federal and State funds.

- Honeytraps and moles were employed by the attackers. In this tactic, people who covertly worked for the attackers were employed to approach the "target" in order to spy on and misdirect the subject.

- Gawker Media, Gizmodo Media, Snopes, SPLC and other hired media assassins will be retained to produce "hatchet job" character assassination articles about you. Then those articles will be faxed, mailed and emailed to your employer and investors with a note saying: "You don't want to have anything to do with this person, do you..?" in order to get you fired from your job and get your loans or financing pulled. The attackers will use their round one attack media, that they authored, to create a round two second wave attack designed to end your life via economic warfare.

- Mortgage and rental applications will have had red flags added to them in databases to prevent the targets from getting homes or apartments.

- Krebs On Security, Wired, Ars Technica, The Wall Street Journal and most major IT publications have reported that hundreds of spy "back-doors" have been found on every Intel, AMD, Apple, Xfinity, Cisco, Microsoft, Juniper Networks motherboard, chip-set and hardware component set. This means that any kid with the "key" code can open any computer, server, router, cloud-network or other network connected device and read every file, photo, video, your calendar and email on your devices at any time from any location on Earth. The key codes have been released to every hacker community in the world for over ten years. There is now no government, corporate or personal data that can't be hacked, even data from decades ago. Every single one of your darkest secrets can be in the hands of your enemy within 60 minutes, or less. Important meetings you had planned with potential investors, employers, clients, dates, suppliers and others will suddenly get cancelled at the last minute. They will get cancelled because your enemies are reading your calendar remotely and covertly sending slander information to those you had hoped to engage with in order to sabotage your life. Nothing you have ever typed on a computer or Smartphone is safe. it WILL be acquired and it WILL be used against you.

- McCarthy-Era "Black-lists" are created and employed against target victims who competed with Obama Administration executives and their campaign financiers to prevent them from getting funding and future employment.

- Obama Administration targets were very carefully placed in a position of not being able to get jobs, unemployment benefits, disability benefits or acquire any possible sources of income. The retribution tactics were audacious, overt..and quite illegal.

- There are thousands of additional Dirty Tricks tactics being used by these Attack Services yet Congress refuses to pass laws out-lawing such attack services. The cost of an attack on a person ranges from $150,000.00 to over $50,000,000.00. While a Silicon Valley billionaire can afford to launch counter-measures to these attacks, any regular taxpayer will be utterly destroyed, and incapable of fighting back, against even the smallest version of one of these "kill orders". A number of modern office shootings are the results of these attacks against an individual who has lost everything because of the attack and has no options left.

Federal law enforcement, the United States Congress and the highest level investigators in the U.S., and abroad, have documented (per the â... FISA Memoâ... , Congressional Reports and federal employee testimony) and proven the fact that the Obama Administration regularly engaged in the operation of retribution, vendetta and reprisal campaigns known as â... hit-jobsâ... against domestic natural born U.S. citizen domestic taxpayers. The Federal Court, in at least one previous court case, has ruled that Applicants, in this particular matter, were the victims and target of a number of these attacks designed to inflict permanent medical, emotional, character assassination, brand negation, economic and career damage.

!!!! Mueller Hears That Silicon Valley Has Been Manipulating The Entire BREXIT Campaign !!!!!

- Second former employee of controversial data firm to be questioned by special counselâ€¦ s inquiry into Russia collusion

By Carole Cadwalladr

Brittany Kaiser is said to be cooperating fully with the Mueller inquiry.

A director of the controversial data company Cambridge Analytica, who appeared with Arron Banks at the launch of the Leave.EU campaign, has been subpoenaed by the US investigation into possible collusion between the Trump campaign and the Russian government.

A spokesman for Brittany Kaiser, former business development director for Cambridge Analytica â... which collapsed after the Observer revealed details of its misuse of Facebook data â... confirmed that she had been subpoenaed by special counsel Robert Mueller, and was cooperating fully with his investigation.

He added that she was assisting other US congressional and legal investigations into the companyâ... s activities and had voluntarily turned over documents and data.

Kaiser, who gave evidence to the UK parliament last April in which she claimed Cambridge Analytica had carried out in-depth work for Leave.EU, is the second individual connected to the firm subpoenaed by the special counsel. The Electoral Commission has said its investigation into Leave.EU found no evidence that the campaign â... received donations or paid for services from Cambridge Analytica â... beyond initial scoping workâ... .

Damian Collins, chairman of parliamentâ... s inquiry into fake news, said it was â... no surpriseâ... that Kaiser was under scrutiny by Mueller because â... her work connected her to WikiLeaks, Cambridge Analytica and [its parent company] SCL, the Trump campaign, Leave.EU and Arron Banksâ... .

He said it was now vital Britain had its own inquiry into foreign interference: â... We should not be leaving this to the Americans.â...

Tom Watson, the deputy leader of the Labour party, echoed Collinsâ... s statement, saying: â... This is the first evidence that a significant player in the Leave.EU campaign is of interest to the global Mueller inquiry. People will be bewildered that the British government has no interest in establishing the facts of what happened.â...

In August, Sam Patten, a US political consultant who had worked for Cambridge Analytica on campaigns in the US and abroad, struck a plea deal with Mueller after admitting he had failed to register as a foreign agent for a Ukrainian oligarch.

He became a subject of the special counselâ... s inquiry because of work done with Paul Manafort, Trumpâ... s campaign manager, in Ukraine. He had also set up a business with Konstantin Kilimnik, a key figure who Mueller has alleged has ties to Russian intelligence and who is facing charges of obstruction of justice. In a 2017 statement to the Washington Post, Kilimnik denied any connection to intelligence services. Kaiser, however, is the first person connected directly to both the Brexit and Trump campaigns known to have been questioned by Mueller.

The news came to light in a new Netflix documentary, The Great Hack, which premiered at the Sundance film festival last month and is expected to be released later this spring. Film-makers followed Kaiser for months after she approached the Guardian, including moments after she received the subpoena. She claims the summons came after the Guardian revealed she had visited WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange while still a Cambridge Analytica employee in February 2017, three months after the US election.

One part of Muellerâ... s investigation focuses on whether the Trump campaign sought to influence the timing of the release of emails by WikiLeaks before the election. Investigators are looking at communications between them. In the film, Kaiser says that she has gone from being a cooperating witness to a subject of investigation because of her contact with Assange.

In October 2017, it was revealed that Alexander Nix, the chief executive of Cambridge Analytica, had contacted Assange in August 2016 to try to obtain emails from Hillary Clintonâ... s presidential campaign â... which indictments from Muellerâ... s team say were obtained by Russian military intelligence â... to use in Donald Trumpâ... s campaign. When Kaiser gave evidence to parliament last year, she was asked about her relationship with Assange and WikiLeaks but failed to reveal that she had met Assange.

In the documentary, Kaiser is shown after receiving an email from the Guardian last June asking about meeting Assange and alleged donations of cryptocurrency to WikiLeaks. Kaiser did not respond to the email at the time, but on camera says: "... She knows I met Assange. And she knows I donated money to WikiLeaks in bitcoin...."

Her legal representatives later wrote to the paper to say that the allegations, including that she had "... channelled... donations to WikiLeaks, were false. Kaiser said she had received a small gift of bitcoin in 2011 ... long before she worked at Cambridge Analytica ... and, not knowing what else to do with it, gave it to WikiLeaks, because she had benefited from material it had released over the years.

Her lawyer told the Observer that the meeting with Assange came about after a chance encounter in London with an acquaintance who knew him. It lasted 20 minutes and consisted mainly of Assange telling her "... about how he saw the world...". He said they did not discuss the US election.

Patten and Kaiser were involved in a controversial election campaign in Nigeria in January 2015, which former Cambridge Analytica employees say had "... unsettling... parallels to the US presidential election.

The Guardian revealed that the data firm had worked alongside a team of unidentified Israeli intelligence operatives on the campaign. Ex-Cambridge Analytica employees described how the Israelis hacked the now-president of Nigeria's emails and released damaging information about him to the press weeks before the election.

CBS NEWS 60 MINUTES Lara Logan "I'm Being ... Targeted... For Saying the Media is ... Mostly Liberal"
by Tamar Auber

On Wednesday, former CBS News foreign correspondent Lara Logan spoke with Fox News Sean Hannity about her recent comments slamming the media as "... mostly liberal...."

Logan told Breitbart podcaster Mike Ritland the remarks made on his show "... which drew widespread attention online ... amounted to ... professional suicide...."

Defending her remarks on Hannity's show, Logan said that as the result of her speaking out about how the media is "... mostly liberal..." she has been targeted because she is an independent voice.

"... Any journalists who are not beating the same drum and giving the same talking points,..." she insisted "... pay the price..." for not going along with the liberal crowd.

She also called out her targeters by name.

"... I know they're going to come after me,..." she told Hannity. "... Michael Calderone who is at the Huffington Post. I can give you the script now. I can tell you who the players are. Joe Hagan. Brian Stelter...."

She added: "... They smear you personally. They go after your integrity. They go after your reputation as a person and a professional. They will stop at nothing. I am not the only one. And I am just, I am done, right, I am tired of it. And they do not get to write my story anymore. They don't get to speak for me, I want to say loudly and clearly to anybody who is listening, I am not owned. Nobody owns me, right? I'm not owned by the left or the right...."

â... The media everywhere is mostly liberal. But in this country, 85 percent of journalists are registered Democrats. So thatâ... s just a fact, right?â... she told Ritland.

She also trashed reporting based on single, anonymous government sources.

â... Thatâ... s not journalism, thatâ... s horseshit,â... Logan stressed. â... Responsibility for fake news begins with us. We bear some responsibility for that, and weâ... re not taking ownership of that and addressing it. We just want to blame it all on somebody else.â...

Internal documents from a private Israeli intelligence firm called Psy-Group show that, at the time of many incidents, the company, and possibly other private investigators, were targeting U.S. citizens because they spoke up about crimes.

Psy-Groupâ... s intelligence and influence operations, which included a failed attempt in the summer of 2017 to sway a local election in central California, were detailed in a New Yorker investigation that I co-wrote earlier this month. Before it went out of business (ie: changed it's name) , last year, Psy-Group was part of a new wave of private-intelligence firms that recruited from the ranks of Israelâ... s secret services and described themselves as â... private Mossads.â... Psy-Group initially stood out among its rivals because it didnâ... t just gather intelligence; its operatives used false identities, or avatars, to covertly spread messages in an attempt to influence what people believed and how they behaved. In 2016, Psy-Group held discussions with the Trump campaign and others about conducting covert â... influenceâ... operations to benefit the candidate. Psy-Groupâ... s founder and C.E.O., Royi Burstien, a veteran Israeli intelligence officer who established the firm in 2014, told me that his talks with the Trump campaign went nowhere. The companyâ... s posturing, however, attracted the attention of Robert Mueller, the special counsel, who has been investigating interference in the 2016 Presidential race.'

FED BOMBHELL: Fusion GPS Bribed Dozens of MSM Journalists With Cash To Run Character Assassinations, While News Companies Paid Firm to Dig Dirt on Trump

High-ranking FBI insiders are pulling back the curtain on Fusion GPS, the firm that commissioned and spread the bogus Trump dossier.

It appears the embattled intelligence firm was quite busy paying off Big Media reporters, according to federal sources who have traced dozens of transactions between TD Bank and media members as well as media organizations, sources confirm.

But stunningly, Big Media organizations have employed Fusion GPS to dig dirt on politicians and D.C.â... s elite â... namely Donald Trump.

â... Fusion GPS was on the payroll of the media and in turn had members of the media on its payroll,â... one FBI insider said.

Bombshell revelations.

FBI insiders confirm Fusion GPS employed law firms as well as shell companies to send and receive funds to and from media and reporters. But the embattled firm also used its accounts at TD Bank to directly commission reporters. Likewise, Fusion GPS received funds from media companies into its own accounts at TD Bank, FBI insiders said,

“... There are dozens of payments from the media flowing into their (Fusion GPS’s...) account,“... one federal law enforcement official said. “... One company wired funds to Fusion (GPS) more than a dozen times.“...

Why would media companies commission Fusion GPS? Likely to dig dirt on enemies or secure records that reporters could not legally obtain, one federal law enforcement insider said. One FBI insider said the payments to Fusion GPS coincide with Donald Trump’s run for the White House.

The payments were made between Sept. 2015 and Sept. 2017, records show.

The unthinkable: The mainstream media paying Fusion GPS for dirt on Trump to the same firm the Democratic National Committee paid to fund the bogus Trump dossier. And at the same time Fusion GPS bribing journalists to place stories “... likely negative about Trump, as well as spread the bogus Trump dossier around.

Stunning.

Was BuzzFeed “... the only company to publish the full bogus dossier “... on that list?

And who is on the payroll? We are trying to run that information down.

And why aren’t these people behind bars?

Democrat Bosses Pretended To Be Russian Trolls As They Trolled Trump

By Daniel Greenfield

When the Democrats and the media wanted to prove that Russian trolls were everywhere, and supporting Republicans, they turned to Jonathon Morgan and Renee DiResta.

Morgan and DiResta had originally been part of Obama's futile effort to fight ISIS on social media, before discovering a much more lucrative field. ISIS was losing on the battlefield and the Democrats were losing elections. The Hillary campaign had hatched a conspiracy theory blaming its loss on Russian trolls. And Morgan and DiResta soon became the experts providing the data linking Republicans to Russian trolls.

Every time there was a story on Russian election interference, Morgan would show up on CNN or NBC. And his message was the same, the Russian bots were everywhere and they were a major threat.

take our poll - story continues below

• Who will cave first over the government shutdown?

Trending: Ocasio-Cortez melts down after being caught in lie about being from the Bronx

Morgan and DiResta soon had a company name, New Knowledge, and were brought on board by the Senate Intelligence Committee to produce a report on Russian influence operations in the 2016 election. Despite the fact that a second report found that most of the Russian trolling efforts had been directed at African-Americans, the New Knowledge report claimed that this was a Russian conspiracy to aid Trump.

The New York Times, which frequently promoted and published New Knowledge conspiracy theories, all but credited DiResta for having exposed the whole Russian-Republican troll conspiracy, and wrote that, â Senate and House staff members, who knew of DiRestaâs expertise through her public reports and her previous work advising the Obama administration on disinformation campaigns, had reached out to her and others to help them prepare for the hearings.â They seemingly included Senator Warnerâs office.

And it wasnât just the 2016 election. Morgan, who made no secret of his loathing for conservatives, claimed that the Russian bots were everything and aiding Republicans.

When the #ReleasetheMemo hashtag went viral, Morgan, now running his own company, New Knowledge, was there suggesting it might be Russian bots. The debates about gun control after the Parkland school massacre? More Russian bots. The migrant caravan? Obviously a fake news conspiracy.

â That whole news cycle was dominated by this type of conspiratorial fear-mongering,â Morgan sniffed, even though his current career is based around conspiratorial lefty fear-mongering.

And the midterm elections?

â Russians Meddling in the Midterms? Hereâs the Data,â Morgan and Ryan Fox, a New Knowledge employee, warned. â Our company is currently detecting more overall activity in real time from continuing Russian online influence operations targeting the midterm elections than has been disclosed by social media platforms or detected by researchers during the same period before the election in 2016.â

The Russians were even going all the way into Alabama. â Russian trolls tracked by #Hamilton68 are taking an interest in the AL Senate race. What a surprise,â Morgan tweeted.

It wouldnât have been much of a surprise to him because the â Russian trollsâ supporting Roy Moore in Alabama were actually his trolls.

A New York Times story was forced to reveal that Morgan had participated in what a report described as, â an elaborate â false flagâ operation that planted the idea that the Moore campaign was amplified on social media by a Russian botnetâ thereby â radicalizing Democrats with a Russian bot scandalâ

The goal was to â enrage and energize Democratsâ and â depress turnoutâ among Republicans.

The bots used Cyrillic letters and pictures of celebrities. Just in case anyone still didnât get the message, they included, â I love Russiaâ in their profiles. When the Moore campaign accused the Democrats of being behind the dirty trick, the Jones campaign doubled down on the Russia smear, declaring, â Maybe Moore should check with Vladimir Putin, who shares his views on depriving people of their civil rights.â

But Moore had been telling the truth. It had been a Democrat operation. The mediaâ... s greatest expert on Russian trolling had not only falsely claimed that Russian trolls were backing Moore: he was involved.

Morgan, the New York Times and the Washington Post attempted to spin this as an experiment, but influencing an actual election is not an experiment. When Morganâ... s people faked Russian bot support for a Republican candidate, and Morgan then helped spread the allegations, thatâ... s not an experiment, itâ... s a dirty trick. And it raises serious questions about the Democratâ... s entire Russian troll narrative.

How can we know that an Alabama special election was the only time that Democrats tried to frame Republicans with false flag operations meant to portray them as traitors and tools of foreign interests?

The Alabama project may have been an experiment, but not an abstract academic one. Its funding allegedly came from LinkedIn billionaire Reid Hoffman who has poured millions of dollars into ventures to harness â... Silicon Valleyâ... smarts to help Democrats win. Hoffman had previously been caught backing another slimy Facebook effort targeting conservatives and Trump supporters.

***Visit our FREE SPEECH community built exclusively for our readers. Click to Join The Deplorables Network Today!*****

An internet disinformation campaign headed by a disinformation expert would be very â... Silicon Valleyâ... .

Hoffman had teamed up with Mark Pincus, the co-founder of Zynga, a slimy Facebook firm whose unofficial motto was allegedly, â... Do Evilâ... , on WTF, to explore new strategies. New Knowledge also had backing from French-Iranian billionaire Pierre Omidyar who had made his fortune with eBay. Silicon Valley lefties have been pouring money into new tech efforts for the Left.

Itâ... s worth asking whether some of the dot-com billionaires who backed Morgan, New Knowledge or similar efforts to push regulation of Facebook had a plan for profiting from its fall.

The Alabama projectâ... s success could have been used to convince Hoffman and other lefty dot com donors to back similar false flag campaigns targeting Republicans around the country.

Alabama likely was an experiment in tactics. Morganâ... s exposure wonâ... t make it go away.

Hillaryâ... s Russian conspiracy theory has evolved into a Cloward-Piven strategy aimed at free speech on the internet in which disinformation is used to attribute conservative speech to a Russian conspiracy requiring immediate regulation of Facebook and other social media companies to avert the crisis.

And if the Russians wonâ... t cooperate, the Russian bots will be lefty hipsters funded by Silicon Valley.

Jonathon Morgan had tweeted, â... Facebook and the other social media companies should not be trusted to police themselves. The self-serving attempts to undermine the credibility of those holding these companies accountable are reprehensible.â...

New Knowledgeâ... s Director of Research, Renee DiResta, had written an editorial titled, â... Why Facebook and Twitter Canâ... t Be Trusted to Police Themselvesâ... .

After years of demanding that regulators force Facebook to crack down on Russian fake news trolls, Morgan finally got what he wanted when Facebook suspended his account over Russian trolling.

Russian election interference was a crisis that the Democrats had manufactured and that their media echo chamber had amplified. Morgan is accused of manufacturing it in the most explicit way possible.

But we can't really know to what extent Morgan's experiment has already been replicated. What we know about Russian election interference has largely come from experts like Morgan and New Knowledge. The internet is a shadowy realm and it's not hard for actors to impersonate one another.

The Russians may have started out by impersonating Americans, only to have Americans impersonate Russians. When public trust in institutions fails, conspiracy theories and conspirators thrive. Morgan's dirty tricks arose from the same paranoid atmosphere of conspiracy theories weaponized into investigations, opposition research transformed into armed raids, research being secretly planted into the DOJ, and national emergencies being declared over Facebook memes, in which he thrived.

The Russian conspiracy theory had given Democrat outrage form, substance and an agenda. Having invented the conspiracy theory, they also had to invent the crimes that made it real.

To paraphrase Pogo, the Democrats had finally found the Russian troll enemy and he is us.

EVERYTHING YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT SNOPE

Exclusive: Joseph Farah reveals whole truth about Facebook's official 'fact-checker'

JOSEPH FARAH

. Print

WASHINGTON â Were Brett Kavanaugh's children escorted from a Senate hearing room because they were harassed by hecklers?

That was a topic last week tackled by the allegedly impartial fact-checking sleuths at Snopes.com, Facebook's official partner in separating real news from fake.

Snopes determined the allegation was â mostly false.

But, sometimes manipulation of the question you ask determines the answer.

If you ask an illegitimate question, chances are high you get a bogus answer.

Most Americans, no matter which side of the political spectrum they may reside, are familiar with what happened during the Senate Judiciary Committee's hearings last week on the confirmation of Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh. Before committee Chairman Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, could even complete his first sentence on day one of the hearings, he was repeatedly interrupted by Democratic members demanding the proceedings be aborted. That was immediately followed by the first of some 70 acts of civil disobedience and interruptions by members of the audience, at least some of whom were observed taking cash payments to participate in the effort by Democrats to halt the hearings and prevent Kavanaugh from being confirmed.

About an hour or two into the televised hearing, the Kavanaughs' two daughters, Margaret and Liza, were escorted from the meeting room by their mother, Ashley, and a small security detail. Those facts are undisputed.

But who suggested the hecklers had targeted the children? No one. In fact, the Snopes investigation cites only an otherwise anonymous internet Meme as having raised the allegation.

Welcome to the thoroughly unprofessional, politically biased, widely discredited and scandal-plagued world of Snopes.com â now one of the premier gatekeepers in the wacky and warped world of truth detection by what I have labeled the internet's emerging Speech Code Cartel, which includes Google, YouTube, Facebook, Twitter, Apple and Amazon.

If they can get you asking the wrong questions, they don't have to worry about answers, explained

Thomas Pynchon in â... Gravityâ... s Rainbow.â...

It is as true and self-evident a statement as has ever been made.

That is just one of the many techniques Snopes and its co-founder David Mikkelson employ to redefine truth and reality to their liking â... all the while hiding behind the phony veneer of impartiality, tireless research and the kind of expertise you can apparently obtain with an unrelated B.S. degree in computer science.

Snopes has the advantage of a contract with Facebook and the affirmation of other biased â... fact-checkersâ... that followed Mikkelsonâ... s lead into this field of self-proclaimed, ubiquitous, infallible guardians of all knowledge and truth â... including PolitiFact and FactCheck.org. Getting the Facebook contract has greatly empowered Snopes well beyond its meager qualifications.

Letâ... s begin with a little history of Snopes.

The site was founded in 1995 by Mikkelson and his then-wife, Barbara. The couple met in the early 1990s on a folklore-themed online message board and married before establishing Snopes. Earlier they had posed as leaders of the â... San Fernando Valley Folklore Society,â... which did not exist apart from letterhead that permitted the couple to make official-sounding inquiries about subjects that interested them. One profile described the group as â... an entity dreamed up to help make the inquiries seem more legit.â... David Mikkelson explained to the Los Angeles Times in 1997: â... When I sent letters out to companies, I found I got a much better response with an official-looking organizationâ... s stationery.â...

It probably didnâ... t represent a crime to do so, but it reveals that the very foundation of Snopes was built on a lie. Just imagine if Snopes made such a discovery in its research of another organization â... if indeed it performed such research.

From the beginning, the entire Snopes fact-checking team was comprised of this husband-wife duo, with both writing their posts based entirely on secondhand internet sources, with Barbara also responsible for accounting and David the tech guru.

By 2015, the Mikkelsonsâ... marriage had ended in divorce â... and it wasnâ... t pretty. The legal disputes involved continue to haunt the fate of the company even today.

In the court filings, Barbara, 59, has accused her former husband, 58, of â... raiding the corporate business Bardav bank account for his personal use and attorney feesâ... without consulting her. She claimed he embezzled $98,000 from the company over the course of four years, â... which he expended upon himself and the prostitutes he hired.â... She alleged that her ex-husband removed thousands from their business accounts between April and June of 2016 to pay for trips for him and his â... girlfriend.â... She said he spent nearly $10,000 on a 24-day â... personal vacationâ... in India in 2016 and expensed a plane ticket for his girlfriend to Buenos Aires.

â... Heâ... s been depleting the corporate account by spending monies from it on his personal expenses,â... she said in the filing.

David and Barbara Mikkelson

For his part, David claimed the India visit was a legitimate business trip, that he only expensed a fraction of the costs â€¦ 22.5 percent. He explained that he was considering setting up a fact-checking website in India and wanted to get a sense of the culture. He also said he went to Buenos Aires to attend an international fact-checking conference.

Meanwhile, David wanted his salary raised from $240,000 to $360,000 â€¦ arguing that this would still put him below the â€¦ industry standardsâ€¦ and that he should be paid up to $720,000 a year. Writing to Barbara in an email, he said his salary â€¦ should be about 2x to 3x what it is now, Iâ€¦ I'll settle for $360K with the understanding that itâ€¦ s to be retroactive to the start of the year.â€¦

â€¦ So bitter was the dispute, that they even fell out over the arbiter they had appointed to settle disputes, meaning that Facebookâ€¦ s arbiter cannot even agree on its own arbiter,â€¦ explained a 2016 exposÃ© in the London Daily Mail.

The divorce settlement stipulated that David receive a salary of $240,000 a year in 2015, while both of the former couple were due to receive $20,000 a month as a draw against profits, as well as a share of any net profit the company made after those payments.

â€¦ Each party waives his or her claim upon Bardavâ€¦ s revenues received by Husband into his PayPal account and spent by him, accountantâ€¦ s fees for restating tax returns to reflect previously unreported income. â€¦!â€¦ the settlement stipulated.

Savings, IRAS and stockholdings of well over $1.5 million were allocated to Barbara, while she renounced claim on their marital home in Calabasas, California, in return for a payment of $660,000.

David kept their joint baseball card collection, a savings account with a $1.59 million balance and other savings worth more than $300,000.

They later increased the $20,000 monthly payments to $30,000.

After the split, David hired Elyssa Young, now 49, as an administrative assistant at Snopes, whom he married in 2016. She is also a long-time escort and porn star who worked for decades under the name â€¦ Erin Oâ... Bryn.â...

She described herself on her Twitter page as â... a mature and experienced courtesan, idealist, activist & dreamer.â... On her escort website, she called herself â... an elite and discreet companionâ... who â... understands that while pleasure and passion may be explored in the bedroom, it is hardly the only place.â...

â... I only accept a very limited number of new lovers because Iâ... m only seeking long-term engagements,â... she wrote.

The new Mrs. Mikkelson

She charged a â... non-negotiableâ... fee of $1,200 for four hours of â... companionship and entertainmentâ... and $5,000 for 24 hours, according to her very public website.

Young ran for the U.S. Congress in Hawaii as a Libertarian candidate in 2004, during which she handed out â... Re-Defeat Bushâ... cards and condoms stamped with the slogan â... Donâ... t get screwed again.â...

â... Letâ... s face it, I am an unlikely candidate,â... she posted on her campaign website. â... I fully admit that I am a courtesan.â...

She received 3 percent of the vote in her bid for Congress.

Young is hardly the only Snopes employee who is publicly frank about her sex life.

One of the lead fact-checkers, Kim LaCapria, has also been a sex-and-fetish blogger who went by the pseudonym â... Vice Vixen.â... She described her blog as a lifestyle website â... with a specific focus on naughtiness, sin, carnal pursuits, and general hedonism and bonne vivante-ery.â... She regularly provided intimate advice and reviewed sex toys, including a vibrating wand that â... drives boys mad.â... Today the site describes her as â... a New York-based content manager.â... Describing her day-off activities on another blog, she wrote that she â... played scrabble, smoked pot, and posted to Snopes.â... She added, â... Thatâ... s what I did on my day on, too.â...

Young, meanwhile, continues at Snopes as â... administrative assistant.â...

Snopes has received some scrutiny for not employing any â... standardized procedureâ... for fact-checking. Mikkelson explains that the process â... involves multiple stages of editorial oversight, so no output is the result of a single personâ... s discretion.â... There is also no â... blanket set of standardsâ... for contributors.

Beginning in August 2015, a company called Proper Media started brokering advertising on Snopes in exchange for a commission. Through March 2017, it collected the revenues and disbursed them to the Bardov bank account. Then, on March 9, 2017, David Mikkelson terminated the agreement in hopes of regaining full control of Snopes. When Proper Media stopped the payments to the bank, Mikkelson appealed to readers through a GoFundMe account â... raising an astonishing $665,000 very quickly. But, since the initial excitement, the GFM campaign has raised only $176,017. Despite its partnership with Facebook, Snopes is still struggling. Appeals continue to be made on the SaveSnopes.com website.

Still the legal battles continue â... along with the question of whether Snopes can be trusted to be fair, balanced and unbiased.

That gets right back to which questions Snopes asks itself. Hereâ... s another very recent example: â... Do Nike factory workers in Vietnam earn 20 cents per hour?â...

That was the question Snopes asked itself regarding the deal the company made with Colin Kaepernick earlier this month.

Snopes ruled a no decision. Why? Because itâ... s not the right question.

â... Nike workers in Vietnam are 80 percent female, and some are illegally forced to labor more than the statutory working week of 48 hours,â... Snopes found.

But, it also found that it is not typical for Vietnamese employees to work 70 to 80 hours per week. Furthermore, while wages were around 20 cents per hour in the mid-1990s, they have increased since then.

Was it a way for Snopes to cater to a potential or even existing advertiser? Was it a way it could defuse the Kaepernick rebellion? Who knows, but it added little to the raging national controversy.

Itâ... s not just through the questions Snopes asks itself that it deflects issues of bias.

You can also compare what Snopes finds in its sleuthing about the personalities it scrutinizes.

The blog Owlcation compared two similar â... investigationsâ... Snopes conducted regarding two very different politicians â... Dr. Ben Carson and Bill and Hillary Clinton.

Question No. 1 was: "... Did Ben Carson purchase a $31,000 dining set and charge it to HUD?"...

Snopes claimed the allegation was true.

... The article then proceeds to pile on references from the New York Times and the Guardian that offer further damning claims about Carson. But then comes the information that completely refutes the claims made earlier in the article, "... Owlcation reports. ... Carson did not order the furniture, and he told CNN: ... I did not request new furniture, but asked if it could be remediated. ... The Snopes article even provides part of Carson's response which puts the lie to the article's ... true ... claim: ... I was as surprised as anyone to find out that a $31,000 dining set had been ordered, ... Carson said in the statement. ... I have requested that the order be canceled. We will find another solution for the furniture replacement. ... So, why would an article that ends with information answering the question, ... Did Ben Carson purchase a $31,000 dining set and charge it to HUD?, ... with a resounding ... No, ... claim that the statement ... HUD Secretary Ben Carson bought a $31,000 dining set and billed taxpayers for it, ... is ... true ... ? The end of the article refutes its beginning, but anyone who just casually glances over it would likely come away thinking that Carson was, in fact, trying to bilk the taxpayers out of $31,000 for a dining set and likely would not have even bothered to note that it was not for Carson's personal home use but for his office at HUD. ...

Such was not the case in a similar story about whether the Clintons ... were forced to return an estimated $200,000 in furniture, china and art they ... stole ... from the White House. ... This claim is labeled, ... Mostly False. ...

... Again, the article twists itself through some loops of creative analysis to finally land on the claim, ... All told, the Clintons paid back or returned approximately $136,000 worth of furniture, artwork, china and other household items they had kept upon leaving office. ... That number looks a lot closer to $200,000 than the label of ... mostly false ... would indicate, ... says Owlcation. ... The Clintons clearly took items from the White House that did not belong to them, yet their sycophants quibble about the actual value of the things, not the fact that they took them. If taking things that do not belong to you is not ... stealing, ... then we need a new definition of the word. ...

Ultimately, bias is in the eye of the beholder, but even David Mikkelsen admits most often it is conservatives and Republicans who detect bias in Snopes reports.

Is that surprising after learning the history of this enterprise?

And what does it tell you about the worldview of Snopes's new partner ... Facebook?

Deep State conspirator Michael Isikoffâ... s years-long operations to frame Robert Muellerâ... s political enemies are coming to light â... including bombshell details about his complicity in a plot to target Bush official Scooter Libby with a fraudulent special counsel investigation that Muellerâ... s FBI knew to be fraudulent.

When the Deep State needs a Special Counsel to protect its friends and punish its enemies, it looks for a willing journalist to help get it done. One is named Michael Isikoff.

When the Swamp needed to protect Hillary Clinton and hurt Donald Trump, they fed Isikoff the phony Steele Dossier that Clinton paid for to frame Trump.

It kicked off the plot that, today, is widely known as Russiagate.

Trending: John Kerry Fights to Keep Migrants Off His Private Beach

In what was a journalistic obelisk to fake news, on September 23, 2016 Isikoffâ... s article entitled â... U.S. intel officials probe ties between Trump adviser and Kremlinâ... posted on Yahoo.com.

Then, to round out the cycle of deceit, corrupt officials at the FBI and DoJ used Isikoffâ... s â... news reportâ... to obtain FISA warrants authorizing spying on the Trump Campaign.

In the world of fake journalism, itâ... s called circular reporting.

Sometimes also called â... false confirmation,â... circular reporting happens when a piece of information is credited to multiple sources but, in reality, only comes from one source. And when that single source, alleged as credible, is found to be incredible the reporter is guilty of circular reporting. In the Steele Dossier case, Isikoffâ... s circular reporting was used to authorize the illegal surveillance of a Presidential candidate, plus to justify the unconstitutional appointment of Special Counsel Robert Mueller. In other words: A twofer.

In similar fashion, Isikoffâ... s deceptive reporting played a key role in the earlier Deep State operation known as Plamegate. Like Russiagate, it involved Deep State actors Robert Mueller and James Comey.

One example of Isikoffâ... s misleading reporting in the Plamegate hoax came on September 6, 2006 when Isikoff broke the following story: â... THE MAN WHO SAID TOO MUCH.â...

Isikoff wrote: â... Armitageâ... s admission led to a flurry of anxious phone calls and meetings that day at the State Department. (Days earlier, the Justice Department had launched a criminal investigation into the Plame leak after the CIA informed officials there that she was an undercover officer.) Within hours, William Howard Taft IV, the State Departmentâ... s legal adviser, notified a senior Justice official that Armitage had information relevant to the case. The next day, a team of FBI agents and Justice prosecutors investigating the leak questioned the deputy secretary. Armitage acknowledged that he had passed along to Novak information contained in a classified State Department memo: that Wilsonâ... s wife worked on weapons-of-mass-destruction issues at the CIA. (The memo made no reference to her undercover status.) Armitage had met with Novak in his State Department office on July 8, 2003â... just days before Novak published his first piece identifying Plame. Powell, Armitage and Taft, the only three officials at the State Department who knew the story, never breathed a word of it publicly and Armitageâ... s role remained secret.â...

Isikoff excluded this crucial fact: When Armitage confessed to FBI and DoJ officials that he was Robert Novakâ... s source, those officials asked Armitage, Secretary of State Colin Powell and the Legal Adviser to the Department of State William H. Taft to tell no one about Armitageâ... s confession. Although they were under no obligation to comply, the three agreed to remain silent.

Our source for this initial silencing of the three is Taft. Taft was, Isikoff claimed, the source for his reporting on September 6, 2006.

Isikoff's omission of the initial silencing by FBI and DoJ officials in 2003 was replaced by his reporting that Patrick Fitzgerald silenced Armitage about three months later after Comey had appointed Fitzgerald as Special Counsel.

Consequently, by altering the silencing timeline, Isikoff omitted the initial complicity of Department of State and Department of Justice officials in the appointment of a Special Counsel tasked to find a leaker who confessed three months earlier.

When James Comey appointed Patrick Fitzgerald three months after Armitage confessed, Comey said Fitzgerald's mission was to find the criminal leaker.

But that wasn't true. Just as in Russiagate, the role of the Deep State Special Counsel was not to search for a criminal, but to search for a crime and person(s) to indict. In other words â€¦ hunt for scalps.

Isikoff helped create the false narrative of a mission to find the â€¦ leakerâ€¦ who outed Valerie Plame; then, when that narrative no longer was needed, he shifted the storyline toward the prosecution of Scooter Libby for having allegedly lied to the FBI.

Both Plamegate and Russiagate are long-running, bait-and-switch operations aided by duplicitous journalism. They illustrate how Deep State journalism rolls.

When James Comey appointed Patrick Fitzgerald three months after Armitage confessed, Comey said Fitzgerald's mission was to find the criminal leaker.

But that wasn't true. Just as in Russiagate, the role of the Deep State Special Counsel was not to search for a criminal, but to search for a crime and person(s) to indict. In other words â€¦ hunt for scalps.

Isikoff helped create the false narrative of a mission to find the â€¦ leakerâ€¦ who outed Valerie Plame; then, when that narrative no longer was needed, he shifted the storyline toward the prosecution of Scooter Libby for having allegedly lied to the FBI.

Both Plamegate and Russiagate are long-running, bait-and-switch operations aided by duplicitous journalism. They illustrate how Deep State journalism rolls.

The EyeOpener- Exposing In-Q-Tel : The CIA's Own Venture Capital Firm

Google, Facebook, the IT Sector and the CIA

In-Q-Tel was formed by the CIA in 1999 as a private, not-for-profit venture capital firm with the specific task of delivering technology to America's intelligence community. Publicly, In-Q-Tel markets itself as an innovative way to leverage the power of the private sector by identifying key emerging technologies and providing companies with the funding to bring those technologies to market. In reality, however, what In-Q-Tel represents is a dangerous blurring of the lines between the public and private sectors in a way that makes it difficult to tell where the American intelligence community ends and the IT sector begins.

In-Q-Tel has generated a number of stories since its inception based on what can only be described as the "creepiness" factor of its investments in overtly Orwellian technologies.

This is our EyeOpener Report by James Corbett presenting documented facts and cases on the CIA's privately owned venture capital firm In-Q-Tel, in which well-connected board members drawn from the private sector profit from the investments made with CIA funds that come from the taxpayer.

Gainspan Corporation manufactures low power Wi-Fi semiconductors that form the heart of modern remote sensing, monitoring and control technologies.

Recorded Future Inc. is a Massachusetts web startup that monitors the web in real time and claims its media analytics search engine can be used to predict the future.

Keyhole Corp. created the 3D earth visualization technology that became the core of Google Earth.

The common denominator? All of these companies, and hundreds more cutting edge technology and software startups, have received seed money and investment funding from In-Q-Tel, the CIA's own venture capital firm.

Welcome, this is James Corbett of The Corbett Report with your Eyeopener Report for BoilingFrogsPost.com

For decades, the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, or DARPA, has been the American governmental body tasked with conducting high-risk, high-payoff research into cutting edge science and technology. Responsible most famously for developing the world's first operational packet switching network that eventually became the core of the Internet, DARPA tends to garner headlines these days for some of its more outlandish research proposals and is generally looked upon as a blue-sky research agency whose endeavours only occasionally bear fruit.

In the post-9/11 consolidation of the American intelligence community, IARPA, or the Intelligence Advanced Research Projects Agency, was created to serve as the spymaster's equivalent of DARPA's defense research.

In contrast to this, In-Q-Tel was formed by the CIA in 1999 as a private, not-for-profit venture capital firm with the specific task of delivering technology to America's intelligence community.

Publicly, In-Q-Tel markets itself as an innovative way to leverage the power of the private sector by identifying key emerging technologies and providing companies with the funding to bring those technologies to market.

In reality, however, what In-Q-Tel represents is a dangerous blurring of the lines between the public and private sectors in a way that makes it difficult to tell where the American intelligence community ends and the IT sector begins.

In-Q-Tel has generated a number of stories since its inception based on what can only be described as the "creepiness" factor of its investments in overtly Orwellian technologies.

In 2004, KMWorld published an interview with Greg Pepus, then In-Q-Tel's senior director of federal and intelligence community strategy, about some of their investments. Pepus was especially proud of the CIA's investment in Inxight, a company that offered software for data mining unstructured data sources like blogs and websites with analytical processing.

In 2006 it was revealed that AT&T had provided NSA eavesdroppers full access to its customer's internet traffic, and that the American intelligence community was illegally scooping up reams of internet data wholesale. The data mining equipment installed in the NSA back door, a Narus STA 6400, was developed by a company whose partners were funded by In-Q-Tel.

Also in 2006, News21 reported on an In-Q-Tel investment in CallMiner, a company developing technology for turning recorded telephone conversations into searchable databases. In late 2005 it was revealed that the NSA had been engaged in an illegal warrantless wiretapping program since at least the time of the 9/11 attacks, monitoring the private domestic phone calls of American citizens in breach of their fourth amendment rights.

In 2009, the Telegraph reported on In-Q-Tel's investment in Visible Technologies, a company specializing in software that monitors what people are saying on social media websites like YouTube, Twitter, Flickr and Amazon. The software is capable of real-time communications tracking, trend monitoring, and even sentiment analysis that categorizes blog posts and comments as positive, negative or neutral. Just last month, the Federal Reserve tendered a Request For Proposal for just this type of software so the privately owned central bank could monitor what people are saying about it online.

Two of the names that come up most often in connection with In-Q-Tel, however, need no introduction: Google and Facebook.

The publicly available record on the Facebook/In-Q-Tel connection is tenuous. Facebook received $12.7 million in venture capital from Accel, whose manager, James Breyer, now sits on their board. He was formerly the chairman of the National Venture Capital Association, whose board included Gilman Louie, then the CEO of In-Q-Tel. The connection is indirect, but the suggestion of CIA involvement with Facebook, however tangential, is disturbing in the light of Facebook's history of violating the privacy of its users.

Google's connection to In-Q-Tel is more straightforward, if officially denied. In 2006, ex-CIA officer Robert David Steele told Homeland Security Today that Google has been taking money and direction for elements of the US Intelligence Community, including the Office of Research and Development at the Central Intelligence Agency, In-Q-Tel, and in all probability, both the National Security Agency (NSA) and the Army's Intelligence and Security Command. Later that year, a blogger claimed that an official Google spokesman had denied the claims, but no official press statement was released.

Steele's accusation is not the only suggestion of American intelligence involvement with Google, however.

In 2005, In-Q-Tel sold over 5,000 shares of Google stock. The shares are widely presumed to have come from In-Q-Tel's investment in Keyhole Inc., which was subsequently bought out by Google, but this is uncertain.

In 2010, it was announced that Google was working directly with the National Security Agency to secure its electronic assets.

Also in 2010, Wired reported that In-Q-Tel and Google had jointly provided venture capital funding to Recorded Future Inc., a temporal analytics search engine company that analyzes tens of thousands of web sources to predict trends and events.

But as potentially alarming as In-Q-Tel's connections to internet giants like Facebook and Google are, and as disturbing as its interest in data mining technologies may be, the CIA's venture capital arm is interested in more than just web traffic monitoring.

The In-Q-Tel website currently lists two practice areas, Information and Communication Technologies and Physical and Biological Technologies. The latter field consists of capabilities of interest such as The on-site determination of individual human traits for IC purposes and Tracking and/or authentication of both individuals and objects. In-Q-Tel also lists two areas that are on its radar when it comes to biotech Nano-bio Convergence and Physiological Intelligence. Detailed breakdowns of each area explain that the intelligence community is interested in, amongst other things, self-assembling batteries, single molecule detectors, targeted drug delivery platforms, and sensors that can tell where a person has been and what substances he has been handling from biomarkers like trace compounds in the breath or samples of skin.

In the years since its formation, many have been led to speculate about In-Q-Tel and its investments, but what requires no speculation is an understanding that a privately owned venture capital firm, created by and for the CIA, in which well-connected board members drawn from the private sector can then profit from the investments made with CIA funds that itself come from the taxpayer represent an erosion of the barrier between the public and private spheres that should give even the most credulous pause for thought.

What does it mean that emerging technology companies are becoming wedded to the CIA as soon as their technology shows promise?

What can be the public benefit in fostering and encouraging technologies which can be deployed for spying on all internet users, including American citizens, in direct contravention of the CIA's own prohibitions against operating domestically?

If new software and technology is being brought to market by companies with In-Q-Tel advisors on their boards, what faith can anyone purchasing American technologies have that their software and hardware is not designed with CIA backdoors to help the American intelligence community achieve its vision of "Total Information Awareness" ?

Rather than scrutinizing each individual investment that In-Q-Tel makes, perhaps an institutional approach is required.

At this point, the American people have to ask themselves whether they want the CIA, an agency that has participated in the overthrow of foreign, democratically-elected governments, an agency that has implanted fake stories in the news media to justify American war interests, an agency that at this very moment is engaged in offensive drone strikes, killing suspected "insurgents" and civilians alike in numerous theaters around the world, should be entrusted with developing such close relationships with the IT sector, or whether In-Q-Tel should be scrapped for good.

Representatives for Univision declined to comment for this story.

Earlier this month, Univision put the kibosh on a long-awaited IPO and laid off more than 150 employees across both the Spanish-language TV network and Gizmodo Media Group it acquired last year. And in March the company laid off 20 employees as it announced plans to restructure the business amid a steady erosion in ratings on the network.

As part of Univision's wholesale company evaluation, an audit of efficiencies is being conducted by Boston Consulting Group.

Executives hope the review will position the to succeed in an era that rewards digital success and fervently loyal, but exceedingly fragmented TV audiences for both Univision and Fusion, an English-language joint venture that it has wholly owned since 2016.

Like many of its legacy media cohorts, Univision has come face-to-face with an evolving, more digitally-focused landscape, forcing the company to make tough decisions in reevaluating how to position itself to survive the future.

But there's plenty of uncertainty among rank-and-file employees as to what the company will actually look like, and whose jobs could be on the chopping block.

My impression has been that Univision is not handling this situation well and people are freaked out, an editor at Gizmodo Media Group, who declined to be named, told TheWrap. But as of yet there have not been any cuts to rank-and-file GMG editorial staff. In fact, there doesn't appear to be a hiring freeze.

Illustrating the stark differences in Univision's TV and digital properties, the company reported that core advertising revenue for TV was down 18.4 percent in the most-recent fourth quarter, while digital core advertising revenue was up 2.8 percent.

Also Read: Ratings: Univision Awards Show 'Premio Lo Nuestro' Runs Runner-Up to NBC's Olympics

Primetime ratings on the main network have plummeted in recent years, with longtime rival Telemundo surpassing the once-dominant Univision in the key 18-49-year-old demographic.

During the 2010-11 TV season, Univision averaged 2.2 million viewers in the key demo, while Telemundo managed just 709,000. In the most recent 2016-17 TV season, Univision averaged just 843,000 viewers from Monday to Friday in the same 18-49 demo. Telemundo finished with 861,000 per night.

That's a whopping 62 percent decline for Univision since 2010, with the network consistently falling since 2012-13.

Despite the drop in ratings and the shuffling happening inside the company, Univision has continued to perform financially. Revenue at Univision declined less than 1 percent in 2017 to $3.02 billion from $3.04 billion in 2016.

And the new digital division is emerging as a bright spot, as well as a platform to reach a more diverse group of young consumers a necessity as its traditional Spanish-speaking audience has evolved.

All but one of Gizmodo's sites recently experienced double-digit growth in visitors month-to-month. The only outlier, Lifehacker, missed the mark only because it had just experienced back-to-back months of all-time visits.

“... Without losing sight of our core mission to inform, empower and entertain our audiences, we know that disruption is required to transform this business into a company that will not only exist but continue to thrive in the future,” Falco wrote in his staff memo.

Of note, House Intel Committee chairman Devin Nunes \(R-CA\) announced last week that they were prepared to hold McCabe and assistant Attorney General Rod Rosenstein in contempt for the DOJ's failure to comply with a previous subpoena. He also accused the FBI and the DOJ of willfully refusing to comply with an Aug. 24 subpoena in part by refusing the committee's request "for an explanation of Peter Strzok's dismissal from the Mueller probe."

Bruce and Nellie Ohr

As we reported yesterday, Nellie Ohr, the wife of disgraced DOJ official Bruce Ohr, was employed at Fusion GPS last year. Her term of employment overlapped with the period when the Trump dossier was being compiled. Though Fox was unable to discern the exact nature of her role at the firm, its reporters discovered that she has done extensive research on Russia-related topics for think tanks based in the Washington, DC area.

Fox News reports:

A senior Justice Department official demoted last week for concealing his meetings with the men behind the anti-Trump dossier had even closer ties to Fusion GPS, the firm responsible for the incendiary document, than have been disclosed, Fox News has confirmed: The official's wife worked for Fusion GPS during the 2016 election.

Contacted by Fox News, investigators for the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence (HPSCI) confirmed that Nellie H. Ohr, wife of the demoted official, Bruce G. Ohr, worked for the opposition research firm last year. The precise nature of Mrs. Ohr's duties including whether she worked on the dossier remains unclear but a review of her published works available online reveals Mrs. Ohr has written extensively on Russia-related subjects. HPSCI staff confirmed to Fox News that she was paid by Fusion GPS through the summer and fall of 2016.

Also notable is the fact that Bruce Ohr's wife not only worked for Fusion GPS, but also represented the CIA's "Open Source Works" group in a 2010 "expert working group report on international organized crime" along with Bruce Ohr and Fusion GPS cofounder Glenn Simpson.

Of note Open Source Works is described as the "CIA's in-house open source analysis component, devoted to intelligence analysis of unclassified, open source information." So - Nellie Ohr, the wife of recently demoted DOJ official Bruce Ohr - worked for both Fusion GPS and the CIA. It is unclear whether her time at Fusion overlapped with her time at the CIA.

Open Source Works, which is the CIA's in-house open source analysis component, is devoted to intelligence analysis of unclassified, open source information. Oddly, however, the directive that established Open Source Works is classified, as is the charter of the organization. In fact, CIA says the very existence of any such records is a classified fact. "... The CIA can neither confirm nor deny the existence or nonexistence of records responsive to your request,..." wrote Susan Viscuso, CIA Information and Privacy Coordinator, in a November 29 response to a Freedom of Information Act request from Jeffrey Richelson of the National Security Archive for the Open Source Works directive and charter.

"... The fact of the existence or nonexistence of requested records is currently and properly classified and is intelligence sources and methods information that is protected from disclosure,"... Dr. Viscuso wrote. This is a surprising development since Open Source Works "... by definition ..." does not engage in clandestine collection of intelligence. Rather, it performs analysis based on unclassified, open source materials. -FAS House investigators determined that during the 2016 election, Bruce Ohr met with former MI6 spy Christopher Steele, and shortly after the 2016 election he met with Glenn Simpson, the co-founder of Fusion GPS - who commissioned Steele to assemble the dossier.

Ron DeSantis (R-FL)

Another factor in McCabe's sudden cancellation is a report from The Hill's John Solomon that Rep. Ron DeSantis (R-FL) recently interviewed a retired FBI supervisor who told him he was instructed by Deputy Director Andrew McCabe not to call the 2012 Benghazi attack an act of terrorism when distributing the FBI's findings to the larger intelligence community - despite knowing exactly who conducted the attack.

The agent found the instruction concerning because his unit had gathered incontrovertible evidence showing a major al Qaeda figure had directed the attack and the information had already been briefed to President Obama, the lawmaker said. -The Hill

If true, it means McCabe lied for the Obama administration in a clear, partisan violation of the FBI's mandate to "detect and prosecute crimes against the United States," not "lie for the President so as not to offend Islam." As Rep. DeSantis told The Hill:

"What operational reason would there be to issue an edict to agents telling them, in the face of virtually conclusive evidence to the contrary, not to categorize the Benghazi attack as a result of terrorism? By placing the interests of the Obama administration over the public's interests, the order is yet another data point highlighting the politicization of the FBI."

Whether McCabe cancelled over his "Ohr problem," or for instructing a retired FBI supervisor to lie about the Benghazi attack, or because he doesn't want to talk about Peter Strzok's dismissal from the Mueller probe - one thing is for sure; Devin Nunes can't be happy, and we can probably expect subpoenas to start flying off his desk as soon as this morning.

FBI EMAILS SHOW OBAMA ATTACKED OTHERS USING GOVERNMENT RESOURCES

By John Solomon

Just before Thanksgiving, House Republicans amended the list of documents theyâ€¦ d like President Trump to declassify in the Russia investigation. With little fanfare or explanation, the lawmakers, led by House Intelligence Committee Chairman Devin Nunes (R-Calif.), added a string of emails between the FBI and the Department of Justice (DOJ) to their wish list.

Sources tell me the targeted documents may provide the most damning evidence to date of potential abuses of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA), evidence that has been kept from the majority of members of Congress for more than two years.

The email exchanges included then-FBI Director James Comey, key FBI investigators in the Russia probe and lawyers in the DOJ's national security division, and they occurred in early to mid-October, before the FBI successfully secured a FISA warrant to spy on Trump campaign adviser Carter Page.

The email exchanges show the FBI was aware â€¦ before it secured the now-infamous warrant â€¦ that there were intelligence community concerns about the reliability of the main evidence used to support it: the Christopher Steele dossier.

The exchanges also indicate FBI officials were aware that Steele, the former MI6 British intelligence operative then working as a confidential human source for the bureau, had contacts with news media reporters before the FISA warrant was secured.

The FBI fired Steele on Nov. 1, 2016 â€¦ two weeks after securing the warrant â€¦ on the grounds that he had unauthorized contacts with the news media.

But the FBI withheld from the American public and Congress, until months later, that Steele had been paid to find his dirt on Trump by a firm doing political opposition research for the Democratic Party and for Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton, and that Steele himself harbored hatred for Trump.

If the FBI knew of his media contacts and the concerns about the reliability of his dossier before seeking the warrant, it would constitute a serious breach of FISA regulations and the trust that the FISA court places in the FBI.

That's because the FBI has an obligation to certify to the court before it approves FISA warrants that its evidence is verified, and to alert the judges to any flaws in its evidence or information that suggest the target might be innocent.

We now know the FBI used an article from Yahoo News as independent corroboration for the Steele dossier when, in fact, Steele had talked to the news outlet.

If the FBI knew Steele had that media contact before it submitted the article, it likely would be guilty of circular intelligence reporting, a forbidden tactic in which two pieces of evidence are portrayed as independent corroboration when, in fact, they originated from the same source.

These issues are why the FBI email chain, kept from most members of Congress for the past two years, suddenly landed on the declassification list.

The addition to the list also comes at a sensitive time, as House Republicans prepare on Friday to question Comey, who signed off on the FISA warrant while remaining an outlier in the intelligence community about the Steele dossier.

Most intelligence officials, such as former CIA Director John Brennan and former Director of National Intelligence James Clapper, have embraced the concerns laid out in the Steele dossier of possible â€¦ but still unproven â€¦ collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia.

Yet, 10 months after the probe started and a month after Robert Mueller was named special counsel in the Russia probe, Comey cast doubt on the Steele dossier, calling it â€¦ unverifiedâ€¦ and â€¦ salaciousâ€¦ in sworn testimony before Congress.

Former FBI lawyer Lisa Page further corroborated Comey's concerns in recent testimony before House lawmakers, revealing that the FBI had not corroborated the collusion charges by May 2017, despite nine months of exhaustive counterintelligence investigation.

Lawmakers now want to question Comey about whether the information in the October email string contributed to the former FBI director's assessment.

The question long has lingered about when the doubts inside the FBI first surfaced about the allegations in the Steele dossier.

Sources tell me the email chain provides the most direct evidence that the bureau, and possibly the DOJ, had reasons to doubt the Steele dossier before the FISA warrant was secured.

Sources say the specifics of the email chain remain classified, but its general sentiments about the Steele dossier and the media contacts have been discussed in nonclassified settings.

If these documents are released, the American public will have clear and convincing evidence to see the FISA warrant that escalated the Russia probe just before Election Day was flawed and the judges [were] misled, one knowledgeable source told me.

Congressional investigators also have growing evidence that some evidence inserted into the fourth and final application for the FISA was a document signed by current Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein was suspect.

Nunes hinted as much himself in comments he made on Sean Hannity's Fox News TV show on Nov. 20, when he disclosed the FBI email string was added to the declassification request. The release of the documents will give finality to everyone who wants to know what their government did to a political campaign and verify that the Trump campaign did not collude with Russia during the election, Nunes said.

As more of the secret evidence used to justify the Russia probe becomes public, an increasingly dark portrait of the FBI's conduct emerges.

The bureau, under a Democratic-controlled Justice Department, sought a warrant to spy on the duly nominated GOP candidate for president in the final weeks of the 2016 election, based on evidence that was generated under a contract paid by his political opponent.

That evidence, the Steele dossier, was not fully vetted by the bureau and was deemed unverified months after the warrant was issued.

At least one news article was used in the FISA warrant to bolster the dossier as independent corroboration when, in fact, it was traced to a news organization that had been in contact with Steele, creating a high likelihood it was circular intelligence reporting.

And the entire warrant, the FBI's own document shows, was being rushed to approval by two agents who hated Trump and stated in their own texts that they wanted to stop the Republican from becoming president.

If ever there were grounds to investigate the investigators, these facts provide the justification.

Director Comey and Deputy Attorney General Rosenstein likely hold the answers, as do the still-classified documents. It's time all three be put under a public microscope.

CONFIRMED: Obama Wiretapped Trump and Susan Rice Spied on Him

Breaking News By Amy Moreno September 19, 2017

ShareTweet

Remember when the mainstream media attacked President Trump relentlessly for claiming he was spied on by the Obama administration?

They called him every name in the book, and mocked him for even suggesting that Obama would do such a thing.

Well, turns out President Trump was 100% correct, according to new bombshell reports that reveal Trump's former campaign manager Paul Manafort was wiretapped both before and after the election.

Now, we also know that Susan Rice unmasked Trump campaign officials, even after she lied and said she did not.

Will there be an INVESTIGATION into this overreaching and illegal behavior?

From Washington Free Beacon

Former Obama administration National Security Adviser Susan Rice told a House committee this month she requested the identities of Trump transition aides that were hidden in sensitive intelligence reports to protect Americans' privacy rights.

Rice testified before a closed session of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence Sept. 6 that she asked U.S. intelligence agencies for the names of Trump advisers to be unmasked in transcripts of communications intercepts.

Rice asked for names to be unmasked in a transcript of an electronic intercept involving a meeting between three senior Trump aides and a United Arab Emirates official who had traveled to the United States for an informal visit.

The three officials included candidate Donald Trump's national security adviser, retired Lt. Gen. Michael Flynn; presidential campaign chief executive Steve Bannon; and Jared Kushner, President Trump's son-in-law, according to CNN, which first reported on Rice's closed-door testimony.

Details of Rice's testimony on the unmasking of Trump aides were made public Sept. 14, quoting unidentified government sources, and included comments from members of Congress who did not dispute the closed-door testimony.

Rice's disclosures before the intelligence panel appear to contradict earlier statements she made asserting that she had no knowledge of the unmasking of Americans, the process of identifying the names of Americans who are protected by privacy laws and who are incidentally spied on during sensitive foreign electronic intelligence operations.

In March, Rice was asked by a television interviewer about the unmasking allegations first raised by House Intelligence Committee Chairman Rep. Devin Nunes (R., Calif.). She stated: "I know nothing about this."

During the House testimony, however, Rice acknowledged she had asked for the blacked-out names of the Trump advisers who had met with Sheikh Mohammed bin Zayed Al Nahyan, a UAE crown prince, in New York Dec. 15. The meeting was to discuss helping the Trump transition set up a back channel to Russia, according to CNN.

Zayed's visit to New York was not known to the State Department.

Asked by the Washington Free Beacon why she sought the identities of people who were part of the opposition political party and key members of an incoming administration transition team, Rice declined to comment and through a spokeswoman said the answers would "pertain to classified information."

Erin Pelton, Rice's spokeswoman, said allegations that Rice improperly sought the identities of Americans from intelligence reports is "entirely false."

"There is nothing improper, unusual, or political about such requests, nor do such requests bear any relationship to the unfounded and debunked allegations that the Obama White House ordered the surveillance of any U.S. persons," Pelton said.

Rice also insisted that she has not and will not "divulge classified information," Pelton said.

OBAMA-APPOINTED FEDERAL INSPECTOR THREATENED BY CLINTON CAMPAIGN OVER EMAIL INVESTIGATION

0 COMMENT

28 NOV 2017 POSTED BY ZERO HEDGE

An Obama appointed government watchdog central to the Hillary Clinton email investigation says that he, his family and his office faced an intense backlash from Clinton allies, who threatened him over findings that Clinton mishandled classified information.

Former Inspector General Charles McCullough III told Fox News Chief Intel correspondent Catherine Herridge that he was under intense pressure from senior officials on the left with one Clinton campaign official threatening that he and another government investigator would be immediately fired under a Hillary Clinton presidency:

It was told in no uncertain terms, by a source directly from the campaign, that we would be the first two to be fired with [Clinton's] administration. That that was definitely going to happen. Charles McCullough III

As a refresher, over 2,100 classified emails were sent over Clinton's personal server, which was used exclusively for government business. Despite this, former FBI Director James Comey who had drafted Clinton's exoneration letter months before reviewing evidence in the case recommended that the DOJ not prosecute the case.

McCullough was recommended to Obama by then-Director of National Intelligence, James Clapper, who told McCullough that Clinton's conduct was extremely reckless, adding the campaign will have heartburn about that.

Via Fox News:

He [McCullough] said Clapper's Clinton email comments came during an in-person meeting about a year before the presidential election in late December 2015 or early 2016. [Clapper] was as off-put as the rest of us were.

After the Clapper meeting, McCullough said his team was marginalized. I was told by senior officials to keep [Clapper] out of it, he said, while acknowledging he tried to keep his boss in the loop.

EGREGIOUS VIOLATIONS

In January 2016, McCullough told Republicans on the Senate Intelligence and Foreign Affairs committees that emails classified above Top Secret had been passed through the former secretary of state's private, unsecure server such as an email about Benghazi she sent to daughter Chelsea Clinton (using pseudonym Diane Reynolds) on the night of September 11th, 2012 from @clintonemail.com which not only divulged highly classified military intel over a non-government server vulnerable to foreign surveillance it also revealed that the Obama administration knew that an Al Queda-like group was responsible for the attack.

One wonders what Chelsea's security clearance was at the time?

Instead of informing the American public that radical Islam was responsible for the attack, the Obama administration fabricated a story peddling the lie that anger over an anti-Islamic YouTube video resulted in the attack, which led to the arrest and imprisonment of an innocent man.

As one of a handful of people who reviewed the 22 Top Secret Clinton emails deemed too classified to ever see the light of day, McCullough says â... There was a very good reason to withhold those emails â...! there would have been harm to national security,â... adding â... sources and methods, lives and operationsâ... could be put at risk. According to Fox, some of those email exchanges were considered Special Access Privelage (SAP), or â... above top secret.â...

Whatâ... s interesting about that, is an anonymous 4chan poster known as â... FBI Anonâ... â... whose breadcrumbs of information have been largely correct, posted on July 2, 2016 that Clinton had â... SAP level programs on her server, which if made public, would literally cause an uprising and possibly foreign declarations of war.â...

Then, on October 16, 2016 â... three weeks before former FBI Director Comey cleared Clinton, â... FBI Anonâ... elaborated on SAP programs and made an unverified claim about Clinton:

A Special Access Program is an intelligence program classified above top-secret. They are held on closed servers at secret locations. The only way to get one is if you are specifically read on to a program, have a need to know, then you must physically go to a location and pass through several layers of security to even look at the program. A good example in non-classified terms would be the locations and operations of our intelligence operatives around the globe, or our missile silo locations. SAP is granted on a need to know basis, and Hillary did not have any need to know any of the programs on her server. All I can tell you about the SAPs is that Hillary had them, and she did not have proper authority to have any of them. They were leaked to her by someone, and she did sell them to overseas donors. Possessing them alone makes her guilty of treason.â... â... FBI Anon

TURNCOAT?

In response to McCulloughâ... s findings, Democrats turned their backs on the Obama-appointed Inspector General for doing his job.

â... All of a sudden I became a shill of the right,â... McCullough said, adding â... And I was told by members of Congress, â... Be careful. Youâ... re losing your credibility. You need to be careful. There are people out to get you.â... â...

McCullough told Fox of â... an effortâ...! certainly on the part of the campaign to mislead people into thinking that there was nothing to see here.â...

DAMAGE CONTROL

As the Clinton campaign geared up for the 2016 election, WikiLeaks documents reveal that Hillaryâ... s inner circle was already starting to spin the investigation â... writing in an August 2015 email that â... Clinton only used her account for unclassified email. When information is reviewed for public release, it is common for information previously unclassified to be upgraded to classified.â...

McCullough was critical of this response, telling Fox â... There was an effort â...! certainly on the part of the campaign to mislead people into thinking that there was nothing to see here.â...

In response to the Inspector Generalâ... s pushback, seven senior Democrats sent a letter to McCullough and his counterpart at the State Department, raising concerns over the impartiality of the Clinton email investigation. McCullough, however, was not arriving at any conclusions himself â... he was simply passing along the findings of individual government agencies on appropriate classifications assigned to the emails.

Fox News reports:

McCullough described one confrontation with Democratic Sen. Dianne Feinsteinâ... s office just six weeks before the election, amid pressure to respond to the letter â... which Feinstein had co-signed.

â... I thought that any response to that letter would just hyper-politicize the situation,â... McCullough said. â... I recall even offering to resign, to the staff director. I said, â... Tell [Feinstein] Iâ... ll resign tonight. Iâ... d be happy to go. Iâ... m not going to respond to that letter. Itâ... s just that simple.â...

As Election Day approached, McCullough said the threats went further, singling out him and another senior government investigator on the email case.

Inquiries sent by Fox to both Feinstein and Clapper were not returned at the time of publication.

FISA Court Cannot Exist If They Have â... Secretâ... Operations â... Against Political Enemies" Who Are U.S. Citizens Who Spoke Up

by Lucian Wintrich 45 Comments

During an appearance on the Fox Business program this morning, Rep. Devin Nunes said that the FISA court cannot continue to exist if it is able to be weaponized by political parties against this opponents. This, of course, comes after the Democratic National Committee was able to plant the phony Steele Dossier with the FBI, and their media contacts, which eventually lead to the infamous Russia Investigation into Trump officials.

Mr. Nunes spoke firmly about the DNC's weaponization of the FBI and FISA Courts: "We can't have a secret court operate like this in America where they're going to take and use it against political enemies. Where one political party can use it against another. It's not going to work if that's going to be the case."

Rep. Devin Nunes authored the memo which went into similar detail about the corruption between the DNC and FBI which led to the #ReleaseTheMemo hashtag on Twitter and leaders across the country demanding its unsealing. Nunes went on to say that during the campaign for his memo's release, Democrats began to leak information regarding approval for release:

"We know for sure there were several leaks. We think there's about 100 leaks from their side that leaked out to the media. That's roughly our count now," Mr. Nunes said.

SECOND LEAK=> FISA Memo Reveals Rod Rosenstein Approved Spy Warrant On Trump Campaign Bit Player AFTER the Election

In what is the second major â... leak,â... to come from the FISA abuse memo, a new report reveals Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein signed off on an application to extend surveillance of Trump campaign official Carter Page.

Rosenstein assumed office on April 26th, 2017, approving the spy warrant merely three months after Trump was inaugurated on January 20th, 2017.

Reuters reports:

U.S. Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein approved to extend surveillance of former Trump campaign adviser Carter Page shortly after assuming office last spring, the New York Times reported, citing people familiar with a secret Republican memo.

The extension shows the Department of Justice, under President Donald Trump, saw reason to believe that Page was acting as a Russian agent, the paper reported on Sunday.

The memo paints the investigation into Russiaâ... s alleged meddling in the U.S. presidential election as tainted from the start, the paper said.

In June, The Gateway Pundit reported, Page sent a request to Rosenstein seeking the release of information used to allegedly obtain a FISA warrant to monitor his communications.

Page, a former investment banker, was a foreign policy advisor to the Trump campaign.

Last week, the Daily Beast reported former FBI Director James Comey, bureau Deputy Director Andrew McCabe and Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein are officially named in the â... shockingâ... FISA abuse memo.

*The Daily Beast*â... s report comes amid the Sessions Justice Department calling on House Intelligence Chairman Devin Nunes (R-CA) to allow the FBI to review the memo to ensure its release will not harm national security.

The second leak is confirmation of what Republican lawmakers have been hinting to the press for weeks; Justice Department officials were instrumental in approving the surveillance of Trump campaign officials.

During a recent appearance on CNN's morning show New Day Friday, Rep. Chris Stewart (R-UT) told host Chris Cuomo that the essence of the shocking FISA abuse memo centers around whether or not the FBI and Justice Department provided false information to the FISA court for the purpose of obtaining spy warrants.

Rep. Matt Gaetz (R-FL) hinted this month that Rosenstein and demoted Justice Department official Bruce Ohr are both implicated in the memo, having asserted to Fox Business News that the two officials will be immediately fired after the shocking four-page document is made public.

FLIPPING THE NARRATIVE: OBAMA AND DNC USED 100 TIMES MORE HOOKERS, SPIES AND CHARACTER ASSASSINS

BY BEN SHAPIRO, OPINION CONTRIBUTOR â€¦

Autoplay: On | Off

On Sunday, The Guardian reported on the supposedly nefarious workings of President Trumpâ€™s data-gathering team at Cambridge Analytica. The report suggested that Cambridge Analytica had essentially issued questionnaires through a third party; those questionnaires, which were personality quizzes, requested that you use your Facebook login. Cambridge Analytica then compiled data regarding those who completed the quiz and cross-referenced that data with political preferences in order to target potential voters.

This isnâ€™t particularly shocking. In 2012, The Guardian reported that President Obamaâ€™s reelection team was â€¦ building a vast digital data operation that for the first time combines a unified database on millions of Americans with the power of Facebook to target individual voters to a degree never achieved before.â€¦

What, exactly, would Obama be doing? According to The Guardian, Obamaâ€™s new database would be gathered by asking individual volunteers to log into Obamaâ€™s reelection site using their Facebook credentials. â€¦ Consciously or otherwise,â€¦ The Guardian states, â€¦ the individual volunteer will be injecting all the information they store publicly on their Facebook page â€¦ home location, date of birth, interests and, crucially, network of friends â€¦ directly into the central Obama database.â€¦

Facebook had no problem with such activity then. They do now. Thereâ€™s a reason for that. The former Obama director of integration and media analytics stated that, during the 2012 campaign, Facebook allowed the Obama team to â€¦ suck out the whole social graphâ€¦ ; Facebook â€¦ was surprised we were able to suck out the whole social graph, but they didnâ€™t stop us once they realized that was what we were doing.â€¦ She added, â€¦ They came to [the] office in the days following election recruiting & were very candid that they allowed us to do things they wouldnâ€™t have allowed someone else to do because they were on our side.â€¦

Not so with Trump. As soon as Facebook realized that Cambridge Analytica had pursued a similar strategy, they suspended the firm.

Again, this isn't surprising. Since Trump's election, Democrats in search of a rationale for their favored candidate's defeat have blamed a bevy of social media outlets. Senate Democrats trotted out pathetic Russian-created memes on Facebook, viewed by a handful of human beings, as an excuse for Hillary's loss; Democrats claimed without evidence that fake news had swamped Facebook and thus led to Trump's victory. Democrats have also insisted that Facebook be regulated. Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.) raged, "You've created these platforms, and now they're being misused, and you have to be the ones to do something about it. Or we will." Facebook's former privacy manager called for the government to step into an oversight role regarding Facebook.

In February, Wired magazine ran a cover story specifically dealing with Facebook's role in the election of 2016, and their subsequent attempts to fix the problem. After the election, Mark Zuckerberg even met with Barack Obama, apparently in an attempt to convince Obama that he was serious about stopping the misuse of the platform. And in February, Zuckerberg said he wanted to re-jigger the algorithms on his platform to benefit content that Facebook deems trustworthy, informative, and local. Wired celebrated: "You can't make the world more open and connected if you're breaking it apart."

The result of Facebook's algorithmic changes: conservatives have been slammed. And that's the point. A study from The Western Journal found that conservative sites have lost an average of 14 percent of their Facebook traffic; leftist sites saw a minor increase. Even major publications saw that effect: The New York Daily News saw a bump of 24.18 percent, while the New York Post dropped 11.44 percent.

And that's the goal in covering Cambridge Analytica, and Russian interference on Twitter, and all the rest even without any serious information suggesting that such interference shifted votes, the left can rest assured that its Silicon Valley allies will act to de-platform Republicans and conservatives. There's a reason Twitter has suspended alt-right racists but continued to recommend that others follow Louis Farrakhan; there's a reason YouTube is being sued by Prager University; there's a reason Google used automatic fact-checking on right-wing sites but did no such thing for left-wing sites.

We're in the midst of a radical reshifting in social media. Ironically, the people who have stumped against regulation are conservatives are those being targeted by social media companies. If companies like Facebook, YouTube, Google and Twitter don't start acting like platforms again rather than like motivated left-wing outlets, Republicans likely won't let principle outweigh practicality for long.

The three primary investors in Moscowâ... s Alfa Bank â... Mikhail Fridman, Petr Aven and German Khan â... filed a libel lawsuit against Fusion in October. Fusionâ... s dossier, written by former British spy Christopher Steele, says two of them engineered cash bribes to Mr. Putin. The dossier also implies that the bank colluded with Mr. Putin to interfere in the 2016 U.S. presidential election by hacking Democratic Party computers.

The lawsuit describes the three billionaires as international businessmen who became â... collateral damageâ... in Fusionâ... s war to destroy the Donald Trump campaign.

â... This is a defamation case brought by three international businessmen who were defamed in widely disseminated political research reports commissioned by political opponents of candidate Donald Trump in the 2016 presidential election cycle,â... says a Dec. 12 filing in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

â... The reports are gravely damaging in that, directly or by implication, they falsely accuse the plaintiffs â... and Alfa, a consortium in which the plaintiffs are investors â... of criminal conduct and alleged cooperation with â... Fusion responded in court by relying on Wikipedia and its press citations to paint a dark picture of three oligarchs who, the media say, capitalized on Russiaâ... s freewheeling post-communism era to engage in financial scandals.

Fusion depicted the three as publicity-seeking financial titans who are public figures under U.S. law.

Unlike private citizens, public figures face a high bar in libel lawsuits. In a piece entitled, “What DACA Recipients Really Need Is for Their Bosses to Break the Law,” published on Univision’s pet project Splinter, Jorge Rivas called for companies to engage in a massive civil disobedience against enforcing America’s borders.

Rivas wrote that “if young, undocumented immigrants can put their livelihoods on the line and practice civil disobedience, then corporations who have reaped the benefits of their bravery—and who have far more power, money and legal resources than DACA recipients—can do it, too.”

“If many corporations big and small stand up and do this, that’s how social change is created,” Bill Ong Hing, an immigration law professor at the University of San Francisco, was quoted as saying.

Even companies that have issued statements in support of DACA were not spared from being called out by the outlet.

“These statements are nice things to say, and that’s about it. They’re nothing more than symbolic declarations. Virtually none of these companies are promising to stick their necks out in a meaningful way for their undocumented workers,” Rivas wrote.

The author noted that AirBnb, who has been barring people from using their service for holding right wing political beliefs, was the first to vow to break the law concerning illegal immigrants.

Federal Employees Last Year Broke Record for Proving Retaliation By Government Officials

By Eric Katz

The agency tasked with protecting federal employees from whistleblower retaliation and other actions prohibited by civil service laws issued a record number of decisions favorable to workers last year, sending what it called a "warning" to federal supervisors not to engage in improper conduct.

Of the complaints the Office of Special Counsel processed and closed in fiscal 2017, 9 percent received a favorable outcome for the employees, the agency said in its recently released annual report. The 323 favorable results stemming from prohibited personnel practices cases marked the highest total in OSC's nearly 40-year history, the agency said, and a 16 percent increase from the previous year. About three-quarters of those cases were from whistleblower retaliation complaints.

While the favorable decisions increased, the total matters received and the complaints processed and closed actually decreased compared to the previous year. The higher rate of positive outcomes for employees raising complaints marked the continuation of what has been a total reversal from OSC's earlier days, according to longtime observers.

Tom Devine, legal director at the Government Accountability Project, a whistleblower advocacy group, said Carolyn Lerner, whose tenure as head of OSC came to an end late last year, inherited an agency that was "completely dysfunctional." GAP used to warn whistleblowers not to bring their cases before OSC because it was a virtual guarantee that it would be the "final nail in the coffin" of their careers, Devine said.

"It's not surprising that OSC's track record kept improving," Devine said. "Under [Lerner's] leadership, corrective action went from akin to winning the lottery to something that's happening regularly, if still rarely."

OSC negotiated 44 stays with agencies to prevent what the agency found to be "premature or improper" personnel actions against employees. The agency took an additional 16 disciplinary actions against managers who violated civil rights laws, which OSC said was key to "upholding accountability and sending a warning to supervisors about the serious repercussions for unacceptable conduct."

"The more the federal community learns about and gains confidence in OSC, the more it turns to OSC for assistance," said Special Counsel Henry Kerner, who succeeded Lerner. "OSC protects the public, stands up for taxpayers, and increases public confidence in their government."

In a blip on OSC's fiscal 2017 record, the agency processed just 77 percent of complaints within 240 days. That was down from 85 percent the previous year and lowest rate since at least fiscal 2011. The agency received the most cases, including prohibited personnel complaints and other issues, from the Veterans Affairs Department.

When employees brought issues of waste, fraud or abuse to OSC and the agency decided to pursue the cases, the employees' concerns were typically validated. Agencies substantiated wrongdoing in more than 75 percent of whistleblower disclosures that came into OSC that the agency then reported to the president and Congress.

OSC said while it received just a â... modestâ... budget increase in fiscal 2017, it â... skillfully enhanced accountability, integrity, and fairness in the federal workplace.â... The Trump administration has faced several high-profile accusations of taking political reprisal actions against employees.

Under Kernerâ... s leadership, Devine said, things are improving at an even faster rate and OSC has been more responsive to whistleblowers than at any time in its history. And on top of OSCâ... s more employee-friendly findings, Congress last year approved the Chris Kirkpatrick Whistleblower Protection Act, which, among other things, eases the process for disciplining supervisors found to have engaged in whistleblower retaliation. That combination, Devine said, should make federal managers think twice before punishing those speaking out against impropriety at their agencies.

â... Supervisors have more to fear in terms of their own actions than ever before in the history of the civil service system,â... he said.

National News Coverage Exposes Political Reprisals Against Applicants Who Are Whistleblowers by SSA and HUD staff

By Conner Lee

The "SpyGate" or "FISA Abuse" case in the current White House involves the abuse of public agencies to attack those they are politically opposed to. Average citizen SSA, IRS, HUD and other applicants suffer the same fate.

The San Mateo, California Social Security Administration offices are under investigation because one, or more, of their staff used SSA resources to attack an Applicant because a staff member (erroneously) thought that an Applicant was opposed to that SSA staffer's beliefs on "open-borders". The SSA official ordered up reprisal operations, against the Applicant, simply to vent that SSA officials political angers. That is illegal.

A vast number of agency abuse cases and lawsuits are now on public record in the Inspector General's offices and federal courts.

It is an indisputable fact that some government agencies run "hit-jobs" on citizens on orders from certain corrupt politicians. These actions are felony violations of the law.

Federal and State Agencies including SSA, FEC, DOE, HHS, VA, CIA, HUD, SA, SEC, FBI, DOJ and many others, have been charged, and found guilty, in these crimes against citizens.

In the Congressional investigation published by the United States Congress in review of the U.S. Department of Energy LGP/ATVM programs, it is clearly proven that the U.S. Department of Energy was used as a slush-fund by some DOE executives in order to pay off campaign financiers by attacking and sabotaging their competitors.

The DOE Paducah Gaseous Diffusion Plant under contracts with the Department of Energy and the government-owned U.S. Enrichment Corp paid $5M whistle-blower awards to those whistle-blowers who were attacked, using government agency resources, for reporting a crime.

Dept. of Energy Hanford URS has agreed to settle a lawsuit brought by former employee Walter Tamosaitis for $4.1 million. The settlement in the whistle-blower case comes almost one year before the case was set for a jury trial in federal court in Richland and compensates Tamosaitis for attacks against him, by DOE officials, in retribution for reporting a crime.

VA officials attacked hundreds of citizens who reported corruption, ie:

<https://www.thenewamerican.com/usnews/health-care/item/18610-va-whistleblowers-facing-retribution>.

As shown in this report:

<https://www.pogo.org/analysis/2018/08/new-report-confirms-whistleblower-retaliation-is-alive-and-well-at-department>, Agencies attack often and harshly.

CIA and NSA executives have been widely shown to use spy tools to attack domestic citizens they don't like, ie:

<https://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-2435011/NSA-employees-used-phone-tapping-tools-spy-girlfriends-cheating>, and hundreds of other news links that can be provided.

Elon Musk and Tesla, as well as Eric Schmidt and Larry Page at Google, have been proven to use the CIA group: IN-Q-TEL, to run government sponsored/financed attacks on business competitors.

In Civil Action No. 1:13-cv-00777-RBW GOVERNMENT AGENCIES WERE CAUGHT BEING USED FOR ATTACKS AGAINST CITIZENS AND PUNISHED IN THE COURT AND THE MEDIA!

The IRS, and hordes of other government agencies have been caught and proven, IN COURT, to target and attack people for presumed political differences.

Why should we assume that the Social Security Administration is not ALSO doing this too to harm citizens who speak out?

The Lois Lerner IRS attacks took many years to resolve. In an unprecedented victorious conclusion to a four year-long legal battle against the IRS, the bureaucratic agency admitted in federal court that it wrongfully targeted citizens, during the Obama Administration, because of their political viewpoints and issued an apology to those people for doing so.

In addition, the IRS is consenting to a court order that would prohibit it from ever engaging in this form of unconstitutional discrimination in the future.

In a proposed Consent Order filed with the Court, the IRS has apologized for its treatment of U.S. citizens including organizations from 20 states that applied for 501(c)(3) and (c)(4) tax-exempt status with the IRS between 2009 and 2012 -- during the tax-exempt determinations process. Crucially, following years of denial by the IRS and blame-shifting by IRS officials, the agency now expressly admits that its treatment of our clients was wrong and a total violation of our Democracy..

As set forth in the proposed Order:

â... The IRS admits that its treatment of Plaintiffs during the tax-exempt determinations process, including screening their applications based on their names or policy positions, subjecting those applications to heightened scrutiny and inordinate delays, and demanding of some Plaintiffsâ... information that TIGTA determined was unnecessary to the agencyâ... s determination of their tax-exempt status, was wrong. For such treatment, the IRS expresses its sincere apology.â...

Throughout litigation of this case, activists have remained committed to protecting the rights of the public who faced unlawful and discriminatory action by the IRS and other agencies. The objective from the very beginning has been to hold agencies accountable for corrupt practices.

This Consent Order represents a historic victory for the public and sends the unequivocal message that a government agency's targeting of citizens organizations, or any organization, on the basis of political viewpoints, will never be tolerated and that revenge will be swift and vast.

The Order will put an end, once and for all, to the abhorrent practices utilized against citizens, as the agreement includes the IRS's express acknowledgment of and apology for its wrongful treatment of the public. While this agreement is designed to prevent any such practices from occurring again, rest assured that all public interest lawyers will remain vigilant to ensure that the IRS, SSA, DOJ or SEC does not resort to such tactics in the future.

Per detailed reports, in March of 2012 lawyers began being contacted by literally dozens of citizens and groups who were being harassed by the Obama IRS after submitting applications for tax-exempt status. Their tax-exempt applications were held up for years (over seven years in some cases), and they began receiving obtrusive and unconstitutional requests for donor and member information. That began a now more than five and a half year fight with the burgeoning bureaucracy at the IRS. Then on May 10, 2013, Lois Lerner, the then head of the IRS Tax Exempt Organizations Division, publicly implicated the IRS in one of the worst political targeting scandals of the century.

This is an extraordinary victory against government agency abuse. It sends a powerful warning to the deep state bureaucracy that it will not be allowed to violate the Constitution in order to silence and shut down the whistle-blowers.

In addition to the IRS's admissions of and apology for its wrongful conduct, the Consent Order would specifically award Plaintiffs the following:

- A declaration by the Court that it is wrong to apply the United States tax code to any tax-exempt applicant or entity based solely on such entity's name, any lawful positions it espouses on any issues, or its associations or perceived associations with a particular political movement, position or viewpoint;
- A declaration by the Court that any action or inaction taken by the IRS must be applied evenhandedly and not based solely on a tax-exempt applicant or entity's name, political viewpoint, or associations or perceived associations with a particular political movement, position or viewpoint; and
- A declaration by the Court that discrimination on the basis of political viewpoint in administering the United States tax code violates fundamental First Amendment rights. Disparate treatment of taxpayers based solely on the taxpayers' names, any lawful positions the taxpayers espouse on any issues, or the taxpayers' associations or perceived associations with a particular political movement, position or viewpoint is unlawful.

In the Order, the IRS has also agreed that (unless expressly required by law) certain actions against the Plaintiffs—i.e. the sharing, dissemination, or other use of information unnecessarily obtained by the IRS during the determinations process (such as donor names, the names of volunteers, political affiliations of an organization's officers, etc.)—would be unlawful. In addition, the IRS promises not to take any retaliatory action against our clients for exposing the targeting scheme.

Finally, and of crucial significance, the IRS admits it targeted persons and groups based on their viewpoints (i.e., its policy positions) and that such viewpoint discrimination violates fundamental First Amendment rights. This is the first time the IRS has admitted that its targeting scheme was not just inappropriate...

â... as TIGTA found â... but, as alleged, blatantly unconstitutional.

To ensure consistency and uniformity within the agencyâ... s operations going forward, the IRS is required, pursuant to the Order, to inform all employees within the Exempt Organizations Division, as well as the Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners within other divisions, of the Orderâ... s terms.

This Order not only validates allegations about their treatment at the hands of the corrupt Obama-era IRS but also provides important assurances to the American public that the agency understands its obligation to refrain from further such discriminatory conduct. As Attorney General Sessions acknowledged in this regard, â... [t]here is no excuse for [the IRSâ... s] conduct,â... as it is â... without questionâ... that the First Amendment prohibits the conduct that occurred here, i.e., subjecting American citizens to disparate treatment â... based solely on their viewpoint or ideology.â... Sessions further confirmed his Departmentâ... s commitment to ensuring that the â... abuse of powerâ... in which the IRS engaged here â... will not be tolerated.â...

It is impossible to overstate the importance of this victory. This marks a years-long fight for justice in defense of the constitutional rights of the public.

This is an extraordinary victory against abuse of power and corruption.

It sends a powerful warning to the deep state bureaucracy that it will not be allowed to violate the Constitution and manipulate the IRS, SSA and other agencies in order to silence and shut down those who speak out about political corruption crimes.

In the wake of Wisconsin Watchdogâ... s investigation into SSA staff allegations of incompetence, misconduct, and retaliation in Social Security disability appeals offices, several employees have taken their complaints to a Senate committee led by Wisconsin Sen. Ron Johnson.

An official with knowledge of the complaints said the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee, chaired by the Oshkosh Republican, has received emails and other contacts from â... certain peopleâ... inside the Social Security Administrationâ... s Office of Disability Adjudication and Review.

The initial complaints came from an employee inside the Milwaukee office following Wisconsin Watchdogâ... s opening investigative report that found some claimants waiting more than 1,000 days for an appeals decision on their disability benefits claim.

Following Wednesdayâ... s story of a whistleblower in the Madison ODAR office, the committee has received more specific complaints about retaliation against employees, the source said.

Committee staff members sent the latest Watchdog piece to SSA administrators hoping they will â... cooperate,â... the source said. To date, the agency has been less than cooperative.

â... This is an ongoing process, and they are not always as forthcoming as weâ... d like them to be,â... the source said. â... Hopefully with your continued reporting, this is an issue they canâ... t duck.â...

A Senate committee member said officials there are working with the Office of Special Counsel on â... multiple whistleblower retaliation claims.â... The committee continues to request information from the SSA.

The whistleblower in the Madison office claims management retaliated against her after she was called to testify in a misconduct case. The incident involved â... inappropriate behaviorâ... by an administrative law judge, she said.

“... They are so corrupt. It’s absolutely horrible,” said the woman, a lead case technician in the Madison Office of Disability Adjudication and Review.

She spoke on condition of anonymity, fearing more retribution from her supervisors. While she said recounting her particular experiences will more than likely betray her identity anyway, the ODAR case worker insisted she has had enough.

“... I’m at point where they don’t care about me, I don’t see why I’m protecting them. This is my last resort,” she said. “... I want to do my work without fear of retaliation.”

She said she has contacted the Senate committee.

“... I forwarded my information to them and I got an email back from them. They said people are coming out of the woodwork with their complaints (about ODAR) following your story,” the whistle-blower said.

Ronald Klym, a long-time senior legal assistant in the Milwaukee ODAR office, alleges he has been retaliated against by supervisors for going public with his charges of incompetence and misconduct in the agency.

The federal employee, who has worked for SSA for 16 years, provided Wisconsin Watchdog with documents showing extremely long wait times for claimants appealing their denied applications for benefits.

Doug Nguyen, SSA regional spokesman, in a previous story said the agency acknowledges that Milwaukee ODAR has a “... high average processing time for disability appeal hearings, and we are working to address the issue.”

Beyond the delays is what Klym calls the “... shell game,” the wholesale transferring of cases to other parts of the country by administrators to make the Milwaukee office’s numbers look better than they are.

The Madison office whistle-blower confirmed Klym’s allegations, saying at one point she saw 2,000 cases from the Milwaukee office handed off to the Oak Brook operation.

There are over 10,000 SSA disability manipulation charges against SSA executives and staff.

Fitton: The Deep State Is in Deep Cover-up Mode

Cheriss May/NurPhoto via Getty Images

The coup attempt against President Trump is rapidly collapsing, but the deep state is still in cover-up mode. In this article for The Hill, Judicial Watch President Tom Fitton discussed the FBI's continuing protection of former Director James Comey and Judicial Watch's efforts to penetrate the truth.

As the James Comey saga continues to unfold, the James Comey legend continues to unravel.

The more that is learned about Comey's involvement in the deep state's illicit targeting of President Trump, the more reason the American people must question both Comey's motives and his management as director of the FBI, the now-disgraced agency he headed before Trump fired him. Comey left a trail of suspicious activities in his wake.

advertisement

Comey now looms large over a burgeoning constitutional crisis that could soon overshadow Watergate at its worst. To deepen the crisis even further, it now appears some of Comey's former FBI and Justice Department colleagues continue to protect him from accountability.

Three suspicious activities stand out, all intertwined: the so-called Comey Memos, Comey's controversial testimony before the Senate Intelligence Committee, and Comey's book deal.

After Comey was fired by President Trump on May 9, 2017, he arranged to give The New York Times a February 14, 2017, memorandum he wrote about a one-on-one conversation with Trump regarding former national security adviser Michael Flynn. The New York Times published a report about the memo on May 16, 2017. Special counsel Robert Mueller was appointed the following day.

On June 8, 2017, Comey testified under oath before the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence. He stated he authored as many as nine such memos. Regarding the Flynn memo, Comey admitted: "I asked a friend of mine to share the content of the memo with a reporter [for The New York Times]. I didn't do it myself for a variety of reasons, but I asked him to because I thought that might prompt the appointment of a special counsel."

Comey also testified about being dismissed by Trump. Comey detailed multiple conversations with Trump, during which Comey confirmed he told Trump three times that he was not a target of investigation. Judicial Watch is pursuing numerous Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) lawsuits relating to Comey's memoranda and FBI exit records, as well as a lawsuit for Justice Department communications about Comey's Senate testimony. The American people deserve to know what, if any, complicity his former colleagues had in drafting that testimony and/or in engineering the appointment of Mueller.

The day before Comey's testimony, Fox News reported: "A source close to James Comey tells Fox News the former FBI director's Senate testimony has been closely coordinated with Robert Mueller. Comey may have violated the law in leaking his official FBI memos to the media, and it would be a scandal if Comey coordinated his Senate testimony with Mueller's special counsel office."

Judicial had to sue in federal court to uncover the truth. That speaks volumes. The FBI has a protective stone wall built around Comey. It refuses to release the Comey memos and refuses to disclose records of communications between the FBI and Comey prior to and regarding Comey's testimony before the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Since his forced departure from the FBI, Comey signed a book deal in August, set for publication in April, for which he reportedly received an advance of more than $2 million. Given the fact that the FBI appears to be letting Comey get away with stealing and leaking official government documents and colluding with the special counsel to get Trump, even a trusting person must be suspicious about his book deal.

The FBI fanned those suspicions by adding a new layer to the protections around Comey. Again, Judicial Watch was forced to sue a recalcitrant FBI for records, including but not limited to forms Comey was required to complete relating to prepublication review of the book by the FBI. Did Comey's cronies give the fired FBI director a pass on this long-standing requirement? Is that why they are stonewalling the Judicial Watch FOIA request?

Based upon Comey's performance to date, this book likely will be an elaborate exercise in self-apotheosis. That's why the American public deserves to know if Comey's former colleagues—many of whom we now know aided in his exoneration of Hillary Clinton in the email scandal and are participants in the contrived investigation of Donald Trump—scrutinized his literary claims or simply green-lighted his every word.

There is no doubt that the deep state is in deep cover-up mode. The FBI, Justice Department and the special counsel all are stonewalling our requests for Comey documents. The more they stonewall, the deeper the suspicions grow about Comey's complicity in the attempt to use the bogus Trump dossier to prevent the election of Donald Trump, and then use it to undermine his presidency once he was elected to office.

In my experience in Washington, when people refuse to come clean, it is usually because they are hiding dirty laundry.

Fusion GPS Character Assassination Group Worked With Tech Company Tied To Russian False Flag Operation

Chuck Ross | Reporter

- A non-profit group linked to Fusion GPS has ties to a cybersecurity firm recently implicated in a self-described “false flag” operation in the Alabama Senate race.
- The Democracy Integrity Project, which works with Fusion GPS and dossier author Christopher Steele, partnered before the 2018 midterms with New Knowledge, an Austin-based firm that has been tied to an operation that created fake Russian bots in Alabama’s December 2017 special election.
- New Knowledge recently produced a report for the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, and TDIP’s founder was in contact with two Democrats from the committee.

A nonprofit group linked to Fusion GPS and partially funded by George Soros worked in recent months with a technology company implicated in a scheme to use fake Russian bots during Alabama’s special Senate election.

The groups, the Democracy Integrity Project (TDIP) and New Knowledge, partnered before the 2018 midterms to track alleged Russian disinformation networks, a website the organizations collaboratively run shows.

Both organizations have links to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence (SSCI), which is investigating Russian meddling in the 2016 election, as well as possible Trump campaign collusion.

SSCI provided New Knowledge with data from various social media companies as part of an investigation into Russian disinformation networks, according to a report New Knowledge released Dec. 17. Two days later, news broke that New Knowledge’s chief executive was involved in a self-described “false flag” operation in the special election for a Senate seat in Alabama, as was another staffer who was the lead author on the Senate report. \(RELATED: Senate’s Outside Russia Investigators Tied To Russia’s False Flag Operation\)

TDIP is also linked to the Senate Intelligence panel. Its founder, Daniel J. Jones, was previously a staffer for Democrats on SSCI. He was also in contact in early 2017 with Virginia Sen. Mark Warner, the Democratic vice chairman of SSCI. As part of TDIP’s own Trump-Russia investigation, the group hired Fusion GPS and Christopher Steele, the author of the anti-Trump dossier.

The extent of Warner’s contacts with Jones remain unclear.

The collaboration between TDIP and New Knowledge, which has not been previously reported, involved a dashboard set up at the site, Disinfo2018.com, which tracked “social media disinformation networks” to include suspected foreign state-actors “conducting information warfare against the American public

prior to the 2018 U.S. midterm elections.â€¦

The project appears similar to Hamilton 68, a dashboard operated by the Alliance for Security Democracy. Jonathon Morgan, the founder of New Knowledge, helped create Hamilton 68 and has appeared frequently in the media to discuss Russiaâ€¦ s disinformation efforts.

In an interview with BBC, Morgan claimed Russians were behind #ReleaseTheMemo, the hashtag used to call for the release of a memo from House Intel Republicans that questioned the FBIâ€¦ s reliance on the unverified Steele dossier to obtain surveillance warrants against former Trump campaign adviser Carter Page.

But New Knowledge and Morgan are now known for their tactics during the December 2017 Alabama special election.

The New York Times published a damning exposÃ© Dec. 19, 2018, showing New Knowledge operatives targeted conservative Alabamans with fake Facebook pages intended to sow doubt about Roy Moore, the controversial Republican candidate.

The operatives also created thousands of fake Russian Twitter accounts set to follow Moore. The effect was that numerous news outlets reported Moore was being supported by a Russian disinformation network.

New Knowledge has come under heavy criticism following the report, largely because the firmâ€¦ s tactics in Alabama so closely mirrored the Russian efforts they say they oppose. Morgan, a former State Department adviser, said the Alabama project was merely an experiment that had no impact on the special election, which was won by Democrat Doug Jones.

The Washington Post reported New Knowledge authored a document describing the Alabama false flag operation, but Morgan has denied that claim and said he was unaware of most of the activities detailed in it.

For the past six months @NewKnowledgeAI led an investigation into Russian interference on behalf of the Senate Intelligence Committee (SSCI). This was the first comprehensive look into data provided to the Senate by Facebook, Twitter, and Google. Here are the highlights:

â€¦ Jonathon Morgan (@jonathonmorgan) December 17, 2018

New Knowledgeâ€¦ s Senate report on Russian disinformation networks makes clear its investigation was undertaken at the request of SSCI. But an SSCI official told TheDCNF the committee did not pay New Knowledge and TDIP has never been hired for any work. The official also noted SSCI does not necessarily endorse New Knowledgeâ€¦ s findings.

TDIP has maintained a lower profile than New Knowledge. Most of whatâ€¦ s known about the group has been revealed only through Adam Waldman, an attorney who had contact with the organization in 2017. Information that Jones, the TDIP founder, provided to the FBI was also released in an April 27, 2018, House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence report.

Jones, who registered TDIP on Jan. 31, 2017, told the FBI in late March 2017 his organization had hired Fusion GPS and Steele, a former MI6 officer, to continue investigations into Russian meddling in the U.S. elections that began with funding from the DNC and Clinton campaign. Jones also told the FBI the project had received \$50 million in funding from between seven and 10 wealthy liberal donors.

IRS records suggest TDIP did not receive all of that funding at once. Information from the nonprofit's tax filings show the group received $9 million in 2017.

Around the same time as his meeting with the FBI, Jones reached out to Waldman, an attorney with a myriad of links to players in the Russia saga. Waldman represented Russian oligarch Oleg Deripaska and has apparent links to Steele.

Waldman told TheDCNF Jones told him that Fusion GPS was involved with TDIP. He also said Jones claimed Soros had provided funding for TDIP's anti-Trump operation. \(RELATED: Soros Has Given \$1 Million To Group Linked To Fusion GPS For Trump-Russia Investigation\)

Waldman also provided text messages from March 17, 2017, in which Jones said TDIP helped plant anti-Trump news stories.

"Our team helped with this," Jones wrote to Waldman, linking to a Reuters article about Russian investment in Florida properties owned by President Donald Trump.

Waldman also exchanged text messages with Warner that suggested the Virginia Democrat was in close contact with Jones.

In an April 25, 2017, text message to Warner, Waldman said Steele had told him "Dan Jones is coming to see you."

The interactions between Warner, Waldman, Steele and Jones remain one of the enduring puzzles of SSCI's Russia probe. The committee has refused to discuss the matter.

But Warner was not Jones's only Democratic contact on SSCI.

According to a New Yorker article published Oct. 15, 2018, an unidentified Democratic senator other than Warner contacted Jones in early 2017 to review data related to Alfa Bank, a Russian bank whose computer servers allegedly had back-channel contacts with Trump Organization computers.

The Alfa Bank connection to Trump was first reported by Slate on Oct. 31, 2016. Alfa Bank's founders are also accused of having cozy relations with the Kremlin in Steele's dossier. The claims of illicit contact between Alfa Bank and the Trump Organization have remained unverified, with some computer experts doubting the theory.

Neither TDIP nor New Knowledge responded to multiple requests for comment.

Details about the infamous Russian dossier, written by Fusion GPS and paid for by the Hillary Clinton campaign and the Democratic National Committee (DNC) â€¦ and ultimately used to obtain a FISA court warrant to spy on Trump associate Carter Page â€¦ may finally come to light thanks to a defamation lawsuit filed by a Russian tech executive against BuzzFeed, who originally published the document.

U.S. District Court Judge Ursula Ungaro issued a decision Tuesday that said Fusion GPS â€¦ must answer a broad array of questions about the opposition research firmâ€™s role in creating, investigating and disseminating the infamous Steele dossier,â€¦ according to a report from The Daily Caller.

Ungaro ruled that attorneys for the executive, Aleksey Gubarev, can ask Fusion GPS representatives in a deposition about the firmâ€™s dossier clients, its efforts to verify the dossier, its decision to hire dossier author Christopher Steele and its interactions with government officials and media outlets, including BuzzFeed.

Fusion GPS, which was founded by three former Wall Street Journal reporters, has resisted efforts to provide information about its work on the dossier. The firm has claimed that revealing details about its dossier work would violate its confidentiality clauses with its clients as well as its First Amendment rights to political free speech.

Ungaro rejected Fusionâ€™s argument by saying its client relationships â€¦ are not protected from disclosure by the First Amendment even though the opposition research it conducts on behalf of clients may be political in nature.â€¦

WASHINGTON â... The Russian lawyer Natalia Veselnitskaya who set up Don Trump Jr. for a meeting in Trump Tower as part of a Fusion GPS plot was operating out of the Washington offices of Cozen Oâ... Connor, a law firm run by an anti-Trump former Obama administration official whose super PAC donated to Hillary Clinton and Jeb Bush in the 2016 presidential election.

Veselnitskayaâ... s work from the Cozen Oâ... Connor office provides more evidence of a Democrat and establishment Republican effort to set up the Trump campaign for a future Russian collusion case. Veselnitskaya was allowed into the United States by the Obama Department of Justice while the former Obama official who runs Cozen Oâ... Russian and U.S. citizen Rinat Akhmetshin, a Soviet military veteran, was present at Veselnitskayaâ... s meeting with Don Jr. in Trump Tower after leading a lobbying push supposedly to repeal the Magnitsky Act. Akhmetshin is believed by insiders to be linked to Russian government intelligence, a fact that the Washington Post seized on when reporting that he met with Don Jr. and Jared Kushner in Trump Tower. A nonprofit group focused on promoting Akhmetshin and Veselnitskayaâ... s cause to lawmakers actually hired Cozen Oâ... Connor, which the law firm confirms.

The Washington Post reported (emphasis added):

â... In the spring of 2016, as the presidential race was heating up, Akhmetshin and lobbyists he hired sought meetings on Capitol Hill to make their case against the sanctions law. Steve Pruitt, a business colleague speaking on Dellumsâ... s behalf, said his involvement was brief and ended when he determined that Congress was unlikely to change the law.

In June, after visiting Trump Tower in New York, Veselnitskaya came to Washington to lend a hand in the lobbying effort.

Cozen Oâ... Connorâ... s connections to the anti-Trump â... Operation Crossfire Hurricaneâ... plot are wide-ranging, and show up in unexpected places.

James Comeyâ... s friend, Columbia University professor Daniel Richman, leaked classified information that Comey gave him. During this leaking period, Richman was apartment-building neighbors with a partner at the Cozen Oâ... Connor law firm that strategized with Fusion GPS operative Natalia Veselnitskaya, the Russian plant who set up Don Jr. in Trump Tower.

Veselnitskaya and Fusion GPS, led by Glenn Simpson, were part of John Brennan and Peter Strzokâ... s CIA-led â... Operation Crossfire Hurricaneâ... plot aimed at President Donald Trump and the Trump campaign.

â... Yes, he is my neighbor,â... Amy Wenzel, a partner at Cozen Oâ... Connor, confirmed in a phone conversation with Big League Politics, confirming that they spoke. They live near each other in a Brooklyn high-rise.

The Washington Postâ... s release of Trump Tower documents shows the crowd surrounding non-sexual honeypot Natalia Veselnitskaya. The crowd of conspirators knew they were damaging Trump by setting up the meeting.

The Post confirms British-citizen music promoter Rob Goldstoneâ... s testimony to the Senate Judiciary Committee, in which he described the conspiratorsâ... push to get the meeting despite the fact that they knew it would create trouble for the Trump campaign.

The Post reports:

â... Rob Goldstone told the committee that his client, the Russian pop star and developer Emin Agalarov, had insisted he help set up the meeting between President Trump's son and the lawyer during the campaign to pass along material on Clinton, overriding Goldstone's own warnings that the meeting would be a bad idea.

He said, it doesn't matter. You just have to get the meeting, Goldstone, a British citizen, testified.

The intensity with which Agalarov and his father, the billionaire Aras Agalarov, sought the Trump Tower meeting, which has become a key point of scrutiny for congressional inquiries and special counsel Robert S. Mueller III, was revealed in more than 2,500 pages of congressional testimony and exhibits released by the Senate Judiciary Committee on Wednesday morning.

Washington Post passage ends

Natalia Veselnitskaya is also inextricably linked to the case against Paul Manafort.

The Russian attorney partner of Paul Manafort who was named as a defendant in new Robert Mueller charges is also linked to the Russian spy Natalia Veselnitskaya, who attended a meeting with Don Trump Jr. and Jared Kushner in Trump Tower.

According to Mueller's new charges, Manafort's Russian partner Konstantin Kilimnik tried to intimidate or coerce witnesses in Manafort's upcoming money laundering trial. That puts Konstantin Kilimnik at the center of the Mueller effort to find obstruction of justice in Trump-World (Mueller is giving himself until September 1 to try to find obstruction of justice, after finding no Russian collusion involving Trump).

So who is Konstantine Kilimnik? It turns out that Kilimnik is linked to Veselnitskaya, the Fusion GPS agent, according to Senate documents.

Here is how ProPublica described Kilimnik: Konstantin Kilimnik: Manafort, who worked for the pro-Russian party in Ukraine before running Trump's campaign, had an employee in Kiev named Konstantin Kilimnik who U.S. and Ukrainian authorities have suspected of having ties to Russian intelligence, according to Politico. Kilimnik served in the Russian army and learned English at a school that experts say often trains spies. Kilimnik denied being a spy to The Washington Post. Manafort had dinner with Kilimnik last August in New York, just before he was forced out of the Trump campaign amid growing questions about his work in the Ukraine, the Post reported.

Documents reveal Kilimnik's ties to Veselnitskaya. Let's take a look at United States Senate Judiciary Committee documents questioning Veselnitskaya in October. Judiciary Committee chairman Sen. Chuck Grassley and Ranking Member Sen. Dianne Feinstein asked Veselnitskaya if she knew a handful of characters believed to be conspirators in the case.

Grassley and Feinstein specifically asked Veselnitskaya if she knew Konstantin Kilimnik.

Here is page 4 of the documents, naming Kilimnik:

Current Attorney General Jeff Sessions was a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee as senator from Alabama.

Veselnitskaya's meeting with Don Jr. in Trump Tower provided some of the basis for warrants to surveil Trump Tower and for other FBI surveillance measures on the Trump campaign.

The fact that Veselnitskaya, a lawyer herself, was in the meeting with Trump Jr. and Kushner opened the president's son and son-in-law up to being qualified as "target associations" for law enforcement under Section 702 of the FISA Amendments Act of 2008, passed during the Bush administration.

Veselnitskaya's link to suspected conspirator Kilimnik is now coming under scrutiny.

Fusion GPS *Still* Taking Money From Secret Donors For Trump-Russia Witch Hunt

THE CHARACTER ASSASSINATION SERVICE: FUSION GPS, SHOULD BE ILLEGAL TO OPERATE

Fusion GPS, the opposition research firm behind the discredited Steele dossier, is still investigating alleged ties between President Trump and Russia, reports Fox News contributor Sara A. Carter.

Sara Carter reports:

Whatâ... s not known is who is paying for the continuing research? Fusion GPS officials could not be reached immediately for comment. [â...!]

Rep. Ron DeSantis, a Florida Republican and Chairman of the National Security Subcommittee, sent a letter last week to House Speaker Paul Ryan, asking him to direct Chairman of the House Intelligence Committee Devin Nunes , R-CA to declassify documents given to the committee related to the dossier. [â...!]

DeSantis told this reporter that releasing the information on the dossier and the classified FISA applications is the first step in getting the truth to the public.

â... Congress needs to determine the role played by Fusion GPS in the Russia matter and that includes any current Fusion activity,â... said DeSantis.

Congressional investigators probing the origins of the Steele dossier have set their sights on a brand new target â... The Obama State Department.

Were Obama State Department officials responsible for spreading discredited tidbits compiled in the dossier through the media? Intelligence Chairman Devin Nunes may soon find out.

Byron York of the Washington Examiner reports the Obama State Department is now being probed as to whether or not they had a hand in the dossier. York notes Steele was viewed inside the Obama State Department as a valuable source for intelligence on all things Russia. Obama State officials made a habit of disseminating reports the former British spy authored for private clients around the Department.

Last week, Fusion GPS founder Glenn Simpsonâ... s explosive testimony was released by ranking Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA). The lawmaker claimed she was â... pressuredâ... to release the transcript. Feinstein said a â... bad coldâ... led to her decision to unilaterally release the transcript. However, it was Fusion GPS's lawyers that demanded the documents be released, reports the Daily Caller.

GETTR HIT JOB BY BIG TECH

When GETTR, the free speech, "cancel free" social media platform officially launched on Julyth4 and immediately began to scale, it was certain that Big Tech and the mainstream media would get their knives out.

When the attacks came, they were predictably coordinated, brazen, and transparently driven by an agenda of self-protection and animosity toward the Make America Great Again movement, and more specifically, anyone attached to President Donald J. Trump.

POLITICO, the Washington, D.C., political trade publication, launched a strike on GETTR, declaring that our platform is a "safe haven" for Islamic extremists, as their initial, inflammatory headline blared.

The story was peppered with references to former President Trump and the Make America Great Again movement, leaving no doubt why GETTR was being targeted in the first place.

GETTR is fast approaching two million registered users, which is unprecedented growth for a social media startup. (For comparison, consider that Twitter needed 24 months to record its first one million users and Facebook took 10 months to reach that milestone.)

Among two million users, POLITICO cited a mere 250 individual accounts that allowed them to write a story that fit their narrative. Incredibly, they used the word "inundated" to describe the content this tiny number of accounts produced, even though regular users would most likely never even encounter their posts.

The impetus for the story was the work of the "Institute for Strategic Dialogue," a think tank that "tracks online extremism," according to POLITICO. The writers of the article admit this organization supplied the research that was the basis of the GETTR hit piece.

But what readers were not told is that the "Institute for Strategic Dialogue" is funded by a list of GETTR's Big Tech competitors. It's a team of heavyweights, with Audible, Facebook, GIFCT, Google, Google.org, Jigsaw, Microsoft, and YouTube listed as private sector funders of the Institute.

In short, POLITICO failed to disclose that the primary detractor in their story is funded by GETTR's competitors in the tech and social media marketplace.

Readers of POLITICO's piece were also left with the clear impression that social media giants Twitter and Facebook have dealt with the problem of Islamic extremist content and no longer have an issue with it. But even a cursory search of the Internet reveals that the struggles are ongoing.

Last May, the website TowardsDataScience.com detailed Twitter's battle with extremists under the headline, "How ISIS Uses Twitter." Late in 2019, National Public Radio ran a similar piece titled, "Twitter Struggling to Shut Down Bot and Impersonation Accounts Created By ISIS."

Neither of these stories, nor the information they contained, were incorporated into the POLITICO piece to provide any context. Instead, readers were led to believe this was solely a GETTR problem.

To add insult to injury, POLITICO declined to include my full statement in their 1,300-word slam story. For the sake of getting it on the record, here it is in its entirety:

â... ISIS is trying to attack the MAGA movement because President Trump wiped them off the face of the earth, destroying the Caliphate in less than 18 months, and the only ISIS members still alive are keyboard warriors hiding in caves and eating dirt cookies. Buried beneath a misleading and inflammatory headline, however, even POLITICO acknowledges GETTR has a robust and proactive moderation system that removes prohibited content, maximizing both cutting-edge A.I. technology and human moderation.â...

GETTR is the marketplace of ideas, and users will not see their accounts canceled for expressing their political opinions. We do have a strong and proactive moderation policy that does not tolerate threats or intimidation; bullying, harassing, or stalking; homophobic, racial, or sexual slurs; encouraging criminal or illegal behavior; encouraging self-harm; sharing of another person's private information; doxing; sexually explicit content; spamming; or content depicting excessive violence.

To combat Islamic extremist content is a continuous battle, as our competitors can attest, and much of the objectionable content on our platform was posted before our official launch.

But GETTR has made gains in the social media universe that undeniably make us a lasting player. We offer superior technology, with longer posts and higher quality picture and video features, and a better user experience, than many other platforms.

One hit piece in a Washington, D.C. Beltway rag isn't going to change that, but it looks like Politico and Big Tech gave it a try anyway.

Google Braced for England's First â... Right to Be Forgottenâ... Trial

By

Kaye Wiggins ,

Stephanie Bodoni , and

GOOGLE IS THE DEMOCRATS PERSONAL CHARACTER ASSASSINATION TOOL. NOW GOOGLE HAS TO PAY FOR THEIR CRIMES AGAINST THE PUBLIC

- High Court hearing over old convictions will start in February
- Tech giant says itâ... ll defend the publicâ... s right to information

Google Inc. is bracing for its first battle in a London court over the so-called â... right to be forgotten.â...

Two anonymous people want the search engine to take down links to information about their old convictions. Both describe themselves in their court filings as businessmen. One was convicted of conspiracy to account falsely, and the other was convicted of conspiracy to intercept communications, but they have served their sentences, Judge Matthew Nicklin said at a pre-trial hearing Thursday.

â... This is the first time that the English court is going to decide the issue of the right to be forgotten,â... Nicklin said.

The tech giant has already become embroiled in battles at the European Unionâ... s top court over the right to be forgotten. The principle -- created by the EUâ... s highest court in a precedent-setting ruling in May 2014 -- allows people to ask for links to online information about them to be removed from search engine results if itâ... s outdated or irrelevant. The ruling is only valid in the 28-nation bloc, but Google has clashed with privacy regulators over attempts to apply it beyond the EU.

â... We work hard to comply with the right to be forgotten, but we take great care not to remove search results that are clearly in the public interest and will defend the publicâ... s right to access lawful information,â... a Google spokeswoman said.

Lawyers for the plaintiffs didnâ... t immediately comment.

â... Not Celebritiesâ...

Judge Nicklin said Thursday that the two cases were not related but both raised the same legal issues. The first trial, in which the person challenging Google to remove information is known as NT1, will start on Feb. 27 and the second, in which the plaintiff is known as NT2, will start on March 13. Nicklin said the plaintiffs werenâ... t celebrities or politicians and have been â... rehabilitatedâ... since their convictions.

NT1 has been threatened in public places by people referring to the content that Google links to, â... and seeking to extract money from him in consequence,â... his court filings say. He â... has been and continues to be treated as a pariah in his personal, business and social life and has been unable to form any new friendships or personal relationships,â... they say.

NT2â... s papers say some financial institutions are unwilling to deal with him â... on private or commercial businessâ... after looking him up on Google. The search engine results have attracted â... adverse attentionâ... to him and by association to members of his close family.

The case concerns an â... area of the law in which two human rights come into conflict,â... Nicklin said in a pre-trial ruling. â... The right to be forgotten is a dimension of the right to privacy and it conflicts with the right of freedom of expression.â...

The plaintiffs are being represented by the law firm Carter Ruck, which specializes in defending clients in privacy and libel actions. It was one of the first firms to use super-injunctions, court orders that prevent publication of any confidential information relating to a person or an issue and also any existence of the order itself.

The plaintiffsâ... court papers say that revealing their identity would â... defeat the object of the claims.â...

Google has publicly raised the alarm about risks to freedom of speech that it says are posed by the right to be forgotten. Two separate European Court of Justice cases about that right â... represent a serious assault on the publicâ... s right to access lawful information,â... the tech giantâ... s general counsel, Kent Walker, said in a blog post in November.

The cases are: NT1 v. Google and NT2 v. Google, High Court of Justice, Queenâ... s Bench Division, Case No.â... s HQ15X04128 and HQ15X04127.

H.R. McMaster Approved NSA Spy Job On Trump Family

by Tyler Durden

Dec 6, 2017 7:45 AM

SHARES

A retired CIA officer reportedly working with Blackwater founder Erik Prince to pitch the White House on a global, private spy network which as we reported yesterday would allow the White House to circumvent and counter "deep state enemies" within U.S. intelligence agencies, is said to have made the stunning claim that National Security Advisor H.R. McMaster worked with the NSA to perform surveillance on Donald Trump Jr, Eric Trump, Steve Bannon and others, according to a report in The Intercept.

Former CIA agent John R. Maguire and Blackwater founder Erik Prince

The former CIA agent, John R. Maguire - a Trump transition team member who works for intelligence contractor Amyntor Group, spent over two decades as a paramilitary officer - including tours in Central America working with the Contras. After retiring, Maguire hooked up with Blackwater founder Erik Prince in what has been a long and fruitful professional relationship.

While Maguire and Prince deny they are working together on the White House's "private spy network," current and former U.S. officials as well as Trump donors say otherwise, as The Intercept reports:

The former senior intelligence official with direct knowledge of the efforts scoffed at Prince's denials. "Erik's proposal had no company names on the slides," this person said, â... but there is no doubt that Prince and Maguire were working together.â...

Prince is reported to have told a top Trump fundraiser that he and Maguire are working together, and the two had been going around to Trump fundraisers to generate support for private military contracting efforts in Afghanistan until a CIA contract materialized for the project.

During these conversations, Maguire told donors that Obama administration holdovers were withholding information from President Trump, and H.R. McMaster - a protégé of former CIA director David Petraeus - authorized a spying operation on members of the Trump family as well as Steve Bannon, and then sent the gathered intel to an international facility owned by George Soros. Via The Intercept:

â... [Maguire] said there were people inside the CIA who joined in the previous eight years [under Obama] and inside the government, and they were failing to give the president the intelligence he needed,â... said a person who was pitched by Maguire and other Amyntor personnel. To support his claim, Maguire told at least two people that National Security Adviser H.R. McMaster, in coordination with a top official at the National Security Agency, authorized surveillance of Steven Bannon and Trump family members, including Donald Trump Jr. and Eric Trump. Adding to these unsubstantiated claims, Maguire told the potential donors he also had evidence McMaster used a burner phone to send information gathered through the surveillance to a facility in Cyprus owned by George Soros.

A potential Donor Maguire spoke with said "John [Maguire] was certain that the deep state was going to kick the president out of office within a year,â... adding â... These guys said they were protecting the president.â...

Given the frequent and ongoing "deep-state" leaks to the MSM designed to undermine Trump, reports of Obama holdovers keeping dozens of national security positions - some say thanks to H.R. McMaster, and advisory team whittled down to Stephen Miller, Jared and Ivanka, it's no secret that at least some, if not all of what is known as the "deep state" has been after Trump since he became a serious threat to Hillary Clinton during the election.

Does Mueller Indictment Mean Clinton Campaign Can Be Indicted for Chris Steele?

by Robert Barnes |

Special Counsel Robert Mueller indicted foreign citizens for trying to influence the American public about an election because those citizens did not register as a foreign agent nor record their financial expenditures to the Federal Elections Commission. By that theory, when will Mueller indict Christopher Steele, FusionGPS, PerkinsCoie, the DNC and the Clinton Campaign? Mueller's indictment against 13 Russian trolls claimed their social media political activity was criminal because: they were foreign citizens; they tried to influence an election; and they neither registered under the Foreign Agents Registration Act nor reported their funding to the Federal Elections Commission.

First, if Mueller's theory is correct, three things make Steele a criminal: first, he is a foreign citizen; second, he tried to influence an election, which he received payments to do (including from the FBI itself); and third, he neither registered as a foreign agent nor listed his receipts and expenditures to the Federal Election Commission. Also, according to the FBI, along the way, Steele lied a lot, while the dossier he disseminated contained its own lies based on bought-and-paid for smears from foreign sources reliant on rumors and innuendo.

Second, if Mueller's theory is correct, three things make FusionGPS a criminal co-conspirator: it knew Steele was a foreign citizen; it knew, and paid, Steele to influence an election; and it knew, and facilitated, Steele neither registering as a foreign agent nor reporting his funding from the Democratic National Committee and the Clinton campaign to the Federal Election Commission.

Third, if Mueller's theory is correct, then three things make PerkinsCoie a potential target: it knew Steele was a foreign citizen; it knew, and paid, Steele to influence an election; and it knew, and facilitated, Steele neither registering as a foreign agent nor reporting his funding from the Democratic National Committee and the Clinton campaign to the Federal Election Commission, by disguising its receipt of payments from the Clinton campaign as a legal expense.

Fourth, if Mueller's theory is correct, then three things make the DNC a potential target: it knew Steele was a foreign citizen; it knew, and paid, Steele to influence an election; and it knew, and facilitated, Steele neither registering as a foreign agent nor reporting his funding from the Democratic National Committee and the Clinton campaign to the Federal Election Commission, by disguising its payments to Steele as laundered legal expenses to a law firm.

Fifth, if Mueller's theory is correct, three things make the Clinton Campaign a potential target: it knew Steele was a foreign citizen; it knew, and paid, Steele to influence an election; and it knew, and facilitated, Steele neither registering as a foreign agent nor reporting his funding from the Clinton campaign to the Federal Election Commission, by disguising its funding of payments to Steele laundered through a law firm as a legal expense.

Don't expect such an indictment. Mueller chose his targets because he knows they will never appear in court, never contest the charges, and cannot be arrested or extradited as Russian citizens. Mueller's unprecedented prosecution raises three novel arguments: first, that speaking out about American politics requires a foreign citizen to register under the Foreign Agents Registration Act; second, that speaking out about American politics requires a foreign citizen list their source and expenditure of funding to the Federal Election Commission; and third, that mistakes on visa applications constitute fraud on the State Department. All appear to borrow from the now-discredited honest services theories Mueller's team previously used in corporate and bribery cases, cases the Supreme Court overturned for their unconstitutional vagueness. The indictment raises serious issues under the free speech clause of the First Amendment and due process rights under the Fifth Amendment.

HIRED CYBER ASSASSINS

- Imagine a single hit-job group with over a thousand covert facades

Alana Goodman

In May, a group called Accountable Tech, which calls itself a "small nonprofit taking on Big Tech companies," organized a corporate boycott to protest Elon Musk's bid to buy Twitter. In the midwest, a group called Opportunity Wisconsin, which bills itself as a "coalition of Wisconsin residents," ran a deluge of TV ads slamming Republican senator Ron Johnson for his tax policies. And in Arizona, an organization of "grassroots racial justice" activists called Just Democracy released a video blasting Democratic senator Kyrsten Sinema for failing to support the Biden administration's legislative agenda.

None of these groups actually exist. They are all registered trade names for the North Fund, a shape-shifting nonprofit group that uses aliases to push an array of left-wing causes from a shell office in Washington, D.C., according to corporate records.

Political watchdogs say the fund, which isn't required to disclose the donors behind its $66 million budget, is gearing up to be one of the most consequential dark-money players of the midterm elections. And while "astroturf" groups are nothing new in politics, critics say the North Fund is part of a new breed moving away from specific policy advocacy and delving into electoral politics.

"North Fund has said screw it," said Hayden Ludwig, a senior investigator with the Capital Research Center. "They've just decided to be as partisan as they can."

"Their money has been pretty much exclusively focused on Senate races, on ballot initiatives, and a few things kind of related to that," Ludwig added. "The general theme there is cementing permanent Democratic majorities in Congress."

The North Fund, which was founded in 2018, is helmed by a handful of Democratic operatives, including former Clinton aide Jim Gerstein. It operates under at least eight trade names, according to D.C. corporate records, including "51 for 51," a group pushing for statehood for the heavily Democratic District of Columbia, and the "Voting Rights Lab Action," which advocates for voting policy reforms favorable to Democrats.

Under the guise of "Opportunity Wisconsin," the group has poured $4 million into negative TV advertising against Johnson, making it one of the top-spending outside groups in the state. Through another alias, the "Democracy Docket Action Fund," the nonprofit has helped finance state-level redistricting lawsuits that favor Democrats across the country. And the "Accountable Tech" boycott campaign, which seeks to pressure Twitter to restrict speech from conservative outlets and Republican politicians, has received international news coverage.

"From trying to make D.C. a state to funding [Democratic operative] Marc Elias's politicized lawsuits, North Fund's presence is often felt but their very existence is virtually unknown," Caitlin Sutherland, the executive director of the Americans for Public Trust watchdog group, told the Washington Free Beacon. "If untraceable money is flooding the latest policy or legislative fight under the guise of grassroots activism, chances are, North Fund is behind it."

Critics say organizations like the North Fund can also have an outsized impact on the private sector, because corporations have a hard time discerning its work from bona fide grassroots groups.

"Corporations rarely understand that a vast majority of these boycott campaigns are organized and run by hyper-partisan political hacks instead of thoughtful and experienced policy experts," one tech industry insider familiar with these boycott campaigns told the Free Beacon. "They disguise themselves in idealistic sounding group names while structuring their organizations in such a way that hides the true motivations and identity of their large donors."

The North Fund received $66 million in 2020, according to its public tax disclosures, nearly all of it from large contributors. Over 93 percent came from donors giving over $1 million.

While the North Fund doesn't disclose the names of its contributors, it is required to report the donation amounts. Americans for Public Trust was able to trace some of the funding using grant data from other nonprofits.

Sutherland found that the North Fund received $19.3 million from the Sixteen Thirty Fund and over $11 million from the New Venture Fund, two organizations that share an address in D.C. Similar to the North Fund, the groups operate under at least 50 trade namesâ€¦ including "Fix Our Senate," "Floridians for a Fair Shake," and the "Voter Engagement Fund."

However, the Sixteen Thirty Fund and the New Venture Fund don't disclose their donors either, leading to a dead end in the money trail.

The North Fund declined to comment on its funding relationships or its use of trade names. The group told the Free Beacon that it "follows all disclosure requirements related to the disclosure of individual donors and grantees."

"The North Fund is a nonpartisan social impact organization that partners with community leaders and organizers to help make our society a more just, fair, and equitable place to live, work, and raise families," said the North Fund in an emailed statement. "As a fiscal sponsor, the North Fund provides operational and administrative support to projects, including legal and compliance, HR, accounting and payroll, and grantmaking support."

Despite its large budget and impact, the North Fund has almost no physical footprint. When the Free Beacon visited its office in downtown D.C.â€¦ a co-working rental space managed by the company Carr Workplacesâ€¦ the front desk manager said the North Fund uses the address but doesn't maintain a presence there. "I'm not sure where they're actually located," he said.

The North Fund is managed by a Democratic consulting firm called Arabella Advisors, which also keeps the copies of the fund's public financial documents, according to the fund's tax disclosure records. Nonprofit groups are required to provide physical copies of these records to members of the public who request them in person, a spokesperson for the IRS told the Free Beacon.

But at Arabella's office building in D.C., the lobby receptionists told the Free Beacon they were under strict orders from the firm to turn away all outside visitors.

When the Free Beacon stopped by the listed D.C. address for the Sixteen Thirty Fund and the New Venture Fundâ€¦ the North Fund's primary donorsâ€¦ their cavernous, full-floor office suite was deserted.

The groups had recently moved out, leaving just a couple of office chairs, the logo for Arabella Advisors emblazoned on the floors, and a piece of paper taped to a radiator that read, "Loose Lips Sink Ships."

â... Crush This Lady.â... Inside eBayâ... s Bizarre Campaign Against a Blog Critic.

Security employees orchestrated deliveries of live cockroaches, pornographic videos and a mask of a bloody pigâ... s head and

The box of live cockroaches delivered to their door was the last straw for David and Ina Steiner.

For more than two decades, the professional collectors ran a niche e-commerce blog out of their home in the Boston suburbs, with a focus on Amazon.com Inc. AMZN -1.09% and eBay Inc. EBAY -2.07%

Then, last August, the couple started receiving threatening emails and tweets. Not long after, according to federal investigators, a package arrived with a mask of a bloody pigâ... s head. Next, they received a funeral wreath. Neighbors were sent pornographic videos addressed to one of the Steiners. Strange cars seemed to follow them around their small town of Natick, Mass.

They repeatedly called the local police, who say they initially thought the incidents might be pranks. The Steiners photographed one of the suspicious vehicles tailing them. With the photo, the local police tracked the license plate to a rental car checked out to a Veronica Zea, staying at Bostonâ... s Ritz-Carlton hotel along with a man named David Harville, according to an affidavit from a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent working the case.

Then the police discovered something really curious: Both Ms. Zea and Mr. Harville worked for eBay, the $34 billion online marketplace based more than 3,000 miles away in San Jose, Calif. The once dominant site was a frequent target of the Steinersâ... blog posts on their site, called ECommerceBytes.

Among the items sent anonymously to the Steiners was a grief-themed book and a bloody pig mask.

That discovery kicked off a criminal investigation into an alleged corporate harassment campaign that reached into eBayâ... s executive ranks. The campaign was as bold as it was bizarre, beginning with pranks inspired by the 1988 movie â... Johnny Be Goodâ... and escalating to more sinister threats and stalking, according to the affidavit.

Last Monday, the U.S. attorneyâ... s office for the District of Massachusetts said it charged six former eBay executives and employees, all part of its security team, with taking part in a weekslong harassment campaign that included threatening emails and tweets, fake Craigslist posts and the mysterious deliveries.

Now the U.S. attorneyâ... s office is investigating whether eBay targeted any other critics with harassment campaigns, according to a person familiar with the investigation.

This account of what happened is based on more than two dozen interviews with current and former eBay executives and people familiar with the company, government and police officials and documents released by the U.S. attorney's office, including the affidavit from FBI agent Mark Wilson.

The alleged cyberstalking campaign was launched soon after Devin Wenig, eBay's chief executive at the time, and his chief communications officer, Steve Wymer, embarked on a more aggressive public-relations strategy that included challenging critics such as ECommerceBytes, people familiar with the matter say.

As part of that strategy, eBay executives tried to prove their suspicion that its rival Amazon.com Inc. was helping to fund ECommerceBytes, two of these people said. They ultimately didn't find any evidence of that. An Amazon spokesman said the company has never funded the site.

Mr. Wenig's wife, Cindy Wenig, had complained to eBay's security team about the tone of ECommerceBytes' reader comments about her husband, particularly after an unknown man had shown up at their house.

Mr. Wenig, who left the company last fall, said in an interview he didn't order any type of harassment of the Steiners, nor was he aware of the security team's efforts. Mr. Wenig said he was in a monthlong sabbatical in Italy when the alleged activity took place last August and didn't find out the details until they were made public on June 15.

It's totally embarrassing, and it's just ridiculous," he said. "It's so not the culture of the company."

Mr. Wymer, his former communications chief, said, "I would never condone or participate in any such activity."

Devin Wenig, who stepped down as eBay CEO last fall, said he didn't order any type of harassment.

The woman said to have rented the car, Ms. Zea, an eBay contractor who worked as an intelligence analyst, declined to comment. Mr. Harville, eBay's former director of global resiliency, didn't respond to requests for comment. They were two of the six charged with conspiracy to commit cyberstalking and conspiracy to tamper with witnesses.

When Mr. Wenig took over eBay in 2015, the company had been struggling to compete with a surging Amazon in the marketplace business. He was intent on restoring it to its glory days as a tech darling. He sometimes wore a black T-shirt with a white pirate emblem, given to him by employees, to encourage disruptive thinking. He redesigned eBay's logo and poured millions of dollars into renovating its San Jose headquarters.

Yet even as he sought to aggressively recast eBay as a Silicon Valley underdog, he often reacted forcefully to what he perceived as negative coverage of the company. Former employees say he could be set off by even the smallest of slights, including reader comments on blog posts, YouTube videos and media reports about his compensation. Some of his concerns about critical coverage or comments were voiced in text messages he exchanged with Mr. Wymer.

After a May 31, 2019, post on the Steinersâ... site analyzed Mr. Wenigâ... s remarks at a shareholder meeting, according to the affidavit, the CEO texted Mr. Wymer. â... I couldnâ... t care less what she says,â... he said, referring to Ms. Steiner. â... Take her down.â... Mr. Wenig said he was referring to the aggressive media campaign.

eBay has at other times pressured detractors to remove negative content.

Longtime seller Casey Parris said eBay threatened him with a lawsuit if he didn't remove a YouTube video the company perceived to be negative.

In late 2018, eBay executives pushed longtime seller Casey Parris to remove what the company perceived to be a negative YouTube video about the company, saying the company â... didnâ... t like the toneâ... and threatened a lawsuit if it wasnâ... t removed, Mr. Parris said.

When he asked his contact at eBay how the company would have even seen his video, Mr. Parris said, he was told that its security team was watching all the time. He said he recently told eBay about the incident and the company said it would investigate. â... Iâ... m still scared by it,â... he said.

Another seller, Danni Ackerman, said eBay stopped inviting her to events after she started a YouTube channel that criticized policy changes that affected sellers, as part of what she called the companyâ... s â... bully culture.â...

A spokeswoman for eBay said the company â... has always sought out candid and constructive feedback from all of our stakeholders, in particular our seller community. We deeply value this input.â...

In a blog post addressed to sellers last week, Jordan Sweetnam, head of eBayâ... s marketplace business in the U.S., Canada and Latin America, said the alleged acts by eBay security officials â... were isolated incidents and not a systemic issue.â... eBay held a private Zoom call Thursday for its sellers, assuring them that all the bad apples at the company were gone, and that eBay was looking into individual claims, according to a person familiar with the call.

ECommerceBytes was founded in 1999 after Mr. Steiner, 61 years old, an auction enthusiast and video producer, had difficulty placing a listing of video equipment on eBay. Figuring other sellers might also be having similar trouble, the Steiners launched the siteâ... then called AuctionBytes.comâ... to help others navigate the online commerce world.

Ms. Steiner, 58, a longtime writer and editor, writes most of the websiteâ... s content. Both of the Steiners are collectors, browsing garage sales in their free time.

â... Here was a new market that no one was writing about, so they began to cover the market in an agnostic way,â... said Gary Sohmers, an early eBay seller and longtime appraiser who knows the Steiners. The Steiners didnâ... t respond to requests for comment.

Though obscure, the site built a significant following among eBay sellers, with several thousand subscriptions by 2019. The reader comments on the posts were at times snarky and personal.

Some taunted eBay executives, including then-CEO Meg Whitman and John Donahoe, now CEO of Nike Inc. A comment from 2017 called Mr. Wenig the devil, according to the affidavit.

Mr. Wenig, a New York transplant who once ran the financial and media businesses at Thomson Reuters Markets LLC., became CEO after eBay spun off payments giant PayPal Holdings Inc. in 2015.

In January 2019, hedge fund Elliott Management Corp. disclosed a more than 4% stake in eBay and said the company should consider selling its StubHub ticketing business and classifieds-ads unit and focus on repairing its core marketplace.

By early that year, Mr. Wenig and his public-relations team had decided to alter the company's public-relations strategy. Rather than responding to interview requests or sending out news releases, they planned to take a more aggressive approach with publications that wrote negative stories about eBay, according to people familiar with the decision.

In the recent interview, Mr. Wenig said he didn't spend any more or less time than the average CEO thinking about media coverage. "I think all CEOs care about the coverage of their company," he said.

In April 2019, Ms. Steiner wrote a short article about Mr. Wenig's compensation, based on a public Securities and Exchange Commission filing, titled "eBay CEO Devin Wenig Earns 152 Times That of Employees." A commenter posted: "What a foolish Board. What an overpaid empty suit. What a joke."

According to the affidavit, Mr. Wymer, then eBay's communications chief, texted Mr. Wenig that they would "crush this lady."

The Wall Street Journal wrote a 164-word article about Mr. Wenig's $18.2 million compensation around the same time, with the headline "Ebay Chief Executive Wenig Got Raise in 2018."

"F--- them," Mr. Wenig texted Mr. Wymer, according to the affidavit. "The journal is next on the list" after Ms. Steiner. After brainstorming ways to go after the Journal, eBay employees ultimately abandoned the effort, according to people familiar with the plans.

EBay executives decided to examine Amazon's relationship with ECommerceBytes, hoping to be able to point out to a reporter or publish a blog post on its website arguing that it was improper for a publication to accept money from an e-commerce giant it was writing about, according to people familiar with those plans. EBay also is suing three Amazon employees who it claims worked to illegally recruit its third-party sellers.

By the summer of 2019, James Baugh, then eBay's director of safety and security, was laying the groundwork for an alleged campaign to silence the Steiners, according to the affidavit. Mr. Baugh, a native of Arkansas and longtime security executive, joined the company in 2016.

At one meeting, the affidavit said, Mr. Baugh showed his team a clip from the 1988 film comedy "Johnny Be Good," in which two friends arrange for a series of odd, unwanted deliveries to their football coach. Mr. Baugh allegedly said he wanted something similar to happen to the Steiners.

Mr. Wenig's wife had texted Mr. Baugh in July about a reader comment that called Mr. Wenig a "con artist and thief," under an ECommerceBytes article. "The author gets people worked up with the way she skews her stories," Ms. Wenig wrote, according to the affidavit.

A spokeswoman said Ms. Wenig was concerned about the safety of her family after one commenter threatened a â... crash landingâ... for Mr. Wenig shortly before the family was planning to fly to Italy.

ECommerceBytes published several more negative stories about eBay around the time of its annual seller conference in Las Vegas in July 2019. A text exchange cited in the affidavit indicates that after being alerted to the stories by Mr. Wymer, Mr. Wenig texted him: â... If you are ever going to take her down, now is the time.â...

â... On it,â... Mr. Wymer responded.

He texted Mr. Baugh the message from Mr. Wenig, adding, â... She is biased troll who needs to get BURNED DOWN.â...

â... Copy that,â... Mr. Baugh said. â... I have a plan B. I will put it in motion.â...

In meetings with his analysts and other members of eBayâ... s security team, Mr. Baugh warned that the campaign had to be kept confidential, but told them he had support of executive management.

According to the affidavit, the planned campaign against the Steiners was supposed to have two parts. After the initial harassment, eBay would begin a â... white-knight strategyâ... of offering to help the victims end the mysterious communications and deliveries, the affidavit said. Local police stepped in before that happened.

Mr. Baugh, who also was charged by the U.S. attorneyâ... s office, didnâ... t respond to requests for comment, nor did his lawyer.

In Natick, Ms. Steiner began getting dozens of emails and newsletters she hadnâ... t signed up for with subjects like â... Cat Faeries,â... and â... the Satanic Temple.â... An anonymous Twitter user sent her private messages, demanding her response and then threatening â... I guess im goin to have to get ur attention another way bitchâ...!â...

An anonymous Craigslist ad targeting the Steiners.

On Craigslist, a post popped up with the Steinersâ... address, and a title â... M/F couple seeking activity partner.â... Another post announced â... BLOCK PARTY in Natick - Letâ... s have some fun!â... , again with the coupleâ... s address, and inviting people to stop by â... anytime of day or night.â...

Once the police connected the activity to eBay, the executives involved allegedly tried to cover their tracks.

Mr. Baugh sent a message from his personal cellphone to Mr. Wymer, saying he and members of his team were cooperating, that they had done nothing illegal, and asking â... if there is any way to get some top cover that would be great.â... Mr. Baugh directed his team members to delete their WhatsApp and phone data, according to the affidavit.

The eBay boardâ... s audit committee learned of the investigation in late August, and the broader board was briefed the following month during a five-hour call led by lawyers at Morgan Lewis & Bockius, according to people familiar with the matter. The board was told the investigation found no evidence that Mr. Wenig was aware of the actions, these people said.

The company placed Messrs. Baugh and Harville and another member of the security team on administrative leave on Aug. 30. The company later fired all six who were charged, and Mr. Wymer.

U.S. Attorney for Massachusetts Andrew E. Lelling announced charges against the former eBay employees on June 15.

When Mr. Wenig was pushed out as CEO in late September, the directors said the main reasons were the companyâ... s financial performance and his disagreement with a large investor about the best path forward for the company, according to people familiar with the matter. The investigation also played a role, and directors blamed him for setting a cutthroat tone at the top. Mr. Wenig received a $57 million exit package.

On the day the U.S. attorneyâ... s office announced its charges, Ms. Steiner posted the press release to ECommerceBytes, with no further comment.

HOW DNC AND GOP OPERATIVES 'KILL' PEOPLE...they use bribes and sex workers to entrap everyone

An undercover investigation by Channel 4 News reveals how Cambridge Analytica secretly campaigns in elections across the world. Bosses were filmed talking about using bribes, ex-spies, fake IDs and sex workers but now we found out that the American DNC does it many times more using Fusion GPS, Gawker, Gizmodo, Black Cube, Podesta Group, etc. DNC spent over $85 Million dollars on character assassination since 2005.

Senior executives at Cambridge Analytica â€¦ the data company that credits itself with Donald Trumpâ€™s presidential victory â€¦ have been secretly filmed saying they could entrap politicians in compromising situations with bribes and Ukrainian sex workers.

In an undercover investigation by Channel 4 News, the companyâ€™s chief executive Alexander Nix said the British firm secretly campaigns in elections across the world. This includes operating through a web of shadowy front companies, or by using sub-contractors.

In one exchange, when asked about digging up material on political opponents, Mr Nix said they could â€¦ send some girls around to the candidateâ€™s houseâ€¦, adding that Ukrainian girls â€¦ are very beautiful, I find that works very wellâ€¦.

In another he said: â€¦ Weâ€™ll offer a large amount of money to the candidate, to finance his campaign in exchange for land for instance, weâ€™ll have the whole thing recorded, weâ€™ll blank out the face of our guy and we post it on the Internet.â€¦

Offering bribes to public officials is an offence under both the UK Bribery Act and the US Foreign Corrupt Practices Act. Cambridge Analytica operates in the UK and is registered in the United States.

The admissions were filmed at a series of meetings at London hotels over four months, between November 2017 and January 2018. An undercover reporter for Channel 4 News posed as a fixer for a wealthy client hoping to get candidates elected in Sri Lanka.

Mr Nix told our reporter: â€¦ â€¦!weâ€™re used to operating through different vehicles, in the shadows, and I look forward to building a very long-term and secretive relationship with you.â€¦

Along with Mr Nix, the meetings also included Mark Turnbull, the managing director of CA Political Global, and the companyâ€™s chief data officer, Dr Alex Tayler.

Mr Turnbull described how, having obtained damaging material on opponents, Cambridge Analytica can discreetly push it onto social media and the internet.

He said: â€¦ â€¦! we just put information into the bloodstream of the internet, and then, and then watch it grow, give it a little push every now and againâ€¦! like a remote control. It has to happen without anyone thinking, â€¦ thatâ€™s propagandaâ€¦, because the moment you think â€¦ thatâ€™s propagandaâ€¦, the next question is, â€¦ whoâ€™s put that out?â€¦ â€¦

Mr Nix also said: â€¦ â€¦!Many of our clients donâ€™t want to be seen to be working with a foreign companyâ€¦! so often we set up, if we are working then we can set up fake IDs and websites, we can be students doing research projects attached to a university, we can be tourists, thereâ€™s so many options we can look at. I have lots of experience in this.â€¦

In the meetings, the executives boasted that Cambridge Analytica and its parent company Strategic Communications Laboratories (SCL) had worked in more than two hundred elections across the world, including Nigeria, Kenya, the Czech Republic, India and Argentina.

The company is at the centre of a scandal over its role in the harvesting of more than 50 million Facebook profiles.

Chief executive Mr Nix has also been accused of misleading a parliamentary select committee, which is now asking him to provide further information. He has denied the allegations.

Tonight, a Cambridge Analytica spokesman said: '... We entirely refute any allegation that Cambridge Analytica or any of its affiliates use entrapment, bribes, or so-called 'honey-traps' for any purpose whatsoever.' We routinely undertake conversations with prospective clients to try to tease out any unethical or illegal intentions'.

They said: '... Cambridge Analytica does not use untrue material for any purpose.'

And they insisted that opposition research and intelligence gathering, the use of subcontractors and working discreetly with clients are all common practice and legitimate.

In fact, though, The DNC's attack group does much worse things.

The admissions were filmed at a series of meetings at London hotels over four months, between November 2017 and January 2018. An undercover reporter for Channel 4 News posed as a fixer for a wealthy client hoping to get candidates elected in Sri Lanka.

Mr Nix told our reporter: â€¦ â€¦!weâ€™re used to operating through different vehicles, in the shadows, and I look forward to building a very long-term and secretive relationship with you.â€¦

Along with Mr Nix, the meetings also included Mark Turnbull, the managing director of CA Political Global, and the companyâ€™s chief data officer, Dr Alex Tayler.

Mr Turnbull described how, having obtained damaging material on opponents, Cambridge Analytica can discreetly push it onto social media and the internet.

He said: â€¦ â€¦! we just put information into the bloodstream of the internet, and then, and then watch it grow, give it a little push every now and againâ€¦! like a remote control. It has to happen without anyone thinking, â€¦ thatâ€™s propagandaâ€¦, because the moment you think â€¦ thatâ€™s propagandaâ€¦, the next question is, â€¦ whoâ€™s put that out?â€¦ â€¦

Mr Nix also said: â€¦ â€¦!Many of our clients donâ€™t want to be seen to be working with a foreign companyâ€¦! so often we set up, if we are working then we can set up fake IDs and websites, we can be students doing research projects attached to a university, we can be tourists, thereâ€™s so many options we can look at. I have lots of experience in this.â€¦

In the meetings, the executives boasted that Cambridge Analytica and its parent company Strategic Communications Laboratories (SCL) had worked in more than two hundred elections across the world, including Nigeria, Kenya, the Czech Republic, India and Argentina.

The company is at the centre of a scandal over its role in the harvesting of more than 50 million Facebook profiles.

Chief executive Mr Nix has also been accused of misleading a parliamentary select committee, which is now asking him to provide further information. He has denied the allegations.

Tonight, a Cambridge Analytica spokesman said: '... We entirely refute any allegation that Cambridge Analytica or any of its affiliates use entrapment, bribes, or so-called 'honey-traps'... for any purpose whatsoever...' We routinely undertake conversations with prospective clients to try to tease out any unethical or illegal intentions'...

They said: '... Cambridge Analytica does not use untrue material for any purpose.'

And they insisted that opposition research and intelligence gathering, the use of subcontractors and working discreetly with clients are all common practice and legitimate.

In fact, though, The DNC's attack group does much worse things.

SECRETLY TAPED AUDIO REVEALS DEMOCRATIC LEADERSHIP PRESSURING PROGRESSIVE TO LEAVE RACE

STENY HOYER, the No. 2 Democrat in the House of Representatives, has for years been a prolific campaigner on behalf of current and potential members of Congress. It was no surprise, then, that December found him in Colorado, where the party has hopes of knocking off Republican incumbent Mike Coffman.

Before Donald Trump had even been inaugurated, local resistance groups began deluging Coffmanâ... s public appearances, pressing him not to repeal the Affordable Care Act, and putting him back on his political heels. Levi Tillemann, an author, inventor, and former official with the Obama administrationâ... s Energy Department, moved back home to make a run against Coffman.

He focused his campaign on clean elections, combatting climate change, â... Medicare for All,â... free community college, and confronting economic inequality and monopoly power. Another candidate for the nomination, Jason Crow, a corporate lawyer at the powerhouse Colorado firm Holland & Hart and an Army veteran, meanwhile, appeared to have the backing of the Democratic establishment, though it wasnâ... t explicit. In November, it became clearer, as Crow was named by the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee to the partyâ... s â... Red to Blueâ... list, which the committee specifies is not an endorsement but does carry symbolic weight.

With Hoyer in Denver, Tillemann met the minority whip at the Hilton Denver Downtown to make the case that the party should stay neutral in the primary and that he had a more plausible path to victory than the same centrism that Coffman had already beaten repeatedly.

Hoyer, however, had his own message he wanted to convey: Tillemann should drop out.

In a frank and wide-ranging conversation, Hoyer laid down the law for Tillemann. The decision, Tillemann was told, had been made long ago. It wasnâ... t personal, Hoyer insisted, and there was nothing uniquely unfair being done to Tillemann, he explained: This is how the party does it everywhere.

Tillemann had heard the argument before from D.C. insiders and local Democratic bigwigs, all of whom had discouraged him from challenging the establishment favorite. The only difference was that for this conversation, the candidate had his phone set to record.

The secretly taped audio recording, released here for the first time, reveals how senior Democratic officials have worked to crush competitive primaries and steer political resources, money, and other support to hand-picked candidates in key races across the country, long before the party publicly announces a preference. The invisible assistance boosts the preferred candidate in fundraising and endorsements, and then that fundraising success and those endorsements are used to justify national party support. Meanwhile, opponents of the party's unspoken pick are driven into paranoia, wondering if they are merely imagining that unseen hands are working against them.

Hoyer bluntly told Tillemann that it wasn't his imagination, and that mobilizing support for one Democratic candidate over another in a primary isn't unusual. Rep. Ben Ray Lujan, D-N.M., chair of the DCCC, has a policy that early on, we'd try to agree on a candidate who we thought could win the general and give the candidate all the help we could give them," Hoyer told Tillemann matter-of-factly.

"Yeah, I'm for Crow," Hoyer explained. "I am for Crow because a judgment was made very early on. I didn't know Crow. I didn't participate in the decision. But a decision was made early on by the Colorado delegation," he said, referencing the three House Democrats elected from Colorado.

"So your position is, a decision was made very early on before voters had a say, and that's fine because the DCCC knows better than the voters of the 6th Congressional District, and we should line up behind that candidate," asked Tillemann during the conversation.

"That's certainly a consequence of our decision," responded Hoyer.

"Staying out of primaries sounds small-D democratic, very intellectual, and very interesting," said Hoyer. "But if you stay out of primaries, and somebody wins in the primary who can't possibly win in the general," the Maryland representative said, citing the surprise victory of Democrat Doug Jones over Republican Roy Moore in the Alabama Senate election, "I'm not saying you're that person." But staying out of primaries, he argued, is "not very smart strategy."

Before agreeing to provide the audio, Tillemann requested that personal details be withheld. The Intercept selected the newsworthy aspects of the recording for publication.

DURING THE CONVERSATION, Hoyer asked Tillemann to leave the race multiple times and make way for Crow. "You keep saying I would like you to get out of the race, and of course that's correct," Hoyer said, adding that he hoped Tillemann would refrain from criticizing the party's chosen candidate if he decided to stay in.

The party, notably, has a poor track record in selecting candidates that can win the general election.

In 2006, the last cycle viewed as a wave midterm election for Democrats, the DCCC famously became heavily involved in Democratic primaries. In that election, just as in 2018, the party attempted to pick moderate, business-friendly veterans, while nudging left-leaning candidates out of the election. But some of the party's chosen primary candidates ended up losing, and several candidates viewed as too progressive to win the general in Republican-held districts — such as John Hall, Carol Shea-Porter, and Jerry McNerney — went on to win that election with little to no DCCC support.

The suggestion that Tillemann might end up being a spoiler like Roy Moore, an extremist with a history of soliciting minors, may seem far-fetched.

Tillemann, while studying for his Ph.D., founded an energy efficient engine design company, and in 2012, was appointed by President Barack Obama to advise the Energy Department. Though he has positioned himself as a grassroots populist aligned with local resistance activist groups, if anything he is simultaneously a legacy of the Democratic establishment, as the grandson of the late Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., on his mother's side and the grandson of former Colorado Lt. Gov. Nancy Dick on his father's side. He grew up in a working-class neighborhood of Denver. He also speaks Chinese, Spanish, Portuguese, and Japanese — an asset, he says, for the rapidly diversifying 6th District.

Crow spoke at the 2012 Democratic National Convention to support the repeal of the military's Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy. He previously served on the Colorado Board of Veterans Affairs and advised both the Obama administration and former Colorado Gov. John Hickenlooper on veterans issues. Crow's first television advertisement focuses on Coffman's support from the gun lobby, but conservatives have fired back to note that Crow's law firm lobbies against gun control on behalf of gun manufacturers in Colorado.

Crow's work representing corporations accused of misconduct may become a liability in the campaign. Legal filings list Crow's name on lawsuits defending payday lender Western Sky Financial and fracking firm Slawson Exploration.

IN RACES IN Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Texas, Nebraska, California, and beyond, progressive candidates are finding that the DCCC has mobilized support for moderate candidates with access to early campaign cash at the expense of progressives. As we've reported, many first-time candidates are told by the DCCC that before they can even be considered, they have to perform the "rolodex" test to show they can raise $250,000 or more from the contact list on their phone.

In February, the DCCC made the unusual move to release opposition research, the term of art for political dirt, against activist Laura Moser, who the party viewed as too liberal to win in the 7th Congressional District of Texas, a Houston-area seat. The strategy, however, appeared to backfire. Moser placed second in the Texas Democratic primary, meaning she'll have a shot at the nomination in the May 22 runoff.

Tillemann says the decision to record the conversation came after months of hints that party officials did not want him as the candidate. Though he notified the party of his intention to run, he had trouble gaining an audience with senior DCCC officials, obtaining polling data promised by the DCCC, or even gaining access to resumes of Democratic campaign staff. The party continued to promise neutrality while inviting only Crow to a candidate training seminar, Tillemann alleges.

In February of last year, Tillemann reached out over email to DCCC officials as he explored a bid and maintained contact with party staff through the launch of his campaign; he says he was continually stonewalled as he sought candidate resources. Nearly six months after the initial contact, with Tillemann's internal complaints growing more forceful, the party committee offered some perfunctory assistance in exchange for access to details about campaign financials and organizing. The offer came after a heated exchange between Tillemann and a DCCC official at a campaign event, in which Tillemann argued that the party was more interested in boosting Crow than beating Coffman.

While the DCCC still promised neutrality, publicly disclosed campaign donations confirmed Tillemann's suspicions. In June 2017, a political action committee controlled by Lujan, the DCCC chair, donated \$1,000 to Crow. That month, PACs controlled by Hoyer also donated two checks for a combined total of $2,000 to Crow.

â... We were put in a situation time and time again where what was communicated to us behind closed doors and what was communicated to the public was at odds,â... says Tillemann of his decision to tape the conversation with Hoyer. â... The breach of personal decorum,â... Tillemann adds, â... was much less important than the fundamental principle at stake in our democracy in 2018.â...

Mariel Saez, a spokesperson for Hoyer, said that â... we do not comment on private meetings. Mr. Hoyer supports Crow and donated to him last year, but he hasn't engaged in the race since then.â... Crow did not respond to a request for comment, and the DCCC declined to comment.

BUT THE DYNAMICS described in the audio tape and by Tillemann resonated with other former candidates in the district.

â... The party did not give me the resources that they gave Jason Crow,â... says David Aarestad, an attorney who had been running for the nomination for the 6th District. Aarestad dropped out of the race in March and endorsed Crow.

â... It was the D-trip. I was given extensive promises in March of last year that they would not do anything to favor one candidate over another, that they had learned from the mistakes made during the Bernie-Hillary fallout, and that they would do everything the same for all of the candidates,â... says Aarestad. â... But, they made polling data available to Crow that they did not make available to me. They made other resources available to Crow that they did not make available to me, such as email lists for fundraising purposes.â...

Gabriel McArthur, another former candidate for the 6th District, says the DCCC never contacted him, even though he was the first candidate to enter the race. He says the party exercises influence not just over candidate selection, but how political money and media coverage operates in the state. McArthur says he had the most detailed policies on his campaign website, but could never gain serious media coverage for his race. While Crow for much of last year had no issues page on his campaign website, McArthur noted that the establishment favorite appeared to easily win endorsement after endorsement from local liberal groups and politicians along with fawning coverage from local media.

â... Jason Crow has been hoisted up as the chosen candidate the entire time. The party officers say we need centrists to win against Mike Coffman, that's just the way it is,â... says McArthur, a former Bernie Sanders delegate to the 2016 Democratic National Convention.

Democratic consultants, McArthur says, have told him to focus more on fundraising than publicizing his policy agenda. â... The money isn't the real problem â... the problem is that the Democrats lack any real agenda,â... says McArthur.

When the DCCC publicly added Crow to its â... Red to Blueâ... list of front-line candidates in November, the move further embittered local Colorado Democrats who had been assured the party was remaining neutral in the primary. State Party Chair Morgan Carroll, the Democratic nominee in the 6th District in 2016, wrote on Facebook, â... The DCCC verbally said they would be neutral and in practice just endorsed one of the candidates in CD6.â...

The suburban district is being widely watched as one of the most important seats Democrats need to flip to regain the majority. Obama won the district in 2012 by 5 percentage points, and Hillary Clinton won it by 9 percent in 2016. But the incumbent, Coffman, has proved resilient, winning crossover votes by projecting a moderate image. He defeated Democratic challengers in the last two election cycles by a wide margin.

Hoyer has for years been a mainstay of House Democratic leadership, tantalizingly close to the speakership. Soon after being elected to Congress in 1981, he became a protégé of then-Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., a business-friendly lawmaker who had just become chair of the DCCC. Coelho famously transformed the DCCC into the big-money operation it is today, rebuking the Democratic Partyâ... s longstanding alliance with labor unions and activists in favor of raising millions of dollars from corporate lobbyists.

Under Coelho, one DCCC brochure assured donors â... courteous and direct access toâ... Democratic lawmakers. The DCCC encouraged candidates to focus on raising cash from corporate PACs and building relationships with business executives as the easiest path to office. Coelho resigned in 1989 following an ethics scandal, but not before giving a boost to Hoyer, his lieutenant who was quickly rising through the ranks of leadership.

Hoyer, exploiting his own role as the caucus point person for K Street, won the election as House Democratic whip in 2002. According to reports in Roll Call and the Washington Post, Hoyer regularly invites corporate lobbyists for weekly lunches with the caucus and helps to headline private donor retreats for the party. During the 2006 midterms, he worked closely with the DCCC to raise prodigious sums of corporate PAC cash for party election efforts, further cementing his role as a power player in the party.

FOR THE 2018 midterm cycle, the party has not only courted moderate Democrats and formed a renewed partnership with the conservative Blue Dog caucus for candidate recruitment, but has discouraged candidates from embracing populist ideas, such as single-payer health care.

For Tillemann, however, the partyâ... s closeness with the corporate elite is the very reason why the DCCC continues to lose general elections.

â... They squash progressive candidates. They destroy the diversity of ideas in their caucus. They keep ideas like â... Medicare for All,â... free community college, or impeaching Donald Trump from having a significant role in the national conversation,â... says Tillemann. â... The issues that resonate most with voters are not the issues that the DCCC is telling candidates to focus on.â...

Is he worried that even if he is successful in his campaign, that heâ... s already betrayed one of the most powerful Democrats, making him an outsider as soon as he arrives in Washington?

â... To a certain extent, people like Elizabeth Warren and people like Bernie Sanders have been ostracized by the party, and they have been marginalized by the establishment to the extent that is possible,â... says Tillemann. â... But the fact of the matter is that the people are crying out for genuine leaders, and the people are crying out for a solution to inequality and systemic injustice, and to the extent that I am fighting for those solutions, then I think there will be a powerful constituency for that.â...

â... Iâ... m proud to be on the side of truth,â... he added. â... Iâ... m proud to be on the right side of democracy, and Iâ... m proud to be on the right side of free and fair elections.â...

HOW THE AUTO INDUSTRY CARTELS KILLED OFF THE APPLE EV, DYSON AND OTHER ELECTRIC CARS

Craig Wilson - Darryl Siry -

Last month, James Dyson, the head of the company that carries his name and is best known for its vacuum cleaners, hairdryers, and Airblade hand dryer, explained in an interview with The Times of London why the company pulled the plug on its Â£500 million effort to build an electric vehicle to rival the likes of Tesla and Rivian. That interview offered only a small peek at the abandoned project. Now Dyson itself has pulled back the curtain and gone into more detail into a car that will go down in history, even if it never goes down anyone's driveway. EVs are expensive â... The short answer as to why the Dyson Battery Electric Vehicle failed to come to fruition is the price. Dyson argues that conventional carmakers lose money on electric cars, but that it doesn't matter because those losses can be "offset against selling traditional vehicles on which they make a good profit." It says this, combined with it being a "non-automotive company" and not using off-the-shelf components meant it would be too hard to build.

That's a shame because, as the video above and those below show, Dyson's Range Rover-like effort was striking, to say the least.

Dyson

A giant on wheels â... Dyson's electric SUV, built on a platform the company planned to use for other body styles in the future, is over 16 feet long, with enormous wheels at each corner that provided lower rolling resistance and a smoother ride on bad surfaces, along with substantial ground clearance.

The company is very light on the specifics of things like battery capacity, power output, 0-60 mph times, or any of the other figures auto fans tend to enjoy pouring over, but then, if you spent half a billion Pound Sterling on something, you might keep some of its secrets to yourself, too.

No love lost for armchairs â... According to Dyson, putting each wheel "at the extremities of the four corners" allowed it to have the seven-seater capacity of a long-wheelbase SUV "without the disadvantage of the massive external body." James Dyson also says he hates the "1930's armchair look that car seats typically have" and bemoans their lack of "proper lumbar support," which explains why Dyson's EV went for an admittedly attractive, high-end office-chair look.

Dyson

Not a complete waste â... Despite the intensive capital outlay, the hiring of "hundreds of engineers, scientists and designers," and the acquisition of a wartime airfield to that will now be home to Dyson's robotics, environmental care, and lighting teams, James Dyson says he has no regrets about having tried his hand at electric vehicles. But then, he would say that, wouldn't he? At least the original owners of the farmland that got converted first into a military facility and then the home of a technological pipedream got paid a contemporary market-related rate for their property. Every cloud, eh?

James Dyson made an electric Hummer to battle Tesla. Government agencies and market monopolies made sure it never got to market.

The company spent £500 million to design and test the 7-seat EV, which will never see the light of day.

The Times

Craig Wilson

James Dyson, who recently became the richest person in the U.K., has shelved his plans to challenge Tesla with a high-end, all-electric SUV. Dubbed the Dyson Car, but officially called the N526, the only pictures of the vehicle appeared in The Times over the weekend, alongside an interview with Dyson, who explained that despite sinking £500 million (~$612 million) and years of research into the car, it won't be coming to market.

Too expensive for this world â€¦ Dyson explained the final vehicle â€¦ which looks like a Range Rover Evoque, but has dimensions nearer those of a Hummer â€¦ wouldâ€¦ ve needed to sell for around £150,000 (roughly $184,000) for the company to actually make any big money off it.

While you can bet some people would buy one nonetheless and might consider it over the similarly priced Porsche Taycan, at three times the price of an optional extras-laden Tesla thereâ€¦ d be no hope of Dysonâ€¦ s vehicle being a mainstream success. Especially considering selling cars and making money from them is a volume game, and Dyson would have to create a network of after-sales support facilities that would further eat into its already slim profits.

The Times

The news sucks, but Dyson doesnâ€¦ t â€¦ Dyson is best known for its vacuum cleaners, hairdryers, bladeless fans, and iconic contactless Airblade hand dryers. Itâ€¦ s also known for its obsessive engineering that results in outstanding products that come with a similarly exceptional price tag. Itâ€¦ s also known for taking fresh approaches to products that don't always pay off.

The Dyson car isn't the first product it's had to shelve because of costs - it also canned a washing machine which proved too expensive for consumers, but not before it made it to market and sold (albeit poorly) for five years. And earlier this year it spent millions on plans to produce ventilators that eventually turned out to be unnecessary. Fortunately, though, unlike Tesla Dyson is a private company, so it isn't accountable to shareholders for its decisions.

What might have been - The Dyson car is a seven-seater powered by a pair of 200kW electric motors capably of 536 BHP and 480 lb-ft of torque. Despite weighing 2.6 tonnes, it can do 0-62 mph in 4.8 seconds, has a top speed of 125 mph, and can manage a staggering 600 miles to a charge. Combine that with the futuristic interior and we're very sorry we won't be seeing it at motor shows any time soon...! or ever.

Then there is Apple's Electric car; The world's most valuable company appears to have failed on an extravagant project in an embarrassingly public way. But it might not be the sign of decadence and decline that it seems at first blush.

Since early 2015, it has been an open secret in Silicon Valley that Apple was building a car. Under the code name Project Titan, the company reportedly assembled a huge team of engineers at an unmarked facility in Sunnyvale to build what was rumored first to be an electric car \(or minivan\), and later a self-driving electric car. The excitement revved so high as recently as this summer that Motor Trend devoted its June 2016 cover to imagining exactly what the Apple Car would look like.

Now it seems Apple has slammed on the brakes. Following a pair of earlier reports that Apple was downsizing its car project and shifting its focus, Bloomberg reported on Monday that the company's plan no longer includes building its own car. Instead, Apple's team has pivoted to building an autonomous driving system - that is, the software to power a self-driving car. The company has given Project Titan's leaders a deadline of late 2017 to prove the feasibility of the self-driving system and decide on a final direction, Bloomberg writes. Meanwhile, hundreds of team members have been reassigned, let go, or have left of their own volition in recent months, while Apple has continued to hire others with a focus on software and A.I.

As with most of the earlier media scoops on the Apple car, this one is anonymously sourced, so it's hard to say anything for sure. But the claims are consistent with prior reporting by Bloomberg and the New York Times and the documented departure of key executives from the Project Titan team.

Assuming it's true that Apple has given up on building a car, at least for the time being, the project will go down as an embarrassing misstep by CEO Tim Cook and company. It almost certainly cost the company a pile of money and distracted from its core business. If Apple did peak in 2015, as I've suggested, history may record this as an indicator of a company that was beginning to lose its touch.

Yet, in an odd way, it could be a sign of health that the company was willing to cut bait on such a large and highly publicized project at this juncture. One of Apple's great strengths has always been its focus. In contrast to a company like Google that seems to pursue every idea at once, Apple does a few things, and it does them far better than anyone else.

Cook, who is sometimes derided as a corporate custodian who lacks his predecessor's legendary vision, surely deserves some blame if the car project turns out to have been misguided. Yet he also deserves some credit, both for pursuing a bold new idea and for cutting his losses when it seemed clear that it was not on the road to success.

The worst possible outcome for Apple would have been to continue pouring resources into a doomed project, whether due to wishful thinking, an unwillingness to admit defeat, or sheer organizational inertia. That would have been a sign of a company in decline, heedlessly expanding for expansion's sake. Building and releasing an Apple car that flopped would have been far more than an embarrassment. It could have been the company's undoing.

Instead, Apple is shifting gears, redirecting resources to a software project that is far less risky and capital-intensive than actually mass-producing vehicles. It's still risky, and it could still backfire. But at least we now know that Apple won't be afraid to call it off if it isn't working.

In the technology industry, staying on top can be almost as hard as getting there. History teaches us that even the greatest companies eventually lose their way by becoming complacent and missing big trends, or by overextending themselves and losing focus. The car project, from what we know, shows Apple remaining vigilant to both fates. Project Titan may have failed, at least on the hardware side. But, to borrow a Silicon Valley cliché: At least it failed fast.

You are not allowed to build a new kind of car. If it competes with the Detroit, Tokyo or Google monopolies you are toast. Each of those Cartels will bribe their politicians at NHTSA, DOE, EPA, FTC, etc. to block your funds, taxes, staffing and suppliers. They will put moles in your company and force over-costs and staff issues. You won't pull it off no matter how much money you have. Tesla Motor's got funded because its investors funded the Obama Administration and controlled major U.S. Senators (Who also owned stock in Tesla).

Of all of the Department of Energy programs intended to advance the green agenda while stimulating the economy, the Advanced Technology Vehicle Manufacturing incentive to spur the development of cleaner, greener automobiles is perhaps the most ambitious. But it has a downside.

The energy department has approved direct loans to Nissan, Ford, Tesla Motors and Fisker Automotive totaling about $8 billion out of a budget of $25 billion. The magnitude of this program dwarfs other DOE campaigns like the $2.4 billion given to battery and electric vehicle component manufacturers and the $4 billion disbursed for "smart grid" projects.

To the recipients the support is a vital and welcome boost. But this massive government intervention in private capital markets may have the unintended consequence of stifling innovation by reducing the flow of private capital into ventures that are not anointed by the DOE.

To understand this apparent contradiction, you have to look at the market from the perspective of venture capitalists looking to deploy investors' capital and startups looking to attract it.

Venture capitalists evaluate a company on the basis of whether they think it will succeed and generate returns for their portfolios. While this evaluation is a function of many things, one key question is how much more capital the company will need to get its product to market or a liquidity event so that the venture capitalist can see a return. The more capital it needs, the more dilutive it will be to the early investors.

In cleantech, and in particular alternative fuel vehicles, the capital requirements for companies bringing a car to market in significant numbers can be extraordinarily high, reaching into the hundreds of millions of dollars if the company wants to build its own manufacturing facilities.

To a venture capitalist, this capital requirement can be daunting. This is why government financing is so attractive. In the case of the advanced technology manufacturing loans, the DOE steps up for 80 percent of the total amount needed. Private sources fund the other 20 percent. This amounts to free leverage for the venture capitalist's bet, with no downside. Hedge funds historically used massive leverage to generate outsized returns, but if the trade turns against them, that same leverage multiplies their downside and can lead to financial ruin. In the case of the DOE loans or grants, the upside is multiplied and the downside remains the same since the most the equity investor can lose is the original investment.

The proposition is so irresistible that any reasonable person would prefer to back a company that has received a DOE loan or grant than a company that has not. It is this distortion of the market for private capital that will have a stifling effect on innovation, as private capital chases fewer deals and companies that do not have government backing have a harder time attracting private capital. This doesn't mean deals won't get done outside of the energy department's umbrella, but it means fewer deals will be done and at worse terms.

According to Earth2Tech, venture capitalist John Doerr commented on this at the GreenBeat conference earlier this month, saying "If we'd been able to foresee the crash of the market we wouldn't probably have launched a green initiative. Because these ventures really need capital. The only way in which we were lucky I think is that the government stepped in, particularly the Department of Energy. Led by this great administration that put in place these loan guarantees."

Several sources within startup companies seeking DOE loans or grants have admitted that private fundraising is complicated by investor expectations of government support. None would speak publicly due to the sensitivity of the issue and the ongoing application process.

Aptera Motors has struggled this year to raise money to fund production of the Aptera 2e, its innovative aerodynamic electric 3-wheeler, recently laying off 25 percent of its staff to focus on pursuing a DOE loan. According to a source close to the company, "all of the engineers are working on documentation for the DOE loan. Not on the vehicle itself." Another highly placed source at Aptera told Wired.com many potential investors wanted to see approval of the DOE loan before committing to invest.

Startup companies that enjoy DOE support, most notably Tesla Motors and Fisker Automotive, have an extraordinary advantage over potential competitors since they have secured access to capital on very cheap terms. The magnitude of this advantage puts the DOE in the role of kingmaker with the power to vault a small startup with no product on the market—as is the case with Fisker—into a potential global player on the back of government financial support.

As a result, the vibrant and competitive market for ideas chasing venture capital that has been the engine of innovation for decades in the United States is being subordinated to the judgments and political inclinations of a government bureaucracy that has never before wielded such market power.

A potential solution to this problem may seem counter-intuitive. The best way to avoid market distortion would be for the DOE to cast the net more broadly and provide loans and grants to a larger number of companies—which ironically means being less selective. Subject to the existing equity matching requirement, this would allow the private markets to function more effectively in funding a broader range of companies and driving more innovation. Several innovative companies with great potential have been in the DOE pipeline for many months. Perhaps it is time for the DOE to stop playing favorites and start spreading the love.

HOW THE OLIGARCHS AND THEIR POLITICIANS ATTACKED US

HOW WE WERE ATTACKED WITH POLITICAL KILL ORDERS AND STATE-SPONSORED CHARACTER ASSASSINATIONS

WITH JUST A PHONE CALL, WHITE HOUSE STAFFERS CAN "END YOUR LIFE"!

How would you feel if the White House ordered their insiders: David Plouffe, Sid Blumenthal, Robert Gibbs, David Axelrod, David Brock, Fusion GPS, Black Cube and the Denton Scumbag tabloids, to "end your life"?

"How can we prove that those people ordered and financed those attacks against us? - Because we have the emails, texts, financial records, whistle-blowers and other evidence and because we were the only parties on Earth that were attacked by those people, in those ways, at that time, right after we reported their crimes to the authorities..."

The attacks, in bold red print, below, were actually undertaken and documented against the whistle-blower victims here.

POLITICAL KILL ORDERS AND STATE-SPONSORED CHARACTER ASSASSINATIONS

How A Modern Character Assassination and Political "Kill Order" Is Executed By the White House, their Silicon Valley Oligarchs and their total control of propaganda media

Patrick George At Jalopnik attacks outsiders under contract with Elon Musk and the DNC. Silicon Valley campaign finance oligarchs hire him to run hatchet jobs on innocent outsiders and then Gawker-Gizmodo-Jalopnik uses their financial partnership with the DNC's Google to push the character assassination articles to the top of Google web products and searches. Patrick George, Adrian Covert, John Hermann and Nick Cook are the sexually degenerate cabin boys that report to boy-loving sleaze-tabloid oligarch Nick Denton. They created the Fake News crisis in the media by flooding the internet with defamation posts and reprisal hatchet job articles designed to damage political enemies of the Socialists. They coordinate a large number of the character assassination efforts at Gawker, Gizmodo, Jalopnik, CNN, New York Times and other propaganda outlets. These Millennial boys are "Media Rapists" and should be treated as abusers.

How and why did a Donald Trump stripper-date named "Stormy" or an Elon Musk sex party or a Kavanaugh drinking incident or the Moonves and Weinstein indiscretions suddenly hit the news at about the same time in news history?

In addition to actual murder, Politicians and Silicon Valley Oligarchs hire operatives to end people's lives in other creative ways.

It is all part of the modern trend in vendetta, revenge and political payback when a Senator or a tech oligarch issues a "kill order" on an opponent.

The client does not like to get their hands dirty so the actual social hit job is performed by companies such as: IN-Q-Tel - (DNC); Gawker Media - PsyGroup - (DNC); (DNC); Jalopnik - (DNC); Gizmodo Media - (DNC); K2 Intelligence - (DNC); WikiStrat - (DNC); Podesta Group - (DNC); Fusion GPS - (DNC/GOP); Google - (DNC); YouTube - (DNC); Alphabet - (DNC); Facebook - (DNC); Twitter - (DNC); Think Progress - (DNC); Media Matters - (DNC); Black Cube - (DNC); Mossad - (DNC); Correct The Record - (DNC); Sand Line - (DNC/GOP); Blackwater - (DNC/GOP); Stratfor - (DNC/GOP); ShareBlue - (DNC); Wikileaks (DNC/GOP); Cambridge Analytica - (DNC/GOP); Sid Blumenthal- (DNC); David Brock - (DNC); PR Firm Sunshine Sachs (DNC); Covington and Burling - (DNC), BuzzFeed - (DNC) Perkins Coie - (DNC); Wilson Sonsini - (DNC), David Plouffe Associates (DNC), and hundreds of othersâ...!These are the people and companies that except cash, revolving door jobs, political appointments, insider trading stock in Silicon Valley tech companies, prostitutes and real estate in exchange for destroying the lives of others.

These attackers deserve to be punished for the rest of their lives for taking away the lives of others in exchange for cash. Any company who is corrupt enough to hire any of these assassins should be forced out of business. These attack services are responsible for 90% of the "Fake News" problem in the world because they are the authors of most fake news. Congress must act to make these kinds of companies illegal!

These digital assassination services offer hit-jobs, character assassinations and economic reprisal programs to famous billionaires and corrupt politicians who are seeking revenge, retribution and vendetta executions. In the case of reporters getting targeted for attacks, President Donald Trump has been accused by the liberal corporate media of whipping up a hateful frenzy against the press. But while CNNâ... s Jim Acosta grandstands against Trump, real journalists are still reeling from the draconian extrajudicial measures that Barack Obama and his administration used to target them for exposing truth.

This secretive targeting occurred while Obama speechwriter and hate-filled ANTIFA supporter Ben Rhodes was running â... Operation Echo Chamber,â... which reportedly continues, in which he fed information to willing corporate media scribes. â... They literally know nothing,â... Rhodes said of the twentysomething journalists he easily manipulated.

The Freedom of the Press Foundationâ... s Trevor Timm published documents showing how former attorney general Eric Holder changed the rules to more effectively intimidate and surveil members of the press.

Timm writes: â... Today, we are revealingâ... for the first timeâ... the Justice Departmentâ... s rules for targeting journalists with secret FISA court orders. The documents were obtained as part of a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit brought by Freedom of the Press Foundation and Knight First Amendment Institute at Columbia University.â...

Trending: Brennan and Clapper Accused of Hacking John Roberts To Blackmail Him

Obama is also clearly linked to the plot to obtain fraudulent FISA warrants on President Trumpâ... s team, as evidenced by Peter Strzok and Lisa Pageâ... s texts confirming that Obama was overseeing their fly-by-night operation.

Larry Schweikart reported for Big League Politics:

For months pundits and researchers have been pondering the mystery of the FISA approval that led to the illegal and historically titanic scandals to ever hit the U.S. government. Some have argued that Assistant Attorney General Rod Rosenstein knew the FISA was bogus when he extended it. Others have wondered if Special Counsel Robert Mueller knew about the fraudulent basis of the FISA when he used it, in part, to indict Michael Flynn. Other still, that Mueller was fooled by the FBI.

This is what President Trump calls â... SPYGATEâ... .

It may well be that the surveillance that was conducted began with UK intelligence services and then was fed back to the White House of Barack Obama. Hereâ... s the kicker:

President Barack Obama did not need a FISA warrant to authorize spying/electronic surveillance on Trump because Obama all along had legal authorization to by-pass the normal court vetting process. According to 50 U.S. Code 1802, the â... Electronic Surveillance Authorizationâ... () â... Foreign intelligence in relation to a US person (Trump or his associates) is information thatâ... s necessary for the US to protect against attack, hostile acts, sabotage, . . . as well as other clandestine activities by a foreign power . . . OR . . . information relevant to national defense/security of the US, or the conduct of foreign affairs of the U.S.â... Such an authorization by Obama required certification by Attorney General Loretta Lynch that must be logged with the FISC court. (â... The [AG]+ shall immediately transmit under seal to the court [FISC] a copy of his certification.â... )

In short, the DOJ has this. If we are correct, a copy of that certification is currently under seal at least with the DOJ and the FISC.

This is what they are hiding.

However, the Act requires the AG to keep the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Senate Committee on Intelligence informed of these authorizations and unmaskings therein. See 1803 (a) (1) (C) If indeed this is what happened, did Lynch reportâ... or only selectively reportâ... to the committees in a way that excluded non-friendlies? Can you see why Adam Schiff, Mark Warner, and their ilk are terrified?

- 1) Obama authorized spying/electronic surveillance on Team Trump, by-passing normal judicial oversight.
- 2) To create â... foreign intelligence,â... John Brennan and others organized for UK intelligence to conduct surveillance on Trump and his associates, either from the UK or from UK assets within the U.S. This is another reason revealing this will unleash an excrement storm: the UK is about to be caught meddling bigly in an American election.
- 3) Lynch certified Obamaâ... s authorization which is now held under seal by DOJ (and FISC).

From this authorization, all unmaking followed, as well as the FBI fraudulent counter intel investigation and perhaps the FISA warrant too. Obama knew this was all fake when he made the authorization; Lynch knew it was fake when she certified it; the entire inner circle, including the FBI, all knew. This takes the U.S. into uncharted territory, and could imperil any politician in the British government who supported this or had knowledge of it. Proving any of this would be difficult, as if confronted Lynch would almost certainly cover up and Obama would simply deny knowledge. Without a paper trail, a conviction might be a bridge too far. This is only one of thousands of "kill order" tactics introduced by the Obama Administration.

These are the playbook tactics that The White House, Senators and tech oligarchs used to destroy the lives of their political and

business enemies who are the victims herein:

- Government agency bosses solicited the target victims with false promises of future loans, contracts or grants from their agency and caused the target victims to expend millions of dollars and years of their time for projects which those government bosses had covertly promised to their friends. They used the target victims as a "smokescreen" to cover their illegal government slush-funds (Ie: Department of Energy programs and DOT "Autopilot cars") for the victims competitors and personal enemies. By using this tactic, the attackers drain the target victims funds and force them into an economic disaster in plain view of everyone without the government bosses fearing any reprisal for their scam.

- Every match.com, okcupid.com, Plenty Of Fish, Seeking Arrangements and all other IAC-owned, or similar, dating sites (IAC is managed by Hillary Clinton's daughter) have had their profiles, texts, and inter-member communications, since those companies were started, hacked or purchased. The attack service providers use Palantir and In-Q-Tel financed data analysis software to analyze every activity in those dating services in order to find honey-trap, blackmail, sextortion and social conflict exploitation opportunities. If you had a bad date with someone, that someone will be hunted down and convinced to help harm, #metoo or "rape charge" the intended target. All dates involve a search for sex, so the likelihood that a sexual disappointment experience will exist in each persons dating history is high. Searching every past dating email and text of a subject is quite easy with modern software and hacking techniques. A synthetically amplified, PR-agency optimized sex scandal can destroy any target. Your dating experiences from the 70's or 80's will come back to haunt you decades later. Most dates involve drinking alcohol and taking drugs. If you were unattractive or had bad sexual skills your bad date will be called "date rape", "drugging your date for sex" and related twisted narratives that are designed to shame you, the target. If you try to get a date in the future, your potential date will be contacted by a third party who will slander and libel you to make sure your potential first date gets cancelled. Your social life will, essentially, end. Every photo on every dating site is cross checked with every other photo on the internet in order to cull your Facebook, LinkedIn, Snapchat and other social media together to create a total psychological manipulation profile data file on you. A single photo on a dating site can be cross searched on every mugshot archive, photo album and corporate database in the worth within minutes using modern super-computers. Your sex life will be on public record in a flash.

- Social Security, SSI, SDI, Disability and other earned benefits were permanently stone-walled. Applications of targets were "lost". Files in the application process "disappeared". Lois Lerner hard drive "incidents" https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/IRS\_targeting\_controversy are operated in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups in order to run state-sponsored attacks on whistle-blowers.

- Government officials and tech oligarchs contacted members of the National Venture Capital association (NVCA) and created national "black-lists" to blockade target victims from ever receiving investor funding. This was also confirmed in a widely published disclosure by Tesla Motors Daryl Stry and in published testimony. When Silicon Valley political campaign finance oligarchs and their White House insiders black-list you (see the "AngelGate" Scandal and the "Silicon Valley High Tech No Poaching Class Action Lawsuit" cases) you will never get investor funding again.

- Victim's FOIA requests were hidden, frozen, stone-walled, delayed, lied about and only partially responded to in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.

- State and federal employees at agencies have played an endless game of Catch-22 by arbitrarily determining that deadlines had passed that they, the government officials, had stonewalled and obfuscated applications for, in order to force these deadlines that they set, to appear to be missed. This can bankrupt a target victim.

- Some Victims found themselves strangely poisoned, not unlike the Alexander Litvenko case. Heavy metals and toxic materials were found right after their work with the Department of Energy weapons and energy facilities. Many wonder if these targeted former federal employees and contractors were intentionally exposed to toxins in retribution for their testimony. The federal MSDS documents clearly show that a number of these victims were exposed to deadly compounds and radiations, via DOE, without being provided with proper HazMat suits which DOE officials knew were required. California laws say that the victims were "employees" yet the federal agencies they worked for kept trying to call them "contractors" in order to stave off liability. Poisoning whistle-blowers is an age old political practice undertaken by executive officers in State agencies like the D.O.E.

- Victims employers were called, and faxed, and ordered to fire targeted victims from their places of employment, in the middle of the day, with no notice, as a retribution tactic. No legal reason for the firings was ever supplied to the victims.

- On orders from Obama White House officials, DNC-financed Google, YouTube, Gawker Media and Gizmodo Media produce attack articles and defamation videos. DNC-controlled Google locked these attack articles and movies on the internet on the top line, of the front page of all Google and Youtube searches for a decade in front of 7.5 billion people, around the world. This attack-type uses over $40 million dollars in server farms, production costs and internet rigging. The forensic data acquired from tracking some of these attacks proves that Google rigs attacks against individuals on the internet and that all of Google's impressions are manually controlled by Google's executives who are also the main financiers and policy directors of the Obama Administration. This data was provided to the European Union for its ongoing prosecution of Google's political manipulation of public perceptions.

- Victims HR and employment records, on recruiting and hiring databases, were embedded with false negative keywords and coded "red flags" in order to prevent the victim targets from ever gaining future employment. These hacking-like tactics were so sophisticated that only a state-sponsored group could have undertaken such attacks!

- Gary D. Conley, Seth Rich, Rajeev Motwani, Micheal Hastings and many other whistle-blowers in these matters, turned up dead under strange circumstances. It is very possible that some of these attack services, operated by former CIA operatives, offer discrete murder-for-sale services using high-tech assassination tools that make murders look like heart attacks and organ failures.

- Disability and VA complaint hearings and benefits were frozen, delayed, denied or subjected to lost records and "missing hard drives" as in the Lois Lerner case.

- Paypal (A DNC-biased operation) and other on-line payments for on-line sales were de-platformed, delayed, hidden, or re-directed in order to terminate income potential for target victims who competed with the attackers interests and holdings.

- Web server global DNS redirection, "website spoofing" sent target victims websites to dead ends where no sales orders or customer inquiries actually get back to the target victim. These internet revenue activity manipulations are conducted using Google and Amazon servers. All commercial storefronts and on-line sales attempts by target victims, will have had their sites hidden, or search engine de-linked by a massively resourced facility located in Virginia, Texas or Palo Alto, California in order to terminate revenue potentials for the target victims.

- Thousands of hired "trolls", "blogger shells", "botnets" and "synth-blog" deployments were deployed to place defamatory statements and disinformation about victims in front of 7.5 billion people around the world on the internet in order to seek to damage their federal testimony credibility by a massively resourced facility. Many of these click-farms and shill farms are located off-shore but the payments to them, for the attack services, track back to White House contractors and financiers.

- Campaign finance dirty tricks contractors were hired by campaign financiers to attack the friends and family members of the target victims in order to create low morale for the target victims psyche and motivation.

- Electronic attack devices were placed in nearby vehicles and apartments located close to victims. The U.S. Government has now acknowledged that the Cuban, Chinese and other embassy "sonic attacks" are from a known microwave beam weapon. Any one of the technical departments of the attack services listed at the top of this article can build such a biological harassment weapon. It can be aimed at the target victims office, bedroom or vehicle and, within a week, have caused biological and emotional damage using a weapon that has no visible track of trajectory. It is designed to make the target victim think they are "going crazy" or "hearing sounds in their head". While this may sound pretty wild, web search "Embassy sonic attacks" on the top 5 non-Google search engines and read the very credible reports of these attacks.

- In one case covert political partner: Google, transferred large sums of cash to dirty tricks contractors and then manually locked the media portion of the attacks into the top lines of the top pages of all Google searches globally, for years, with hidden embedded codes in the links and web-pages which multiplied the attacks on Victims by many magnitudes.

- The U.S. Patent Office was used as a weapon against victims who had inventions. Covert Cartel financier: Google, placed Google's lawyer: Michelle Lee, in charge of the U.S. Patent Office and she, in turn, stacked all of the U.S. Patent Office IPR and ALICE review boards and offices with Google-supporting employees in order to rig the U.S. Patent Office to protect Google from being prosecuted for the vast patent thefts that Google engages in. Google has hundreds of patent lawsuits for technology theft and a number of those lawsuits refer to Google's operations as "Racketeering", "Monopolistic Cartel" and "Government Coup-like" behaviors. Thousands of articles and investigations detail the fact that Google, essentially, ran the Obama White House and provided over 80% of the key White House staff. A conflict-of-interest unlike any in American history. Google's investors personally told Applicant they would "kill him". Google and the Obama Administration were "the same entity". Applicant testified in the review that got Michelle Lee terminated and uncovered a tactical political and social warfare group inside Google who were financed by Federal and State funds.

- Honeytraps and moles were employed by the attackers. In this tactic, people who covertly worked for the attackers were employed to approach the "target" in order to spy on and misdirect the subject.

- Gawker Media, Gizmodo Media, Snopes, SPLC and other hired media assassins were retained to produce "hatchet job" character assassination articles about victims. Then those articles were faxed, mailed and emailed to the employers and investors of victims with a note saying: "You don't want to have anything to do with this person, do you..?" in order to get victims fired from their job and get their loans or financing pulled. The attackers used the attack media, that they authored, to create an attack designed to end victim's lives via economic warfare.

- Mortgage and rental applications for victims had red flags added to them in databases to prevent the targets from getting homes or apartments.

- Krebs On Security, Wired, Ars Technica, The Wall Street Journal and most major IT publications have reported that hundreds of spy "back-doors" have been found on every Intel, AMD, Apple, Xfinity, Cisco, Microsoft, Juniper Networks motherboard, chip-set and hardware component set. This means that any kid with the "key" code can open any computer, server, router, cloud-network or other network connected device and read every file, photo, video, your calendar and email on your devices at any time from any location on Earth. The key codes have been released to every hacker community in the world for over ten years. There is now no government, corporate or personal data that can't be hacked, even data from decades ago. Every single one of your darkest secrets can be in the hands of your enemy within 60 minutes, or less. Important meetings you had planned with potential investors, employers, clients, dates, suppliers and others will suddenly get cancelled at the last minute. They will get cancelled because your enemies are reading your calendar remotely and covertly sending slander information to those you had hoped to engage with in order to sabotage your life. Nothing you have ever typed on a computer or Smartphone is safe. it WILL be acquired and it WILL be used against you. This WAS DONE to the victims by a sophisticated hacking effort.

- McCarthy-Era type "Black-lists" were created and employed against target victims who competed with Obama Administration executives and their campaign financiers to prevent them from getting funding and future employment.

- The victims were very carefully manipulated into a position of not being able to get jobs, unemployment benefits, disability benefits or acquire any possible sources of income. The retribution tactics were audacious, overt..and quite illegal.

- There are thousands of additional Dirty Tricks tactics being used by these Attack Services yet Congress refuses to pass laws out-lawing such attack services. The cost of an attack on a person ranges from $150,000.00 to over $50,000,000.00. While a Silicon Valley billionaire can afford to launch counter-measures to these attacks, any regular taxpayer will be utterly destroyed, and incapable of fighting back, against even the smallest version of one of these "kill orders". A number of modern office shootings are the results of these attacks against an individual who has lost everything because of the attack and has no options left.

Federal law enforcement, the United States Congress and the highest level investigators in the U.S., and abroad, have documented (per the â... FISA Memoâ... , Congressional Reports and federal employee testimony) and proven the fact that the Obama Administration regularly engaged in the operation of retribution, vendetta and reprisal campaigns known as â... hit-jobsâ... against domestic natural born U.S. citizen domestic taxpayers. The Federal Court, in at least one previous court case, has ruled that Applicants, in this particular matter, were the victims and target of a number of these attacks designed to inflict permanent medical, emotional, character assassination, brand negation, economic and career damage.

!!!! Mueller Hears That Silicon Valley Has Been Manipulating The Entire BREXIT Campaign using covert Opposition tactics !!!!!

- Second former employee of controversial data firm to be questioned by special counselâ€¦ s inquiry into Russia collusion

By Carole Cadwalladr

Brittany Kaiser is said to be cooperating fully with the Mueller inquiry.

A director of the controversial data company Cambridge Analytica, who appeared with Arron Banks at the launch of the Leave.EU campaign, has been subpoenaed by the US investigation into possible collusion between the Trump campaign and the Russian government.

A spokesman for Brittany Kaiser, former business development director for Cambridge Analytica â... which collapsed after the Observer revealed details of its misuse of Facebook data â... confirmed that she had been subpoenaed by special counsel Robert Mueller, and was cooperating fully with his investigation.

He added that she was assisting other US congressional and legal investigations into the companyâ... s activities and had voluntarily turned over documents and data.

Kaiser, who gave evidence to the UK parliament last April in which she claimed Cambridge Analytica had carried out in-depth work for Leave.EU, is the second individual connected to the firm subpoenaed by the special counsel. The Electoral Commission has said its investigation into Leave.EU found no evidence that the campaign â... received donations or paid for services from Cambridge Analytica â...!beyond initial scoping workâ... .

Damian Collins, chairman of parliamentâ... s inquiry into fake news, said it was â... no surpriseâ... that Kaiser was under scrutiny by Mueller because â... her work connected her to WikiLeaks, Cambridge Analytica and [its parent company] SCL, the Trump campaign, Leave.EU and Arron Banksâ... .

He said it was now vital Britain had its own inquiry into foreign interference: â... We should not be leaving this to the Americans.â...

Tom Watson, the deputy leader of the Labour party, echoed Collinsâ... s statement, saying: â... This is the first evidence that a significant player in the Leave.EU campaign is of interest to the global Mueller inquiry. People will be bewildered that the British government has no interest in establishing the facts of what happened.â...

In August, Sam Patten, a US political consultant who had worked for Cambridge Analytica on campaigns in the US and abroad, struck a plea deal with Mueller after admitting he had failed to register as a foreign agent for a Ukrainian oligarch.

He became a subject of the special counselâ... s inquiry because of work done with Paul Manafort, Trumpâ... s campaign manager, in Ukraine. He had also set up a business with Konstantin Kilimnik, a key figure who Mueller has alleged has ties to Russian intelligence and who is facing charges of obstruction of justice. In a 2017 statement to the Washington Post, Kilimnik denied any connection to intelligence services. Kaiser, however, is the first person connected directly to both the Brexit and Trump campaigns known to have been questioned by Mueller.

The news came to light in a new Netflix documentary, The Great Hack, which premiered at the Sundance film festival last month and is expected to be released later this spring. Film-makers followed Kaiser for months after she approached the Guardian, including moments after she received the subpoena. She claims the summons came after the Guardian revealed she had visited WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange while still a Cambridge Analytica employee in February 2017, three months after the US election.

One part of Muellerâ... s investigation focuses on whether the Trump campaign sought to influence the timing of the release of emails by WikiLeaks before the election. Investigators are looking at communications between them. In the film, Kaiser says that she has gone from being a cooperating witness to a subject of investigation because of her contact with Assange.

In October 2017, it was revealed that Alexander Nix, the chief executive of Cambridge Analytica, had contacted Assange in August 2016 to try to obtain emails from Hillary Clinton's presidential campaign which indictments from Mueller's team say were obtained by Russian military intelligence to use in Donald Trump's campaign. When Kaiser gave evidence to parliament last year, she was asked about her relationship with Assange and WikiLeaks but failed to reveal that she had met Assange.

In the documentary, Kaiser is shown after receiving an email from the Guardian last June asking about meeting Assange and alleged donations of cryptocurrency to WikiLeaks. Kaiser did not respond to the email at the time, but on camera says: "She knows I met Assange. And she knows I donated money to WikiLeaks in bitcoin."

Her legal representatives later wrote to the paper to say that the allegations, including that she had channelled donations to WikiLeaks, were false. Kaiser said she had received a small gift of bitcoin in 2011 long before she worked at Cambridge Analytica and, not knowing what else to do with it, gave it to WikiLeaks, because she had benefited from material it had released over the years.

Her lawyer told the Observer that the meeting with Assange came about after a chance encounter in London with an acquaintance who knew him. It lasted 20 minutes and consisted mainly of Assange telling her about how he saw the world. He said they did not discuss the US election.

Patten and Kaiser were involved in a controversial election campaign in Nigeria in January 2015, which former Cambridge Analytica employees say had unsettling parallels to the US presidential election.

The Guardian revealed that the data firm had worked alongside a team of unidentified Israeli intelligence operatives on the campaign. Ex-Cambridge Analytica employees described how the Israelis hacked the now-president of Nigeria's emails and released damaging information about him to the press weeks before the election.

CBS NEWS 60 MINUTES Lara Logan "I'm Being Targeted For Saying the Media is Mostly Liberal"

by Tamar Auber

On Wednesday, former CBS News foreign correspondent Lara Logan spoke with Fox News Sean Hannity about her recent comments slamming the media as "mostly liberal."

Logan told Breitbart podcaster Mike Ritland the remarks made on his show which drew widespread attention online amounted to "professional suicide."

Defending her remarks on Hannity's show, Logan said that as the result of her speaking out about how the media is "mostly liberal" she has been targeted because she is an independent voice.

"Any journalists who are not beating the same drum and giving the same talking points," she insisted "pay the price" for not going along with the liberal crowd.

She also called out her targeters by name.

"I know they're going to come after me," she told Hannity. "Michael Calderone who is at the Huffington Post. I can give you the script now. I can tell you who the players are. Joe Hagan. Brian Stelter."

She added: "They smear you personally. They go after your integrity. They go after your reputation as a person and a professional. They will stop at nothing. I am not the only one. And I am just, I am done, right, I am tired of it. And they do not get to write my story anymore. They donâ... t get to speak for me, I want to say loudly and clearly to anybody who is listening, I am not owned. Nobody owns me, right? Iâ... m not owned by the left or the right.â...

Logan made headlines recently when, during a scorched earth podcast interview with Ritland, she said that there was a lot of â... weightâ... in most news organizations on â... one side of the political spectrum.â...

â... The media everywhere is mostly liberal. But in this country, 85 percent of journalists are registered Democrats. So thatâ... s just a fact, right?â... she told Ritland.

She also trashed reporting based on single, anonymous government sources.

â... Thatâ... s not journalism, thatâ... s horseshit,â... Logan stressed. â... Responsibility for fake news begins with us. We bear some responsibility for that, and weâ... re not taking ownership of that and addressing it. We just want to blame it all on somebody else.â...

MEET THE ATTACKERS CALLED: Psy-Group

Internal documents from a private Israeli intelligence firm called Psy-Group show that, at the time of many incidents, the company, and possibly other private investigators, were targeting U.S. citizens because they spoke up about crimes.

Psy-Groupâ... s intelligence and influence operations, which included a failed attempt in the summer of 2017 to sway a local election in central California, were detailed in a New Yorker investigation that I co-wrote earlier this month. Before it went out of business (ie: changed it's name) , last year, Psy-Group was part of a new wave of private-intelligence firms that recruited from the ranks of Israelâ... s secret services and described themselves as â... private Mossads.â... Psy-Group initially stood out among its rivals because it didnâ... t just gather intelligence; its operatives used false identities, or avatars, to covertly spread messages in an attempt to influence what people believed and how they behaved. In 2016, Psy-Group held discussions with the Trump campaign and others about conducting covert â... influenceâ... operations to benefit the candidate. Psy-Groupâ... s founder and C.E.O., Royi Burstien, a veteran Israeli intelligence officer who established the firm in 2014, told me that his talks with the Trump campaign went nowhere. The companyâ... s posturing, however, attracted the attention of Robert Mueller, the special counsel, who has been investigating interference in the 2016 Presidential race.'

FED BOMBHELL: Fusion GPS Bribed Dozens of MSM Journalists With Cash To Run Character Assassinations, While News Companies Paid Firm to Dig Dirt on Trump

High-ranking FBI insiders are pulling back the curtain on Fusion GPS, the firm that commissioned and spread the bogus Trump dossier.

It appears the embattled intelligence firm was quite busy paying off Big Media reporters, according to federal sources who have traced dozens of transactions between TD Bank and media members as well as media organizations, sources confirm.

But stunningly, Big Media organizations have employed Fusion GPS to dig dirt on politicians and D.C.â... s elite â... namely Donald Trump.

â... Fusion GPS was on the payroll of the media and in turn had members of the media on its payroll,â... one FBI insider said.

Bombshell revelations.

FBI insiders confirm Fusion GPS employed law firms as well as shell companies to send and receive funds to and from media and reporters. But the embattled firm also used its accounts at TD Bank to directly commission reporters. Likewise, Fusion GPS received funds from media companies into its own accounts at TD Bank, FBI insiders said, â... There are dozens of payments from the media flowing into their (Fusion GPSâ... ) account,â... one federal law enforcement official said. â... One company wired funds to Fusion (GPS) more than a dozen times.â...

Why would media companies commission Fusion GPS? Likely to dig dirt on enemies or secure records that reporters could not legally obtain, one federal law enforcement insider said. One FBI insider said the payments to Fusion GPS coincide with Donald Trumpâ... s run for the White House.

The payments were made between Sept. 2015 and Sept. 2017, records show.

The unthinkable: The mainstream media paying Fusion GPS for dirt on Trump to the same firm the Democratic National Committee paid to fund the bogus Trump dossier. And at the same time Fusion GPS bribing journalists to place stories â... likely negative about Trump, as well as spread the bogus Trump dossier around.

Stunning.

Was BuzzFeed â... the only company to publish the full bogus dossier â... on that list?

And who is on the payroll? We are trying to run that information down.

And why arenâ... t these people behind bars?

The California DMV Is Making $50M a Year Selling Driversâ... Personal Information To Your Enemies

A document obtained by Motherboard shows how DMVs sell peopleâ... s names, addresses, and other personal information to generate revenue.

by Joseph Cox

The California Department of Motor Vehicles is generating revenue of $50,000,000 a year through selling drivers' personal information, according to a DMV document obtained by Motherboard.

DMVs across the country are selling data that drivers are required to provide to the organization in order to obtain a license. This information includes names, physical addresses, and car registration information. California's sales come from a state which generally scrutinizes privacy to a higher degree than the rest of the country.

In a public record acts request, Motherboard asked the California DMV for the total dollar amounts paid by commercial requesters of data for the past six years. The responsive document shows the total revenue in financial year 2013/14 as $41,562,735, before steadily climbing to $52,048,236 in the financial year 2017/18.

The document doesn't name the commercial requesters, but some specific companies appeared frequently in Motherboard's earlier investigation that looked at DMVs across the country. They included data broker LexisNexis and consumer credit reporting agency Experian. Motherboard also found DMVs sold information to private investigators, including those who are hired to find out if a spouse is cheating. It is unclear if the California DMV has recently sold data to these sorts of entities.

In an email to Motherboard, the California DMV said that requesters may also include insurance companies, vehicle manufacturers, and prospective employers.

Asked if the sale of this data was essential to the DMV, Marty Greenstein, public information officer at the California DMV, wrote that its sale furthers objectives related to highway and public safety, "including availability of insurance, risk assessment, vehicle safety recalls, traffic studies, emissions research, background checks, and for pre- and existing employment purposes."

"The DMV takes its obligation to protect personal information very seriously. Information is only released pursuant to legislative direction, and the DMV continues to review its release practices to ensure information is only released to authorized persons/entities and only for authorized purposes. The DMV also audits requesters to ensure proper audit logs are maintained and that employees are trained in the protection of DMV information and anyone having access to this information sign a security document," Greenstein wrote.

Do you know anything else about data selling? We'd love to hear from you. Using a non-work phone or computer, you can contact Joseph Cox securely on Signal on +44 20 8133 5190, Wickr on josephcox, OTR chat on jfcx@jabber.ccc.de, or email joseph.cox@vice.com.

Multiple other DMVs around the U.S. previously confirmed to Motherboard that they have cut-off data access for some commercial requesters after they abused the data.

One of the main pieces of legislation that governs the sale of DMV data stemmed from a case in California. Lawmakers introduced the Driver's Privacy Protection Act (DPPA) in 1994 after a private investigator hired by a stalker obtained the address of actress Rebecca Schaeffer from the DMV. The stalker went on to kill Schaeffer. The DPPA was designed to restrict access to DMV data, but included a wide array of exemptions, including for private investigators.

After Motherboard's earlier investigation, senators and digital privacy experts criticized the sale of DMV data, and some said the law should be changed. Senator and Democratic Presidential candidate Bernie Sanders said DMVs should not profit from such information.

An attack ad will generally unfairly criticize an opponent's political platform, usually by pointing out its faults.

THE SPIES THAT POLITICIANS AND OLIGARCHS HIRE TO END YOUR LIFE - "THEY SENT THEM AFTER ME!"

- Stella Penn Pechanac worked for a Mossad-linked Israeli intelligence company
- Weinstein hired the firm just months before sexual allegations ruined his career
- But Stella told the actress she was executive at London asset management firm

By Adam Luck And Ben Lazarus For The Mail On Sunday

With her long blonde hair, catwalk figure and dazzling smile, it's easy to believe that Stella Penn Pechanac could have been one of the victims of disgraced Hollywood mogul Harvey Weinstein.

Indeed, that's exactly what she told New York Magazine writer Ben Wallace when she introduced herself as 'Anna' with another terrible story about the influential producer.

However, with his journalist's instinct, Wallace smelled a rat.

Stella Penn Pechanac (pictured) was a spy working for the infamous Mossad-linked Israeli intelligence company Black Cube

This was 2016, well before the #MeToo scandal emerged, and even Wallace's colleagues had no idea he was investigating claims of sexual harassment against Weinstein.

When they met for coffee, 'Anna' confided she had had an affair with Weinstein that had ended badly.

But there was something about her story that didn't quite ring true. She seemed far more concerned, in fact, with asking questions about other Weinstein victims than her own story.

Call it paranoia, but Wallace had a sneaking suspicion she was recording him.

However, Rose McGowan, the actress who first accused Weinstein of rape, was rather more easily fooled.

Stella's plausible manner and hard-to-place European accent convinced the actress that she was Diana Filip, an executive from London asset management firm Reuben Capital Partners, who wanted to invite McGowan to speak at a gala dinner.

She befriended actress Rose McGowan (alongside Harvey Weinstein in 2007) after telling her that she was an executive from a London asset management firm who wanted to invite her to speak at a gala dinner

Over the course of several months, 'Diana' inveigled her way into the Scream star's life. Whether McGowan was in California or New York, Diana always seemed to be conveniently nearby.

They met for long walks, drinks and girls' nights out. McGowan even told her 'there was no one else in the world she could trust'.

But it was all a con. Just like Anna, Diana was merely a cover dreamed up by Stella, a spy working for the infamous Mossad-linked Israeli intelligence company Black Cube.

Weinstein had hired the firm in the months before his career and reputation were ruined by a welter of sexual allegations.

An extraordinary contract, dated July 11, 2017, between the mogul's lawyers and the British arm of the Israeli firm show that Weinstein had tasked Black Cube with two primary objectives: to 'provide intelligence which will help the Client's efforts to completely stop the publication of a new, negative article in a leading NY newspaper', and to 'obtain additional content of a book which is currently being written and which includes harmful negative information on and about the Client'.

To achieve this, Black Cube promised a dedicated team. As part of the operation, codenamed Parachute, the organisation introduced Stella to Weinstein.

Her main objective was to befriend McGowan, obtain a draft of her memoir â... and discredit it. And she was tasked with finding out about and blocking other allegations about Weinstein â... just like the stories Ben Wallace was working on.

Stella, now 36, went undercover to meet a worker in a bank that had been critical of a Black Cube client but she has since turned her back on the world of espionage

In late 2017, Weinstein met three Black Cube operatives in the back room of a New York restaurant. There, one of the agents told Weinstein 'we got something good for you'.

After a short pause, a woman with long blonde hair and high cheekbones stepped forward and introduced herself as Anna.

She read passages from McGowan's upcoming book. Listening in a state of shock, Weinstein muttered repeatedly: 'Oh my God.'

Today, Stella Penn Pechanac has left her lucrative job at Black Cube and claims to have turned her back on the murky world of espionage.

She is pregnant with her second child and, in an exclusive interview with The Mail on Sunday, has agreed to lay bare her extraordinary and disturbing double life as an agent for hire.

It is clear from the first moment that Stella is ideal spy material. She comes across as open, engaging and honest, with an unwavering gaze and a seemingly puncture-proof self-confidence.

The first thing she wants to make clear is that she was never involved in any honeytraps.

'I was never a Bond girl,' she insists.

'I was James.'

So how did she come to be a central figure in the most explosive scandal ever to grip Hollywood?

'I acted for years, I spoke five languages, and I travelled a lot,' she says.

'They approached me.'

If that seems unlikely, consider that Black Cube was set up by former Israeli intelligence officers in 2010 and is known for its links with the feared Mossad intelligence service.

Consider also that Stella's fractured background could have been dreamed up by John le Carré: she was born in Sarajevo into a mixed Muslim/Orthodox Christian family that had sheltered Jewish Yugoslavs during the Holocaust. Her grandfather perished in a concentration camp.

Her family converted to Judaism and escaped the bloody Balkans civil war in 1994 and Stella volunteered for the Israeli Defence Force as soon as she turned 18, rising to lieutenant in the air force.

She graduated from an elite Israeli university and went to drama school before joining Black Cube. Although there appear to be puzzling gaps in her CV, she doesn't admit to any previous intelligence training.

However, she did divulge it was the ex-Israeli premier Ehud Barak who put Weinstein's lawyers in touch with the firm.

'The company received the project, examined it, found it legitimate,' Stella says.

'Weinstein was respected, everyone wanted to work for him, with him. We had this new project, it was like a big deal, a huge client coming in. He was facing serious allegations, and there were suspicions there was a negative campaign against him.

'I've worked on cases like this before so it was just another of those, a commercial negative campaign but on a much bigger scale because of Weinstein.'

Stella, 36, is eager to stress that Black Cube field agents usually do not meet the clients, but in this case Weinstein insisted on seeing her face-to-face. The initial meeting, she says, gave her a rare insight into the disgraced titan.

'He was 100 per cent sure people were out to get him,' she says.

'So when I met him, contrary to the huge reputation he had â... how powerful, strong, dominant he had been portrayed â... he was vulnerable.

'He was saying, 'Someone out there is trying to get me, I need your help and everything they are saying is a bunch of lies. I have never done anything that is not consensual. Someone is trying to ruin me, my business, my family and I need to find out who that is.'

Weinstein must have been happy with the meeting and the material Stella and her team subsequently produced. The former head of Miramax went on to spend more than Â£1million with Black Cube to protect his reputation.

Stella sees her efforts as a professional job aimed at protecting her client. Some of those at the other end of Black Cube's techniques, however, describe a sinister and complex web designed to ensnare and cripple those fighting him.

Key witnesses have had their reputations badly damaged since the Weinstein allegations first surfaced, while journalists working on the story have been intimidated.

Ronan Farrow, the writer who broke the Weinstein story, details in his book Catch And Kill how the 67-year-old mogul's intimidation tactics left him so frightened that friends advised him to buy a gun.

He was so certain his calls and emails were being monitored he took to communicating with an encrypted messaging app and only connected to the internet through anonymous wi-fi hotspots.

Farrow was so worried that he asked a rival Israeli spy firm what to do if he was being followed by a Black Cube operative. The man replied: 'Just start running.'

The campaign certainly seems to have been successful. Several high-profile cases against Weinstein, including those by actress Ashley Judd and Hollywood producer Lucia Evans, have been struck out.

Weinstein's legal team, led by Donna Rotunno, nicknamed the Bulldog, are confident of getting their client off when his trial on five counts of sexual assault and rape begins on January 6.

Faced with the prospect of potentially spending the rest of his life behind bars, it is no surprise Weinstein turned to Black Cube to save him. But just how does it operate?

Stella explains that every mission begins with a team brain-storming session, but that the field operative always has the final say.

'You are involved in the think-tank process. No one is going to tell you to be a brain surgeon if you cannot hold that cover,' she adds.

'The team builds the operation and does the analysis and research, and the psychologists build the psychological profile of the person you are supposed to meet.

'Then they bring in the agent, present them with different options and see what works best.'

Recalling her approach to Rose McGowan using the identity Diana Filip, Stella says: 'At that point it was just another cover. It has to be really in-depth, you have to know the role really well and the character really well. Essentially it is all just theatre, right?'

The former agent does not appear to recognise that her approach may have been immoral.

Indeed, during a two-hour interview, Stella only betrays her discomfort once and that is when she is asked what she would think of someone approaching her daughter in the same manner that she approached McGowan.

After a jarringly long pause, the former field agent calmly recovers her equilibrium and says: 'You are not meeting them in order to do anything wrong or harmful to themâ...! in 99 per cent of projects I reveal the bad guys.'

When asked whether this was true in the Weinstein case, she confidently replies: 'Me talking to someone is not harmful. I am just extracting information.'

McGowan, however, was distraught to discover that a woman she regarded as a friend was actually an agent working for Weinstein.

'Everyone lied to me all the time,' she said later.

'I've lived inside a mirrored fun house.' She is now suing Weinstein and Black Cube over what she describes as an attempt to smear and defraud her.

So was Stella acting during her 'friendship' with the actress? 'In a lot of aspects we are very much alike, so the connections were very real,' she says, seemingly unable to comprehend why her actions would appear distasteful to most people.

'In a parallel universe, in a different dimension, in different circumstances, we really could have been friends because although the circumstances wereâ...! a lieâ...! the human aspect was very authentic.'

Stella claims that her traumatic childhood in war-torn Sarajevo gave her the ability to have empathy for her targets like McGowan.

'The only way I can get to people and get into their heads is by empathy and you cannot fake that. The empathy is real even if the circumstances are tricky.'

But no matter how many mental blocks she has put up to rid herself of any feelings of guilt, there is no doubt her actions with McGowan were truly questionable. And she was not the only one in the Black Cube cast of actors.

Briton Seth Freedman, a one-time Guardian journalist and a former equities broker, who spent time in the Israel Defence Forces, told The Mail on Sunday that he, too, was tasked with 'finding out who was talking to the press'.

Freedman had some success with McGowan. He used the cover story of being a journalist working on an article about Hollywood to convince McGowan's literary agent to encourage the star to speak to him.

There followed a 75-minute call in which she believed she was talking to a concerned British journalist and revealed information about her accusations against Weinstein.

Freedman denies he was involved in any black ops against Weinstein's victims.

'The line that is always used is Black Cube are hired to investigate, harass and silence victims,' he says. 'I wasn't hired to do any of these things.'

Just like Stella, Freedman was unmasked by Farrow and no longer works for Black Cube.

Stella claims she left the firm in June for personal reasons.

'Being a mother changed my priorities, the risk assessment, everything,' she says.

'You cannot do the job with small children. The universe sends you clues and that was mine.'

So what would she say to McGowan today?

'I think she is very brave, very strong, and I am very supportive of what she was doing,' she says, smiling.

'I am sorry if she ever felt betrayed or hurt by anything that I had to do. I am sorry that I was another person in her life that was there under false pretences. My goal was never to hurt her.'

As with everything she says over the course of the interview, it is impossible to tell whether the trained spy is lying or not.

Regardless, it is perhaps a little too late for apologies.

Mr Weinstein's attorneys said in a statement: 'Mr. Weinstein had a right to examine any claims against him to attempt to prove they were false, as anyone facing false allegations would do.'

'The firm is a recognized investigative agency that was referred by the largest law firm in the world devoted solely to business litigation and arbitration. In addition, the research that was done was more comprehensive than so much of the fiction dreamed up for [Ronan Farrow's] book.'

HOW THE WHITE HOUSE AND FEDERAL AGENCIES RUN HIT-JOBS ON CITIZENS

When you report a public agency corruption crime, as Plaintiff did, that is taking place in the US. Government, over 200 companies can be, and are, hired by the White House, Congress-people and agency bosses to attack you in reprisal. These services, contracted by the White House â... Plumbersâ... include the provision of such attacks as: Bribery of contracting officers and agents to damage competitors and only award the bad guys; Internet server manipulation and website spoofing. Manipulation of online payment transaction systems to cut off competitors revenue; Job database manipulation and slander to cut off employment options for competitors or witnesses; Hacking of competitors/witnesses devices; Theft of patent materials; Threats and possible murders of whistle-blowers;Â Ordering crony's and allies to black-list competitors/witnesses; Bribery of public officials to direct funds and contracts to them and away from competitors/witnesses competing products; Production of media character assassination campaigns; Embezzlement; Placement of sabotage moles, working for them, in competitors/witnesses companies to sabotage their plans and report internal data to competitors; Honey traps; DNS re-routing of all internet connections of competitors/witnesses and hundreds of other Dirty Tricks political reprisal operations.

Â David D. Kirkpatrick has detailed â... The Dirty Secrets of a Smear Campaignâ... in a recent report. These are the same kinds of attack tactics used against Plaintiff by US. Federal officials.

Rumors destroyed Hazim Nadaâ... s company. Then hackers handed him terabytes of files exposing a covert campaign against himâ... and the culprit wasnâ... t a rival but an entire country. In the summer of 2017, Hazim Nada, a thirty-four-year-old American living in Como, Italy, received an automated text message from his mobile-phone carrier: How was our customer service? Puzzled, he called a friend at the company. Someone impersonating Nada had obtained copies of his call history. A few weeks later, his account manager at Credit Suisse alerted him that an impostor who sounded nothing like Nadaâ... he has a slightly nasal, almost childlike voiceâ... had phoned and asked for banking details. â... I started to feel like somebody was trying to scam me,â... Nada told me.

Nada was the founder of a nine-year-old commodities-trading business, Lord Energy. The â... Lordâ... stood for â... liquid or dry,â... because the company shipped both crude oil and such drygoods as cement and corn. He had carved out a lucrative niche by establishing unconventional routes: Libya to Korea, Gabon to Italy. By the summer of 2017, Lord Energy, which was based in Lugano, a Swiss city across the border from Como, had a satellite office in Singapore, another opening in Houston, and annual revenue approaching two billion dollars.

Nada, whose parents emigrated from Egypt and Syria, is tall and slender, with curly dark hair thatâ... s neat at the sides and unruly on top. Heâ... d recently married a Saudi woman he met while she was vacationing with her family in Switzerland. They now had a daughter, and were renovating a historic Liberty-style mansion that sat on a wooded hill overlooking Lake Como. The propertyâ... s sweeping views and hillside swimming pool were so spectacular that George Clooneyâ... a neighborâ... had filmed a Nespresso commercial there, along with Jack Black and various glamorous women; the adâ... s running gag was the preposterous decadence of the setting. As a hobby, Nada had earned a pilotâ... s license and also taken up skydiving. That March, he had opened a second business, outside Milan: a vertical wind tunnel, which the Italian military and the United States Air Force used to train paratroopers.

Though Nada enjoyed his success, he sometimes worried that his life lacked mission, especially when he compared himself with his father, Youssef, then eighty-six. Youssef had joined the Muslim Brotherhood, the original Islamist movement, as a teen-ager in Alexandria, in 1947, during the groupâ... s founding decades. He never engaged in violence, not even in the riots preceding the 1952 coup that deposed Egyptâ... s British-backed monarchy. But, as the coupâ... s leaders consolidated their power, they jailed thousands of Brotherhood members, including Youssef. He spent two years in prison, went into exile, and amassed a fortune in businessâ... in Libya, Austria, the United States, and finally in Switzerland. He founded a bank that, following Islamic tradition, did not charge conventional interest, and he became a major donor to and an international emissary for the Brotherhood. He liked to call himself the movementâ... s foreign minister.

Hazim, in contrast, was planted firmly in the West. Born in Silver Spring, Maryland, he was bored by politics, casual about religion, proud of his American identity, and a fan of nineties hip-hop. He visited Egypt once, then never wanted to return. Hazimâ... s passion was theoretical physics. After graduating from Rutgers, heâ... d received a masterâ... s in physics at Cambridge University and a doctorate in applied math at Imperial College London. Oil trading had started as a side gig: his fatherâ... s business empire had fallen apart while Hazim was at Rutgers, and he traded commodities to pay for his graduate studies. Now oil had made Hazim richer than physics ever could have. He still missed research, and he daydreamed about going into the electric-vehicle business, partly to atone for shipping so much planet-warming fuel. But, before those suspicious calls started, his most pressing problem was an invasion of wild boars onto his property. He hunted them with a crossbow.

In the fall of 2017, there was another deceptive call. A man pretending to represent Citibank contacted Nadaâ... s company and requested banking information about Lord Energy, claiming that he wanted to process a payment. Then, that December, the company unexpectedly appeared in a gossip online publication called Africa Intelligence. The item was ostensibly about a delay in a Lord Energy tankerâ... s departure from Algeria. Nada had kept the tanker anchored for minor repairs, but Africa Intelligence said that Algerian authorities had blocked it. Odder still, the article insinuated that the delay was linked to the implosion of his fatherâ... s bank, after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001.

Youssef Nada and other Brotherhood leaders had long condemned the use of violenceâ... indeed, the militants of Al Qaeda had denounced them as timid. But the Brotherhood did give rhetorical support to the Palestinian group Hamas, describing its fight against Israel as legitimate resistance, and the Egyptian strongman Hosni Mubarak had cited this as evidence that the Brotherhood was itself a terrorist group. Youssef Nada, the Egyptians argued, was essentially Osama bin Laden in a bankerâ... s suit. After 9/11, the U.S. government, too, adopted this view of Youssef Nada. President George W. Bush publicly accused him of helping Al Qaeda â... shift money around the world.â... Switzerland and the European Union imposed sanctions. Police searched his home. Financial institutions froze his assets. His fortune collapsed.

For more than a decade, Youssef fought to clear his name. He won a libel suit against a journalist at an Italian newspaper who had accused him of financially supporting Hamas. Dick Marty, a former Swiss senator and prosecutor, conducted an investigation of the sanctions against Youssef, and in 2007 he concluded that the blacklisting had been â... totally arbitraryâ... and â... Kafkaesque.â... Five years later, a European court ruled that the Swiss restrictions on Nada had baselessly violated his human rights. On February 26, 2015, the U.S. Treasury Department removed him from its roster of â... Global Terrorists,â... telling him in a terse letter that the â... circumstances resulting in your designation . . . no longer apply.â...

When Hazim Nada started Lord Energy, in 2008, he was forced to prove to each banker he met that his venture bore no connection to his father. Africa Intelligence now portrayed Lord Energy as a new incarnation of the family business. Throughout the â... legal marathonâ... over the terrorism charges, the publication asserted, â... the Nada family continued to operate its commercial activitiesâ... â... including trading Algerian oil.

Hazim assumed that a competitor had planted the item. But soon other wild allegations began appearingâ... too many to be chalked up to industry chatter. On January 5, 2018, Sylvain Besson, a journalist who had written a book purporting to tie Youssef Nada to a supposed Islamist conspiracy, published an article, in the Geneva newspaper Le Temps, claiming that Lord Energy was a cover for a Muslim Brotherhood cell. â... The children of the historical leaders of the organization have recycled themselves in oil and gas,â...

Besson wrote. A new item in Africa Intelligence hinted darkly that Lord Energy employees had â... been active in the political-religious sphere.â... Headlines sprang up on Web sites, such as Medium, that had little editorial oversight: â... Lord Energy: The Mysterious Company Linking Al-Qaeda and the Muslim Brotherhoodâ... ; â... Compliance: Muslim Brotherhood Trading Company Lord Energy Linked to Credit Suisse.â... A Wikipedia entry for Lord Energy suddenly included descriptions of alleged ties to terrorism.

Six months after the first Africa Intelligence item, World-Check, a database that banks rely on to vet customers, listed both Hazim and Lord Energy under the risk category â... Terrorism.â... Five financial institutions walked away from negotiations with Nada. UBS cancelled his personal checking accountâ... and his motherâ... s, too.

Nine days later, World-Check deleted the listing. â... An error was made,â... a lawyer for the company wrote to Nada, offering a â... letter of apologyâ... that he could show to lenders. But the damage had been done. In December, 2018, his longtime bankers at Credit Suisse stopped doing business with Lord Energy.

Dick Marty, the former Swiss prosecutor, accompanied Nada to the office of a UBS regional manager to try to clear up the matter. The manager, whose desk was covered with printouts of the incendiary articles and Web posts, told them that the mere appearance of a terrorism link was too much for the bank, regardless of the truth. A campaign of unproven allegations had ruined Nadaâ... s father, Marty thought, and now the same thing was happening to Hazim. But although Marty knew why Mubarak loathed Youssef, he couldnâ... t understand the targeting of Hazim. â... He is not the fanatical type,â... Marty told me.

Lord Energy, unable to finance its shipments, laid off its employees. Nada was so distraught that he couldnâ... t sleep. One night, he took a pill for his insomnia, but its effect was short-lived, and he woke to a panic attack, shivering and shaking. â... I was running around, screaming like a madman for about six hours,â... he told me. When his family took him to a hospital, he said, â... the doctor sedated me like an elephant.â...

Panic attacks kept coming for months. â... I had creditors running after me from all across the worldâ... the U.S., South Korea, Gabon, you name it,â... he said. â... It was horrible.â... That April, Lord Energy ceased operations and sought bankruptcy protection.

Nada complained to the Swiss police that someone was orchestrating a campaign to defame him. After a cursory investigation, an officer met with him to explain why the department was closing the matter. When the officer left the room for a few minutes, Nada found himself alone with the case file. Desperate for answers, he riffled through it. The officer had written notes dismissing him as paranoid, Nada told me. (The local police and prosecutor declined to comment.) But the police had also obtained copies of requests for records about Lord Energy and a local mosque. Both had been filed by a Geneva-based private intelligence firm, Alp Services.

Alp is the creation of Mario Brero, whom Le Temps has called â... the popeâ... of Swiss investigators. Born in 1946, he works out of a third-floor walkup above a bakery on Rue de Montchoisy, a few blocks from Lake Geneva. When I knocked on the door, in December of last year, a tiny dog in a red sweater scampered under a Christmas tree in the foyer. Former employees told me that Brero cultivates a familial atmosphere at his office. But when a junior associate leaves he shrieks of betrayal and threatens legal action.

Brero came into the hall dressed in a three-piece suit; tall and heavyset, he walked with his hands plunged deep into his pants pockets, accentuating his roundness. â... Helloâ... goodbye,â... he said, immediately ushering me out. He never talked to journalists, he explained, citing client confidentiality. â... I am an old man,â... he added, twirling his neck-length gray hair.

French-language news reports and former employees say that Brero represents himself as a graduate of a prestigious engineering institute in Lausanne. Records indicate that he left after a semester. (The school declined to discuss his academic record.) Itâs unclear how he started his career, but by 1986 he was running a business exporting computers and semiconductor-manufacturing equipment from the United States to Europe. Federal prosecutors in San Francisco indicted him for violating laws against exporting sensitive American technologies to the Eastern Blocâheâd set up a system of straw buyers in Western Europe. Brero denied the charges but resolved them by signing a consent decree and exiting the business.

Former Alp employees told me that Brero characterizes his brush with American law as the beginning of his private-intelligence career. As he recounts it, he somehow came into contact with Jules Kroll, the American forefather of the modern corporate-intelligence industry, and Kroll persuaded him to start over as an investigator in the secretive banking center of Geneva. (Kroll says that he has no memory of Brero.)

It was an astute decision: the city has become a booming hub of the intelligence business. Geneva banks need to perform due diligence on prospective clients. Its law firms need research for litigation. And the foreign Ãlite who park their assets in Switzerland need private spies for their disputes and divorces. Moreover, the Swiss authorities have cultivated a pointedly hands-off approach to regulation. Although Switzerland is most notorious for banking secrecy, it also asks few questions of private intelligence firms, making Geneva an attractive choice for clients eager to avoid scrutiny.

Brero opened Alp in 1989, and fiercely defended his turf. When a British intelligence firm, Diligence, was launching a Geneva branch in 2007, Brero incorporated a second firm, called Diligence sarl, at Alpâs address, confusing potential clients. But there was more than enough business to go around. News reports noted that Brero drove a Porsche Cayenne and docked a motorboat on the lake.

Breroâs business initially focussed on mundane work for banks and law firms, along with a few big-ticket divorces, but in 2012 a French scandal put him in the headlines. The chief of the mining division at the French nuclear-power giant Areva had, without informing his bosses, hired Brero to investigate potential fraud by its chief executive, Anne Lauvergeon, or by others involved in the disastrous $2.5-billion acquisition of a Canadian mining company. No evidence of corruption emerged, but Lauvergeon got wind of Breroâs snooping, and she and her husband brought charges of invasion of privacy against him in a French court. Brero seemed to relish the attention: at the trial, he teased the prosecutors for the amusement of the crowd, and spoke candidly about obtaining tax records from Switzerland showing that Lauvergeonâs husband, who is French, had spirited away money there. âLegality isnât the same everywhere,â Brero testified. âIn France, the only way to get tax information on a citizen is illegal.â But, in the Swiss canton of Vaud, âfor ten francs it is absolutely possible.â (How did Brero come to suspect that Lauvergeonâs husband had paid Swiss taxes? In court, lawyers for Lauvergeonâs husband contended that Alp had illegally obtained some of his French tax records. Two former Alp employees confirmed this to me, explaining that Brero had received them from a French investigator with inside connections, prompting a look across the border.)

At the same time, Brero acknowledged violating Swiss law. He said that heâd paid phone-company employees for bills listing customer calls, sometimes using another private intelligence agent as an intermediary. âI know that the work done by these sources is illegal,â Brero testified. He refused to name his sources in court, but Swiss prosecutors subsequently arrested the agent and three phone-company employees in connection with the sale of call histories, and Le Monde suggested that Brero had betrayed his accomplices to protect himself. The trial also exposed other unseemly assignments that Brero had discussed with Arevaâsuch as spying on Greenpeaceâand some embarrassing e-mails. Brero had written to a client, âDespite my large size, I have the flexibility of a cat combined with that of a Bolshoi ballerina.â

(Brero did not respond to detailed questions from me, including some about the Areva case.)

The scandal transformed his business. Although the French court imposed only a token penalty on Brero, he was convicted of inducing a phone-company employee to disclose customer data and of disseminating information acquired by illegal means. Former employees told me that the verdict drove away reputation-conscious law firms, banks, and corporations, along with international corporate-investigations giants, such as Kroll, that had previously subcontracted to Brero. At the same time, the Areva affair brought Alp less squeamish customers: oligarchs from the former Soviet Union, politicians and businessmen from small African states, sheikhs and tycoons from the Middle East. â... They came from the East and the South,â... a former Alp employee told me. â... And they were very demanding.â...

Brero recast his sales pitch, talking up his ability to spread negative information instead of merely collecting it. He now described his specialty as â... offensive viral communication campaigns.â...

After Nada met with the Swiss police officer, he fired off an e-mail to the general mailbox listed on Alpâ... s Web site, complaining of â... fraud and prank calling to obtain private information regarding our companyâ... and proposing to resolve the matter â... amicably.â... He received no response, and he was too busy settling the claims of Lord Energyâ... s creditors to follow up immediately. But the name Alp Services never escaped his mind. In early 2021, Nada e-mailed the company again, threatening â... personal and professional repercussions on your agents and firmâ... if Alp did not correct the false allegations it appeared to have spread. By that April, his wife was about to give birth to their second child, and the stress of Lord Energyâ... s collapse was straining his marriage.

That is when he received an encrypted message from an unfamiliar French number. The sender, who refused to give a name, claimed to speak for a group of vigilante hackers who had penetrated the online accounts of Alp Services. As proof, the sender presented Nada with a copy of the threatening e-mail that heâ... d sent to the Alp in-box. His head was spinning: Was this a ruse by Alp itself? Then the contact showed Nada internal Alp e-mails directing operatives to write the online articles calling him an extremist. Nada could scarcely control his rage. â... If I did not have a family, I think I would have gotten a gun and driven all the way to Geneva,â... he told me.

The hackers sent him messages in an idiosyncratic English sprinkled with French and Italian cognates, and the style varied over time. Nada assumed that he was dealing with a group of Europeans. â... The guys,â... as Nada thought of them, sometimes sounded righteous, as if they were activists out to expose Breroâ... s wrongdoing, but their main motive was clear. â... They asked me to pay them,â... Nada told me. Had the hackers targeted Alp as part of some unrelated dispute and then discovered something that they thought they could sell? Or had they targeted a Geneva private detective on the hunch that he must hold valuable secrets?

Either way, they offered to sell Nada their Alp filesâ... terabytes of stolen material, including e-mails, proposals and reports, photographs, invoices, and recorded phone callsâ... for thirty million dollars in crypto. He told the hackers that he was neither willing nor able to pay them for their information, but the messages kept coming. After about two weeks, the hackers made a different request: they wanted Nada to act as a messenger, relaying their sales pitch to a wealthier potential buyer. Thieves were pressing Nada to fence their stolen treasure. Yet the chance for revenge was hard to resist.

Nada, concerned that he might be accused of having abetted the hacking, reported it to the Swiss authorities within two days of the first contact. A Swiss intelligence agent, Antonio Covre, went to the hospital where Nadaâ... s wife was giving birth and took photographs of the encrypted messages. Nada showed me e-mails that heâ... d sent to the local police about the hack. Nobody followed up. (A lawyer for Alp asserted, without seeing the stolen files, that some were â... obviously forged.â... But the lawyer declined to specify which files he doubted, and I was able to corroborate hundreds of private details contained in the leak.)

To draw Nada in, the hackers let him browse through the stolen cache, restricting him only from downloading any of it. â... The guysâ... made no effort to curate the leak by highlighting some files or hiding others, as many hackers do. Nada, unsure what to do, pored over it all with a mixture of fury and fascination. He stopped sleeping again as he scrolled endlessly through the trove. â... I was really swimming in darkness, seeing all these bad plans and this evil machine,â... he told me. â... When I was in the car alone, I would start screaming in anger.â... He rolled his eyes at the way Alp pitched prospective customers. â... We are mercenaries but we have our ethics,â... Brero sometimes wrote. â... We only work with clients with whom we share the same values.â...

If so, Brero shared the values of a remarkable array of characters. The files revealed that he had done intelligence operations for many foreign governments, or for individuals close to them. The list included Kazakhstan, Montenegro, Congo, Nigeria, Gabon, Monaco, Angola, Uzbekistan, and Saudi Arabia. He appeared to have done work on behalf of the Hollywood filmmaker Bryan Singer, the director of â... Bohemian Rhapsody,â... who has been accused several times of sexual assault. (A lawyer for Singer, who has denied the assault allegations, said that Singer was not available for comment.) Other revelations: Brero had done investigations for the French fashion tycoon Bernard Arnault, for the Israeli mining baron Beny Steinmetz, and for a roster of billionaires from Eastern Europe, including Bulat Utemuratov, of Kazakhstan, and Oleg Deripaska, Dmitry Rybolovlev, and Vladimir Smirnov, of Russia. (A spokesperson for Arnault declined to comment, and the other clients could not be reached.)

Nada sometimes felt like a Peeping Tom. Photographs stored in backups of Breroâ... s phone appeared to offer glimpses of his private life: giving flowers to his daughter, doting on a grandchild. Brero, though, clearly had few qualms about invading other peopleâ... s privacy. In the stolen files, Nada told me, he saw backups of various iPhones and BlackBerry devices, suggesting that Brero had hired hackers himself. There was a surprising amount of confidential banking information, and someone using a Proton Mail address had corresponded with Alp about obtaining details of client accounts at UBS. (Former Alp employees told me that a contact at UBS had sometimes leaked such information to Brero, who courted the source with gifts and meals.)

Nada also saw evidence of honey traps: images of a woman posing in fancy rooms wearing lingerie, and internal correspondence about sending a sex worker to compromise a Swiss tax official. A former Alp employee who wasnâ... t aware of the hacked material told me that Brero, while working for the Swiss art dealer Yves Bouvier, paid a sex worker to entrap a Swiss tax official. (A spokesperson said that Bouvier had no knowledge of such a scheme.) Two former Alp employees each described at least one other occasion when Brero had used the tactic.

When Nada first learned of the hack, â... the guysâ... played coy about who had hired Alp to attack him. They made Nada guess. He named competitors in the oil trade. Wrong, they said. The true client was Sheikh Mohammed bin Zayed, the ruler of the United Arab Emirates.

Sheikh Mohammed, often referred to by the initials M.B.Z., was arguably the richest person in the world, thanks to his control of vast sovereign wealth funds. He commanded the Arab worldâ... s most effective military, and paid large sums to lobbyists, think tanks, and former government officials to maximize his influence in the West. And, since the Arab Spring uprisings of 2011, M.B.Z. had led a campaign across the Middle East to restore and fortify authoritarian order in the region. â... M.B.Z.â... s picture flashed before my eyes,â... Nada told me. â... An oil trader just wants you out of a territory. But this was someone with the resources of a state.â... The threat felt existential. (I sent numerous questions to U.A.E. representatives in Washington and Abu Dhabi who declined to respond.)

The U.A.E. had hired Brero as part of a long-running feud with its neighbor Qatar. As many American officials saw it, the mutual hostility exemplified what Freud called the narcissism of small differences: both states were Western-backed, petroleum-rich monarchies; both had checkered human-rights records; both were close partners with the Pentagon. But the ruling families of Qatar and the U.A.E. embraced different, if equally cynical, strategies for bolstering their power. Qatar performed a balancing act: it hosted a major American airbase but also cultivated a tactical alliance with the Muslim Brotherhood, both to gain grassroots influence in the Arab region and to counterbalance its larger Persian Gulf neighbors. Qatar welcomed exiled Muslim Brothers in Doha and handed them microphones on the government-owned Al Jazeera network (as long as they never discussed Qatari politics). During the Arab Spring, Qatar had used its money and its media to amplify demands for democracy (although never at home), in an ill-fated bet that its Brotherhood allies would assume power around the region.

M.B.Z., meanwhile, staked a claim to regional leadership on the notion that the U.A.E. was a modernizing force in a dangerously backward region. He regarded the Brotherhoodâ... founded on the premise that an Islamic revival and Islamic governance could restore the Arab worldâ... s greatnessâ... as an embodiment of that backwardness. That is why the prospect of Arab democracy frightened him, he told Western visitors. He warned that Islamists would win free elections in any Muslim-majority country. â... The Middle East is not California,â... M.B.Z. liked to say. According to a cable obtained by WikiLeaks, he told American diplomats that fifty to eighty per cent of his own military forces would answer the call of â... some holy man in Mekkah.â...

The tensions between the U.A.E. and Qatar ratcheted up in early 2017. Each side splurged on lawyers, lobbyists, and public-relations consultants as they battled for influence in the capitals of the West, and private investigators raced to cash in, too. The industry newsletter Intelligence Online reported that â... Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar are fast overtaking Russian oligarchs as the main clients of international private investigation firms.â... Diligence, the company that Brero had tried to outmaneuver in Geneva, secured contracts with Qatar. Brero was evidently recommended to the Emiratis by Roland Jacquard, a Lebanese-born French journalist and an occasional adviser to the French government who professed to be an expert on the secret extremism of European Muslims. The hacked files include what appear to be Jacquardâ... s handwritten notes preparing a campaign against Qatar and French Islamists, and financial records show that Alp paid him a ten-per-cent commission on its Emirati contracts. (Jacquard did not respond to requests for comment.)

In a May 12, 2017, letter to the U.A.E., Brero wrote that â... several Head of Statesâ... and other â... high-net-worth individualsâ... had made use of Alpâ... s â... capacity to enhance or degrade reputations on the Internet.â... The Emiratis did not need to be sold on the value of online warfare. That month, hackers believed to be working for the U.A.E. took over the Web site of Qatarâ... s state news service and published bogus remarksâ... falsely attributed to Qatarâ... s emirâ... describing â... tensionsâ... with President Donald Trump, urging conciliation with Iran, praising Hamas, and attesting to warm relations with Israel. The implausible comments appeared calculated to alienate both Washington and the Arab street. News channels controlled by the U.A.E. and its ally Saudi Arabia had wall-to-wall coverage of the purported scandal ready to air, and they kept analyzing its significance even after Qatar denied that the emir had made any such statements.

The U.A.E. soon escalated the fight further, rallying several countries in the region to cut off trade and diplomatic ties with Qatar. The coalition demanded that Qatar neutralize Al Jazeera and reject the Muslim Brotherhood. The Qatar side responded with its own dirty tricks: hackers cracked the e-mail accounts of the Emirati Ambassador to Washington and of Elliot Broidy, a top Republican fund-raiser close to the U.A.E., then leaked embarrassing contents.

In August, 2017, Brero arrived at the Fairmont Hotel in Abu Dhabi, as a guest of its rulers. He had prepared fourteen pages of talking points to persuade the Emiratis to pay him to take on Qatar and its Brotherhood allies. â... We would aim to discredit our targets by discreetly and massively diffusing the embarrassing and compromising information: in the eyes of the media/public/officials, they would appear as perverts, corrupts or extremists,â... Brero wrote in his notes. â... The power of â... dark PRâ... should not be underestimated: many experts argue that Hillary Clinton lost the Presidential elections due to â... fake newsâ... relayed on social media and non-traditional media.â... Breroâ... s promise: â... We would use similar tools against your opponents.â...

His nominal client was an Emirati enterprise called Ariaf Studies and Research. But Alpâ... s files made it clear that the bills went to M.B.Z. Brero addressed his host as Matar, and photographs that an Alp operative took of him at meetings in Abu Dhabi match one of Matar Humaid al-Neyadi, an Emirati official. Brero later met with Matar at the Baur au Lac Hotel, in Zurich, along with Matarâ... s superiorâ... referred to in the files as â... His Excellencyâ... or â... Ali.â... Someone at Alp took photographs of the superior at that meeting, and they match those of Ali Saeed al-Neyadi, a ministerial-level aide to Sheikh Tahnoun bin Zayedâ... the Emirati national-security adviser and M.B.Z.â... s brother. Brero sent a formal letter thanking â... Your Excellencyâ... for â... the great honour to provide our services to your country.â... In texts, he sent â... warm greetingsâ... to â... His Highnessâ... â... M.B.Z.

Brero had planned to tell the Emiratis that, given the profound secrecy of the Muslim Brotherhood, investigating them would be unusually costly. â... We need to be frank about this case: to obtain useful, ideally game-changing intelligence, especially evidence-based, our actions remain highly complex, risky and resource-intensive,â... he wrote, in a WhatsApp message after the Abu Dhabi meeting. Yet this â... first collaborationâ... was â... a noble cause,â... he went on, and â... could also allow you to judge our work and effectiveness.â... Breroâ... s pitch succeeded. In an internal accounting, he recorded that the U.A.E. had agreed to an initial four-to-six-month budget of a million and a half euros â... to obtain â... concrete evidenceâ... â... about Qatar and the Muslim Brotherhood in Europe.

â... I met your daddy on a special island where cameras followed us everywhere and producers tried to instigate fights between us by withholding food and only feeding us alcohol, and when everyone else got voted off we had to choose between getting married or public humiliation.â...

His talking points never mentioned Hazim Nada. Brero initially proposed targeting people who had already been described as Brotherhood sympathizers. For example, he offered to take down Tariq Ramadan, the Swiss philosopher and the grandson of the movementâ... s founder, by exposing his â... â... wildâ... sexual life, his many young mistresses and lax religious practice.â... Someone else beat him to it, though. Six months after the Abu Dhabi meeting, French police charged Ramadan with sexual assault, and he has since acknowledged having â... submissive-dominantâ... sex with multiple women, though he has insisted that it was consensual. (In reports to the Emiratis, Brero took credit for anything he could, but not for the takedown of Ramadan.)

The idea of targeting Nada appears to have originated in conversations with Sylvain Besson, the Swiss journalist for Le Temps who had previously written about Hazimâ... s father, Youssef. â... It is an endless dÃ©jÃ vu,â... Hazim told me. Besson had spun a whole book, â... The Conquest of the West: The Secret Project of the Islamists,â... out of an unsigned fourteen-page document, from 1982, that had been delivered to Youssef and then discovered years later, during the 2001 raid on his home. Most scholars now consider Bessonâ... s book an Islamophobic conspiracy theory, but it continues to influence the right. (Anders Breivik, the Norwegian mass murderer, cited the book extensively.)

Brero included Besson in an early list of potential sources for the U.A.E. project and scheduled several meals with him while pitching the Emiratis. Bessonâ... s name is attached to an early draft memo about Nada and to a chart showing Nada and Lord Energy at the center of a sprawling network of supposed Islamists. (Besson acknowledged having spoken to Brero, but said that he could not remember the details of those conversations, and would not disclose his sources. He noted that, while he was reporting his book, Swiss investigators had told him that the fourteen-page document was â... hugely significant.â... But he now considered Youssef Nada to be â... essentially peaceful.â... Besson added, â... Maybe I would do it differently now.â... )

In Breroâ... s first official report to the Emiratis, dated October 6, 2017, he wrote, â... Why Hazim Nada?â... His answer, which ran for forty-eight pages, was predicated on the presumption that the son was an extension of his father: â... Youssef Nada is now an 86-year-old millionaire and it is natural that he hands over the family business to the next generation.â... After making this leap, Brero constructed a case against Hazim Nada mainly through an analysis of surreptitiously obtained copies of Nadaâ... s call history for June, July, and August of 2017. Nada often called his sister, for example; she lived in Qatar, and her husband was a mechanical engineer who happened to be the son of a prominent Muslim preacher revered by the Brotherhood. Nada called childhood friends, some of whom were the offspring of his fatherâ... s old Brotherhood friends. His fatherâ... s business partner, also a Brotherhood supporter, had a son, Youssef Himmat, who had worked for Hazim and also led a European network of Muslim youth groups. Nada frequently called an Italian Lord Energy employee and friend whose family had converted to Islam; the friend had even posted messages on social media opposing a 2013 Emirati-backed coup in Egypt that had removed a Muslim Brother as President. And so onâ... page after page of secondhand associations. In reality, Nada told me, the only person on his call history who might actually have been an Islamist was an Algerian parliamentarian and the operator of a language school in Milan. Nadaâ... s wife was studying Italian there.

Brero pushed his conceit with confidence, though. â... Lord Energy SA appears as a highly importantâ... and deeply discreetâ... entity within the Global Muslim Brotherhood secret terror system,â... he wrote to the Emiratis. Nada could hardly believe that the Emiratis were paranoid enough to buy it. â... You just put some names of people they hate on a chart and their eyes will start flipping!â... he told me.

His experience felt increasingly surreal: he was witnessing his own downfall through the eyes of the man who had caused it. The leaked files revealed that the editor of Africa Intelligence, Philippe Vasset, regularly sought information from Alp operatives, whom he knew on a first-name basis. (Vasset, who declined to discuss his sources, may have learned about the Youssef Nada connection indirectlyâ... possibly from an oil-industry intermediary tipped off by Alp, whose operatives wrote Vasset after he had published to commend his reporting.) And Nada saw that, a week after the first Africa Intelligence item, Brero had drafted a sixteen-page dossier, labelled â... Sylvain,â... that further elaborated Lord Energyâ... s supposed ties to the Brotherhood. When Sylvain Besson published the Le Temps article, Brero presented it to the Emiratis as evidence of his own early success in exposing Nada.

Brero appears to have figured out quickly that Lord Energyâ... s critical weakness was its dependence on a steady flow of loansâ... borrowing to fill a supertanker with oil in Libya, say, then paying off the debt when the ship unloaded in Indonesia. Breroâ... s work with Swiss banks had made clear that their compliance departments worried acutely about reputational risk. In February, 2018, he asked for more money to expand his operation against Nada, and proposed â... to alert compliance databases and watchdogs, which are used by banks and multinationals, for example about Lord Energyâ... s real activities and links to terrorism.â... His â... objective,â... he explained, was to block the companyâ... s â... bank accounts and business.â... Nada was beginning to feel that the main reason Brero had destroyed Lord Energy was to demonstrate his effectiveness.

Alp quickly put the Emiratisâ... money to work. An Alp employee named Raihane Hassaine e-mailed drafts of damning Wikipedia entries. On an invoice dated May 31, 2018, the company paid Nina May, a freelance writer in London, six hundred and twenty-five pounds for five online articles, published under pseudonyms and based on notes supplied by Alp, that attacked Lord Energy for links to terrorism and extremism. (Hassaine did not respond to requests for comment. May told me that she had worked for Alp in the past but had signed a nondisclosure agreement.) May and a fictitious French writer concocted by Alpâ... â... the freelance journalist â... Tanya Klein,â... whom we created and who is becoming an expert on the European MBâ... â... also published articles about the youth-group network headed by Youssef Himmat, the Lord Energy employee. The articles described the network as a terrorist-recruiting branch of the Muslim Brotherhood. In reality, the network, the Forum of European Muslim Youth and Student Organizations, was funded by the E.U. It campaigned against antisemitism, Islamophobia, and other forms of hate speech.

Himmat, who grew up in Switzerland, told me that he considered himself to be a classical liberal. Not only did Alpâ... s online campaign cost him his lucrative job at Lord Energy; it prompted banks to cancel his checking accounts and credit cards, and the rumors still make it difficult for him to find employment, borrow money, or even open an online checking account. â... What did we do to deserve this?â... he remembered asking himself when Nada relayed his discoveries. â... We were caught in the crossfire.â... (He is no longer president of the Muslim-youth network and now makes a much diminished living trading commodities on his own.)

Alp operatives bragged to the Emiratis that they had successfully thwarted Nadaâ... s efforts to correct the disparaging Lord Energy entry on Wikipedia. â... We requested the assistance of friendly moderators who countered the repeated attacks,â... Brero wrote in an â... urgent updateâ... to the Emiratis in June, 2018. â... The objective remains to paralyze the company.â... To pressure others to shun Lord Energy, Alp added dubious allegations about the company to the Wikipedia entries for Credit Suisse and for an Algerian oil monopoly. And an operative using the pseudonym Laurent Martin lobbied World-Check about Lord Energyâ... s alleged â... terrorism.â...

Nada could not believe how easy it had been to persuade lenders to shun him. â... Just a few blogs and some guy with a fake name and Proton Mail account,â... he told me.

Lord Energy â... used to be seen as a serious commodity-trading firm with a legitimate business,â... Brero wrote to the Emiratis in an update in July, 2018. â... Due to our actions, Lord Energy is today publicly exposed as a controversial Muslim Brotherhood company with ties to terrorism financing.â... He boasted that Google now autocompleted a search for â... Lord Energyâ... with the words â... Muslim,â... â... Muslim Brotherhood,â... or â... terrorism.â... In a 2019 â... impact assessmentâ... whose cover bore the image of an arrow hitting a bullâ... s-eye, Brero reiterated his goal: â... Pushing the MB-trading company Lord Energy towards bankruptcy.â...

By then, the U.A.E. was paying Brero two hundred thousand euros a month to locate and attack targets across Europe, with additional fees for one-off side projects. Matar was delighted with Alpâ... s results. â... Excellent job,â... he said in a phone call that Brero secretly recorded. â... Everyone appreciates what you have done.â...

Brero pushed for more. In January, 2020, he wrote to the Emiratis, â... We are ready to start the new five year Action Plan, by the end of which we will have covered about 20 European countries.â... The two had grown so close that in encrypted text messages Matar addressed Brero as â... My dear papa.â... (The hacked files also indicate that Brero set up a Proton Mail address for Matar and then logged in to monitor his client.)

Nada was surprised to see mainstream journalists and scholars on Breroâ... s payroll. While working on behalf of the U.A.E., Brero recorded more than five thousand euros in payments to Ian Hamel, a Geneva correspondent for the French magazine Le Point, and another five thousand euros to the French journalist Louis de Ragueneil, who wrote for the right-wing magazine Valeurs Actuelles. Both men attacked Alp targets in their reports or commentary. (Both men deny receiving payments.)

One of Breroâ... s first moves after signing the U.A.E. as a client was to seek out Lorenzo Vidino, the director of the Program on Extremism at the George Washington University and a consultant for several European governments. Vidino, a dual citizen of Italy and the U.S., argues that even the most moderate Islamist organizations in the West can tilt Muslims toward separatism and violence. Nada, like many Muslims, thought that he simply dressed up bigotry in academic language. Georgetown Universityâ... s Bridge Initiative, which studies Islamophobia, has described Vidino as someone who â... promotes conspiracy theories about the Muslim Brotherhoodâ... and â... is connected to numerous anti-Muslim think tanks.â... In 2020, the Austrian Interior Ministry cited a report by Vidino as a basis for carrying out raids on dozens of citizens or organizations suspected of having links to the Muslim Brotherhood. No one targeted in the raids has been arrested, much less convicted of any wrongdoing. An Austrian appellate court ruled the raids unlawful.

Farid Hafez, an Austrian scholar of Islamophobia who was picked up in the raids and is now a professor at Williams College and a fellow at Georgetown University, said that Vidino portrays nearly all of the most prominent Muslim civil-society organizations as adjuncts of the Brotherhood. â... Vidino is like a fox,â... Hafez said. â... He says, â... They have some kind of a relationship to people who are related to the Muslim Brotherhood,â... so you cannot sue him for libel, because he does not actually say you are a member of the Muslim Brotherhood!â...

Alp records show that, on January 12, 2018, Brero treated Vidino to a thousand-dollar dinner at the Beau Rivage Hotel in Geneva. In prepared talking points, Brero indicated that he planned to lie about working for the U.A.E., instead telling Vidino that Alp had been hired by a â... London-based law firmâ... to examine the Muslim Brotherhood in Europe, with a focus on â... possibly interesting points, like Lord Energy.â...

Breroâ... s notes for the dinner suggest that he aimed to make Vidino a proposal: â... Would he be available to work as a consultant, perhaps a short unnamed memo on the MB in Europe? (confidential of course).â... Two weeks after the dinner, Vidino signed an initial contract paying him three thousand euros for â... interesting leads/rumoursâ... about the Muslim Brotherhood, along with a â... list of alleged members of the first tier organisations in European countries.â...

Vidino acknowledged to me that heâ... d worked for Alp, adding that he often undertook research for private firms. â... Itâ... s the same research I do no matter what, so it does not really matter who the final client is,â... he said. â... I am a one-trick pony. I have been researching the Muslim Brotherhood in Europe for almost twenty-five years.â... Given this experience, I said, he must have realized that only the U.A.E. had the means and the motive to pay a private investigator to dig up dirt on Brotherhood-style Islamists across Europe. â... They were the most realistic client,â... he said, though â... it wasnâ... t clear cut whether it was the Emiratis, the Saudis, the Israelis, or some private entity in the States.â...

Vidino delivered to Alp a series of gossip reports about the Brotherhoodâ... s reach, and they undergirded Breroâ... s work for the Emiratis. Vidino even appears to have promised Alp information that heâ... d obtain while consulting for European security services about Islamist threats. German authorities had invited him to Berlin â... to work exactly on our topic,â... he told an Alp operative in a WhatsApp message in February, 2020, adding, â... Obviously I think that my memo would be â... juicierâ... after that visit.â... The next month, Vidino wrote that â... many of the names on the list come indeed straight from various meetings with German intel.â... (Vidino told me that he did not remember meeting the Germans around that time but considered such official interactions â... field work.â... )

After ruining Lord Energy, Brero persuaded the Emiratis to pay him to go after many more people on Vidinoâ... s roster of suspected Islamists. By November, 2019, Brero had proposed to the Emiratis more than fifty potential European targets. At one point, he asked Vidino for â... interesting elements/rumoursâ... on the other side of the Atlantic. â... It may be an opportunity to show that we could be useful in this jurisdiction too,â... Brero suggested. According to the partial records in the hacked files, by April, 2020, Brero had paid Vidino more than thirteen thousand euros. And an internal Alp accounting indicates that, between August 21, 2017, and June 30, 2020, the U.A.E. paid Brero at least 5.7 million euros.

Nada told me that, as he combed through the dossiers on various targets, he began to feel oddly â... privileged.â... Whereas other Alp victims remained in the dark, he had seen the machinations behind his downfall. He recalled, â... I was thinking of what I had lived through and multiplying it by all these other people, imagining what every single one of them had gone through. I began to feel a kind of responsibility.â€¦

The biggest Alp campaign that Vidino inspired was against Islamic Relief Worldwide, a major international charity. It was founded, in 1984, by an Egyptian-born medical student in Birmingham to raise money for a famine in East Africa; another early organizer, Essam el-Haddad, later returned to Egypt and played a prominent role in the Muslim Brotherhood. (Haddad served as the foreign-affairs adviser to Egyptâ€¦ s Islamist President Mohammed Morsi and has been imprisoned since the 2013 military takeover.) But Islamic Reliefâ€¦ s purpose was purely humanitarian. Although Israeli officials have claimed that the groupâ€¦ s work in Gaza has aided Hamas, Islamic Relief is contesting those charges in an Israeli court, and nobody has ever credibly identified any institutional ties between the charity and an Islamist movement. In fact, Islamic Relief typically works in partnership with the U.N., U.S.A.I.D., and European governments.

The U.A.E. has been more skeptical. In 2014, a year after the coup in Egypt, the Emiratis placed Islamic Relief on a list of dozens of outlawed â€¦ terroristâ€¦ organizations, along with the Council on American-Islamic Relations, the Muslim American Society, and many other Western civic associations whose founders included Muslim Brothers. (Many nonprofit Muslim groups in the West trace their origins to Brotherhood Ã©migrÃ©s, who were often educated professionals with experience in organizing.) The U.A.E.â€¦ s condemnation of Islamic Relief was halfhearted, though: representatives of the group were still welcomed at international conferences held in Dubai and Abu Dhabi.

In 2019, Brero pitched a campaign against Islamic Relief by asking the Emiratis, â€¦ A major MB charity that has so far managed to remain under the radars in the EU? Hidden links with terrorism?â€¦ The Emiratis signed on, and Alp operatives began weaving webs of associations linking Islamic Relief officials to the Muslim Brotherhood or to violent extremists. One seventy-four-page â€¦ case study,â€¦ dated April, 2020, suggested that a member of its board of trustees, Heshmat Khalifa, was â€¦ a terrorist at the top of Islamic Relief.â€¦ Alpâ€¦ s case rested mainly on the claim that, in the nineteen-nineties, Khalifa had worked with an Egyptian humanitarian organization in Bosnia while Islamist extremists were flocking to the war there.

That connection turned out to be too tenuous to sell to mainstream news outlets. But Alp operatives hit pay dirt by combing through Arabic-language posts from Khalifaâ€¦ s personal Facebook account. After a deadly 2014 clash between Israel and Hamas in Gaza, Khalifa had posted antisemitic statements. Among them: â€¦ For the first time in modern history, prayer in the Al Aqsa Mosque is banned, and it has been closed by the grandchildren of apes and pigs with the blessing of a pimp in Egypt.â€¦ (A Quranic verse says that God turned a group of Jews into monkeys or swine as punishment for violating the Sabbath; Egyptian critics of President Abdel Fattah el-Sisi refer to him as a pimp.) In another post, Khalifa called Sisi â€¦ the pimp son of the Jews.â€¦ Alp operatives also dug up similarly offensive social-media posts in Arabic by another trustee and an Islamic Relief executive.

In a report to the Emiratis, Brero wrote that he had leaked the quotes â€¦ piece by pieceâ€¦ to journalistsâ€¦ most prominently, Andrew Norfolk, of the London Times, an investigative reporter with a history of inflammatory writing about extremism among British Muslims. But Brero explained to the Emiratis that Vidino had served as a cutout: â€¦ We channeled our findings to the academic expert Lorenzo Vidino and to the Times to be sure to remain completely confidential.â€¦ (Norfolk told me that Vidino did not disclose that he had received the information from Alp.) Islamic Relief immediately removed all three officials, and said of Khalifa, â€¦ We are appalled by the hateful comments he made and unreservedly condemn all forms of discrimination, including anti-Semitism.â€¦

Alp operatives promoted the scandal to contacts in the news media across Europe and the United States. The U.S. State Department issued a statement, British and Swedish authorities opened inquiries, and the German government stopped working with the organization. Banks threatened to stop transferring Islamic Relief funds to crisis zones around the world.

Islamic Relief officials told me that though they deplored the antisemitic statements, they couldn't fathom why anyone was digging through six-year-old social-media posts. For about eight weeks, the attacks seemed to be coming from everywhere—the storm felt too diffuse to pin on any single antagonist. The crisis consumed its leadership. Islamic Relief added hundreds of thousands of dollars to its overhead to pay for outside audits, suppress false information in Internet-search results, and restore its good relations with governments—including paying for an independent commission, headed by a former attorney general of England, which verified that the organization was free of institutional antisemitism.

In the end, only the German government cut off the charity. Waseem Ahmad, Islamic Relief Worldwide's chief executive, told me that the main harm done was to the millions of people who rely on the organization for food, shelter, or medical care. "It just hurt and delayed our humanitarian work," he said. Why had the U.A.E. undermined Islamic Relief? "That is a multimillion-dollar question," Ahmad said. "It's a very unjust world—we put it that way."

In other cases, Alp's campaign for the U.A.E. may have gone beyond spin. The hacked files included more than a dozen photographs of the suburban-Paris apartment of Sihem Souid, a French Tunisian public-relations consultant for Qatar. She had also worked for the French border police and for a socialist minister of justice. She lived in the apartment with her husband and business partner, Olivier Felten, and their two children. Alp had labelled the pictures "reco" for "reconnaissance." In one image, a superimposed red circle marked the "access door" to the apartment; in two others, a red box highlighted a second-floor balcony. Another image was captioned "Picture taken inside her mailbox by our agent."

Souid told me that she'd never heard of Alp or Brero. But by the end of 2017 she had begun to feel that someone was following her: a car appeared repeatedly outside her apartment. And in 2018 a burglar stole some of her jewelry but also her old cell phone, her computer, and some notebooks. A year later, there was a second break-in, by a burglar who took only a laptop and a mobile phone. Souid said, "It is shocking that a foreign country might apply such thuggish methods outside their own borders."

One night in Como in May, 2021, Nada told me, he looked up from his laptop and saw a trespasser outside his window. His house sits more than half a mile from the road, behind a tall gate, so nobody had strayed there by accident. Nada grabbed his crossbow and the trespasser disappeared into the trees. Had an Alp operative cased his house?

Brero's campaign sometimes involved secret retaliation. In a 2018 report, a U.N. panel of human-rights experts concluded that the U.A.E. may have committed war crimes in its military intervention in Yemen. The Emiratis commissioned Brero to investigate the panel's members, especially its chairman, Kamel Jendoubi, a widely admired French Tunisian human-rights advocate. Jendoubi spent seventeen years in exile in France for opposing Tunisia's former dictatorship, then in 2011 helped oversee Tunisia's first free elections. "Today, in both Google French and Google English, the reputation of Kamel Jendoubi is excellent," Brero noted in a November, 2018, pitch to the Emiratis. "On both first pages, there is not a single critical article. Within six months, Brero promised, Jendoubi's image could be reshaped with negative elements. The cost: a hundred and fifty thousand euros."

Rumors spread through Arab news outlets and European Web publications that Jendoubi was a tool of Qatar, a failed businessman, and tied to extremists. A French-language article posted on Medium suggested that he might be "an opportunist disguised as a human-rights hero." An article in English asked, "Is UN-expert Kamel Jendoubi too close to Qatar?" Alp created or altered Wikipedia entries about Jendoubi, in various languages, by citing claims from unreliable, reactionary, or pro-government news outlets in Egypt and Tunisia.

Jendoubi told me that he'd been perplexed by the flurry of slander that followed the war-crimes report. "Wikipedia is a monster!" he told me. He had managed to clean up the French entry, but the English-language page still stymied him. He said, â... You speak Englishâ... can you help?â...

Nada first contacted me in May, 2021, shortly after he reported the hack to Swiss authorities. He felt torn by conflicting desiresâ... he wanted revenge and compensation, and also to expose Brero and the Emiratis. He was outraged that one of Washingtonâ... s closest Arab allies could spy on and defame Muslim citizens and civic associations in Western democracies. Nada texted me, â... What are we, second-class citizens that can be abused like this by some lunatic Muppet in the Gulf?â... None of the reports to the Emiratis in the hacked Alp files documented financial transfers or other support being provided to any extremist group or Muslim Brotherhood organization.

Nada initially spoke to me on the condition of confidentiality, without telling the hackers. He didnâ... t yet know if or how he would gain possession of the files, but he wanted to reach out to other targets, who might join him in a legal action. He had reluctantly told the hackers that he would carry a message from them to the richest and most obvious potential buyer for the files: the rulers of Qatar.

After tapping contacts in the petroleum markets and in the Arab news media, Nada reached a series of senior Qatari officials. He was invited to Doha, put up in a luxury hotel, and told to wait. More than a week later, a car shuttled him to a meeting with Qatari intelligence agents, where he shared a PowerPoint presentation on behalf of the hackers: â... Over 1.5 millions of files . . . over 1 Terabyte of emails. . . Complete backups of the executivesâ... phones. . . Millions of files and information of inestimable value.â...

Nada received no response. Other Qataris met him at hotels in London. Some, noting that the isolation campaign against Qatar had recently ended, insisted that the feud with the U.A.E. was behind them; others claimed to possess far better intelligence already. A member of the Qatari royal family expressed interest, then backed away. When someone claiming to be a Qatari emissary tried to renew contact, early this year, Nada was too exasperated to engage.

He grew increasingly resentful of the hackers, too. They went silent for weeks at a time, or hinted that they were negotiating with other potential customers. A few leaked Alp documents surfaced in the European media, possibly provided by the hackers. â... They are trying to use me, absolutely,â... Nada told me. â... What is their agenda? I donâ... t know.â...

Last summer, another friend from the oil business gave him the number of a former Emirati security official, Abdul Rehman al-Blouki, who was said to be close to M.B.Z. Hoping for a financial settlement in exchange for staying quiet, Nada spoke with Blouki on the phone. Do not threaten the U.A.E., Blouki warned. (Blouki told me he didnâ... t remember the call, but said that the U.A.E. â... is always a fair country, whose rulers only give and donâ... t take.â... )

I sensed that Nadaâ... s drive for vengeance might be fading. He told me that he is still worth about twenty million dollars. Lord Energyâ... s collapse had freed him to start the electric-car venture he had dreamed of. In November, his new company, Aehra, unveiled its first model, a sleek S.U.V., and MotorTrend praised its â... Milanese flair.â... Meanwhile, he accepted a research position in plasma physics, beginning next year, at Imperial College London. He and his wife are preparing to divorce, and he is now involved with a woman from Ukraine; he has travelled with her several times to her home town, near the front line of the war. â... I am moving on with my life,â... Nada told me.

Nevertheless, his improbable glimpse inside Alpâ... s campaign haunted him. How many other private citizens had been targeted by such firmsâ... and never even known it? Occasionally, the press learned of another instance in which non-Western governments or billionaires had deployed private intelligence agents: last fall, the New York Times reported that both Iran and China had used undercover agents to hire American private intelligence firms to plot against dissidents in New York and New Jersey. A countryâ... s decision to outsource intelligence operations to a Western company may seem perplexing, but the strategy offers various advantages. A country that is courting Western approval, such as Kazakhstan, might want to avoid getting caught at conventional spying. Others, such as the Persian Gulf monarchies, lack effective in-house intelligence agencies. Western firms, meanwhile, often have connections to local media outlets which make them ideal proxies for conducting â... dark P.R.â... Pierre Gastineau, the editor of Intelligence Online, noted that few private investigators have faced a penalty for working for a foreign plutocrat or government. â... There is no cop in the yard,â... he told me.

Ronald Deibert, a political scientist at the University of Toronto and the director of its Citizen Lab research center, has argued that the growing use of private intelligence agencies by authoritarian rulers and their cronies is ushering in â... a golden age of subversion.â... Last year, in an article for the Journal of Democracy, he wrote that, â... even a few decades ago, most authoritarian regimesâ... lacked the capacity to â... mount the types of foreign-influence, espionage, and subversion operations that have become common today.â... But digital spying does not require people to be on the ground in a foreign country, and the growing number of private firmsâ... often staffed by former Western intelligence agentsâ... makes it easy for governments or oligarchs to order an espionage or misinformation operation À la carte. â... Anyone with enough cash can hire a â... private Mossad,â... â... he wrote. â... Subversion is now big business. As it spreads, so too do the authoritarian practices and the culture of impunity that go with it.â...

Nada suspected that he had not yet escaped Breroâ... s sights. The most recent of the hacked files date from early 2021, and that fall a Reuters reporter forwarded Nada a pseudonymous e-mail, from Breroâ... s firm, that repeated claims about his secret ties to extremism. This time, Alp was attacking the Italian military for training at Nadaâ... s indoor-skydiving business. (After I visited Breroâ... s offices, I received a similar e-mail.)

Nada told me, â... This stuff should not be allowed to happenâ... that some dictator or his consultants decide for their own reasons to target citizens of a democracy and ruin their lives, without any kind of process whatsoever.â... Many of Breroâ... s targets â... have never done anything wrong, other than potentially holding views that the Emiratis saw as a threat. It was clear that I had no political views at all!â... Of course, there is also the money Nada lostâ... more than a hundred million dollars by early 2019, he said, not to mention the millions he might have earned during the boom years for the oil trade in 2020 and 2021.

The lyrics of a Smashing Pumpkins song ran through his head: â... The world is a vampire sent to drain / Secret destroyers hold you up to the flames / And what do I get for my pain?â...

By last spring, the hackers had cut off Nadaâ... s access to the Alp files. He told me this past winter that he had persuaded â... the guysâ... to stop holding out for a big payday from Qatar. Instead, he proposed that public exposure of some of the stolen information might help them attract other customers. The hackers e-mailed the Emirati-related Alp files to a Swiss prosecutor in Geneva, Yves Bertossa, and to Dick Marty, the former prosecutorâ... who forwarded them to Nada. (Bertossa declined to comment; Marty confirmed that he had relayed the unsolicited e-mail to Nada.)

Nada has now sent the files to two lawyers, one in Geneva and the other in London. Both declined to comment. It is a violation of Swiss law to gather political or business intelligence for a foreign state, and someone convicted of the crime can be sentenced to three years in prison. British law allows sweeping claims of damages for defamation. Nada told me that he is talking to lawyers in the U.S. about enlisting other Brero targets in a class-action suit to be filed there. â... Theyâ... ve messed with the wrong guy this time,â... he told me.

Nada can expect a vigorous counterattack. Among the hacked files was a recording of a phone call with Matar about how to handle an e-mail from Nada threatening legal action. Ignore it, Matar told Brero. The U.A.E. was ready for war. â... Weâ... re fully, fully a hundred per cent behind you,â... Matar said. â... Whatever it takes.â... The White House â... Plumbersâ... Dirty Tricks Team in America has ten times as many resources as those that were deployed against Nada. The financiers of the American White House: John Doerr, Vinod Khosla, Larry Page, Eric Schmidt, Steve Westly, Elon Musk, et al, are said to be "... clinically insane billionaires..." who will amplify any White House attacks, with their funds, to increase the damage to the target. The Ronan Farrow Book: "... CATCH AND KILL..." does an excellent job of detailing the attack efforts deployed by major White House financier Harvey Weinstein. All of the same attack service providers described herein were used against Plaintiff, in reprisal, in order to protect a trillion dollar+ corrupt energy scam crime.

DOES1 through 20, as additional Defendants in this case, are thought, by investigators, to include persons friendly with the Judge, in financial investments with the Judge and the leadership of organizations for which the Judge is a spokesperson. If those persons are also under active investigations by SEC, FTC, OGE, OSC, FEC, DOJ, FBI, and other organizations that Plaintiffs reports to, then the potential conflicts of interest are compounded.

Hate-Monger David Brock Seeks $2 Million for New Attack Project Before Midterms

Project will include news service to counter Free Beacon

Liberal operative and Media Matters founder David Brock is seeking an additional $2 million from donors to launch a new anti-Trump project to attack Republicans heading into the midterms that will also include a news service to counter publications such as the WashingtonFree Beacon, according to Politico.

Brock sent an email to donors on Wednesday asking for the cash for the project that will operate from American Bridge, the Clinton loyalist's rapid response and opposition research arm, which already has been given $20 million this cycle, Politico reported.

The proposed initiative would target Steve Bannon's new political action committee, which will attempt to make the midterms an up-or-down vote on whether Trump should be impeached, and feature a digital advertising campaign targeting 70 House races this fall.

Politico writes that the "biggest plank" of Brock's new program is an online news service, called the American Ledger, that will "seek to counter conservative news outlets like the Free Beacon and Breitbart" with a goal of generating articles that will be cited in political ads.

"You notice in Republican ads across the country that there are news sites that produce stories that get cited," Brock said. "If the average congressman says he's in favor of privatizing social security, it could be a good ad even if itâ... s not in a paper. You need a source for the ad. They need American Ledger."

The news service sounds similar to one Brock already has in operation called Shareblue.

Brock expressed similar envy in a confidential memo obtained by the Free Beacon last year at his Florida donor retreat where he plotted how to "kick Donald Trump's ass."

"The right has done this effectively (though deceptively) for years," the memo states in its Shareblue section. "They have brought down progressive organizations and damaged Democrats. In addition, there has been an influx of Republican campaigns and candidates citing bogus news stories from online smear merchants such as the Washington Free Beacon and Breitbart in political ads and communications."

Brock went on to boast of his organization's "unprecedented access to decision-makers of every level of the Democratic establishment and progressive movement" that would be used to "tangibly damage" the Trump administration.

The American Bridge portion of the memo states that it has 146 staffers between its nonprofit and super PAC that includes a 47-person war room "to take on Donald Trump," 25 researchers, and communications team of 16 people to feed their work to the press.

Politico notes that Brock has rarely spoken publicly since his Florida retreat but has remained active.

American Bridge also received payments in June from the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee (DSCC) for research consulting after some Democrats wanted the party to drop his organizations following Clinton's defeat.

American Bridge did not return a request for comment on the new project by press time.

Here's What Biden Thought About Using An FBI Report

Then-Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said during the confirmation hearings of Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas in 1991 that FBI reports were useless because the "FBI explicitly does not, in this or any other case reach a conclusion, period."

The clip has resurfaced as Senate Democrats are desperately trying to delay the confirmation vote for current Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh after allegations of sexual misconduct were recently made from over 30 years ago â... without evidence or corroborating witnesses.

"The reason why I have worked so hard to keep FBI reports totally secret is because they have little or no probative weight, because they are hearsay," Biden said. "The FBI does their interviews by walking up to person A and saying will you speak to us, and the guarantee is anonymity. That is what the FBI tells the person, and the FBI speaks to the person. Now, for us to summarily go back and say, as a matter of policy, that we are going to break the commitment the Federal Government makes to an individual, in order to get that individual to cooperate in an investigation, is disastrous."

"And the last thing I will point out, the next person who refers to an FBI report as being worth anything, obviously doesn't understand anything," Biden later said. "FBI explicitly does not, in this or any other case reach a conclusion, period, period. So, Judge, there is no reason why you should know this. The reason why we cannot rely on the FBI report, you would not like it if we did because it is inconclusive. They say he said, she said, and they said, period. So when people wave an FBI report before you, understand they do not, they do not reach conclusions. They do not make, as my friend points out more accurately, they do not make recommendations."

The mixed messages from yesterday's "shocking" indictments of some Russian trolls (while The FBI was busily ignoring potential mass murderers in Florida) need some context to calm the chaotic "told you so" narrative spewing from every orifice of every side in this debacle.

Hillary Clinton spent 53 times more money per month than Russians seeking to influence the 2016 presidential election.

As The Daily Caller's Amber Athey details, according to reports, the monthly Russian budget for the operation to meddle in the election was $1.2 million. As Peter Hamby pointed out on Twitter, Clinton and supporting PAC Priorities USA spent approximately $800 million in 2016.

Peter Hamby

@PeterHamby

Not to diminish how awful this is, but $1.2 million is hardly mindblowing. Hillary Clinton + Priorities USA spent ~$800 million in 2016.

That means Clinton and her PAC spent about $66 million a month in 2016, a whopping 53 times more money than Russiaâ€¦ s $1.25 million monthly budget.

Itâ€¦ s also worth nothing that not all of the money spent by the Russian operation was used to campaign for President Donald Trump. According to the Mueller indictment released Friday, Russian trolls also supported Jill Stein and Bernie Sanders and even planted seeds for leftist groups like â€¦ Blacktivistâ€¦ and â€¦ Woke Blacks.â€¦

After the election, Russians continued to sow division in the United States by riling up â€¦ #Resistâ€¦ groups involved in anti-Trump protests.

But none of that matters... Russians 'meddled' - end of story, Adam Schiff will no doubt be popping corks this weekend.

Beware of â... Pretend Lawyersâ... who want to help you sue Google, or the DNC but, in fact, actually covertly work for Google and the DNC!

By Amy Lawson

Ever since the Harvey Weinstein sex abuse case went public, the bigger part of the revelations has turned out to be that Weinstein availed himself of services which act as corporate or legal â... honeytrapsâ... .

These groups: Stratfor, In-Q-Tel, Black Cube, Sandline, and an army of law firms; send in lawyers or â... reportersâ... who pretend that they want to help you. In fact, the lawyers or â... helpersâ... are actually agents of Google and the DNC trying to delay you and trip you up. Weinstein had these facade players pretend to be lawyers, reporters or others who wanted to help the victims when, in fact, they wanted to destroy them. The DNC had their lawyers at Perkins Coie pay off the dirty tricks agents over and over. They did it to get billions of dollars of Department of Energy, CIA, DOT and other agency grants, loans and contracts in their pockets.

Numerous reporters have received tips that a legal group in San Rafael, California who are suing Google are actually DNC and Google advocates.

The Weinstein case exposed the fact that fake lawyers and fake reporter shills is a multi-billion dollar business. Weinstein paid millions for his dirty tricks. Law firm Perkins Coie paid GPS millions to hunt-and-kill for the DNC.

The Legal Honeytrap is quite insidious. Lawyers place themselves in the path of those harmed by Google, DNC, Facebook or other lefty campaign politicians. They acquire the hard-earned cash of their victims as a retainer, while seeking to delay, damage, intelligence gather and misdirect those victims in order to protect the Silicon Valley Cartel.

Google and the modern DNC is largely comprised of frat boy culture elitists. They were trained in their frat house and sorority games that dirty tricks are the expected way to get ahead in business. Almost 90% of those arrested or indicted for bribery, tax evasion, high-end sex trafficking, money laundering and other corporate crimes, were leaders in the college Greek system. Dirty tricks is a way of life to these folks.

The old saw of â... if it sounds too good to be trueâ... must be followed with extreme care when you cross swords with the Silicon Valley oligarchs. Big law firms (MoFo, Wilson Sonsini, Perkins Coi, Latham Watkins...and that ilk) have been caught in these tactics but smaller lawyers and sole practitioners are the more voluminous in this special field of fake legal services.

If you never met the lawyer in person and if you canâ... t track the social media posts, campaign contributions and clients for the last 10 years, you should be suspicious of lawyers who â... offer to help youâ... fight Silicon Valley. They could be working for the other side.

The San Francisco Bar Association is thought to be conflicted out when an individual goes to them looking for a lawyer to sue for Silicon Valley corruption. Most of the cash that the The San Francisco Bar Association and California Bar Association members put in their pockets comes from the very companies that victims are looking to sue. A number of victims have complained that â... ..filing a lawyer request with SFBA or CALBAR to sue the Silicon Valley oligarchs is like strapping steaks to your thighs and jumping in a shark tank...â... You will just be asking to get yourself black-listed and targeted by the Bay Area lawyers who feed at the Silicon Valley Cartelâ... s trough.

While the legal industry requires lawyers to engage in a â... conflict-of-interestâ... check; those who run legal honeytraps will simply lie about the conflicts check.

Silicon Valleyâ... s impunity lies in the fact that Silicon Valley has hired every law firm who might ever go after Silicon Valley. They hired them to stop SEC, FTC and related anti-trust hearings. They wonâ... t hesitate to order that small victims either get black-listed or legal honey-trapped.

You could get your life savings drained by these fake front lawyers who want to harm you, and not help you, on orders from Google, Debbie Wasserman or Mark Zuckerberg.

Never trust a helper who wants to help you sue a Silicon Valley oligarch. They could be one of the Pied Pipers of Google.

How A Modern Character Assassination and Political "Kill Order" Is Executed By Obama staff and his Silicon Valley Oligarchs

By Robert Downsen

How and why did a Donald Trump stripper-date named "Stormy" or an Elon Musk sex party or a Kavanaugh drinking incident or the Moonves and Weinstein indiscretions suddenly hit the news at about the same time in news history?

It is all part of the modern trend in vendetta, revenge and political payback when a Senator or a tech oligarch issues a "kill order" on an opponent.

The client does not like to get their hands dirty so the actual social hit job is performed by companies such as:

IN-Q-Tel - (DNC); Gawker Media - (DNC); Jalopnik - (DNC); Gizmodo Media - (DNC); K2 Intelligence - (DNC); WikiStrat - (DNC); Podesta Group - (DNC); Fusion GPS - (DNC/GOP); Google - (DNC); YouTube - (DNC); Alphabet - (DNC); Facebook - (DNC); Twitter - (DNC); Think Progress - (DNC); Media Matters - (DNC); Black Cube - (DNC); Mossad - (DNC); Correct The Record - (DNC); Sand Line - (DNC/GOP); Blackwater - (DNC/GOP); Stratfor - (DNC/GOP); ShareBlue - (DNC); Wikileaks (DNC/GOP); Cambridge Analytica - (DNC/GOP); Sid Blumenthal- (DNC); David Brock - (DNC); Covington and Burling - (DNC),

Perkins Coie - (DNC); Wilson Sonsini - (DNC) and hundreds of othersâ... These are the people and companies that except cash, revolving door jobs, political appointments, insider trading stock in Silicon Valley tech companies, prostitutes and real estate in exchange for destroying the lives of others.

They deserve to be punished for the rest of their lives for taking away the lives of others in exchange for cash. Any company who is corrupt enough to hire any of these assassins should be forced out of business. These attack services are responsible for 90% of the "Fake News" problem in the world because they are the authors of most fake news. Congress must act to make these kinds of companies illegal!

These digital assassination services offer hit-jobs, character assassinations and economic reprisal programs to famous billionaires and corrupt politicians who are seeking revenge, retribution and vendetta executions.

In the case of reporters getting targeted for attacks, President Donald Trump has been accused by the liberal corporate media of whipping up a hateful frenzy against the press. But while CNNâ... s Jim Acosta grandstands against Trump, real journalists are still reeling from the draconian extrajudicial measures that Barack Obama and his administration used to target them for exposing truth.

This secretive targeting occurred while Obama speechwriter and hate-filled ANTIFA supporter Ben Rhodes was running â... Operation Echo Chamber,â... which reportedly continues, in which he fed information to willing corporate media scribes. â... They literally know nothing,â... Rhodes said of the twentysomething journalists he easily manipulated.

The Freedom of the Press Foundationâ... s Trevor Timm published documents showing how former attorney general Eric Holder changed the rules to more effectively intimidate and surveil members of the press.

Timm writes: â... Today, we are revealingâ... for the first timeâ... the Justice Departmentâ... s rules for targeting journalists with secret FISA court orders. The documents were obtained as part of a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit brought by Freedom of the Press Foundation and Knight First Amendment Institute at Columbia University.â...

Trending: Brennan and Clapper Accused of Hacking John Roberts To Blackmail Him

Here is the memo published by the Foundation, which dropped the documents in their entirety:

Obama is also clearly linked to the plot to obtain fraudulent FISA warrants on President Trumpâ... s team, as evidenced by Peter Strzok and Lisa Pageâ... s texts confirming that Obama was overseeing their fly-by-night operation.

Larry Schweikart reported for Big League Politics:

For months pundits and researchers have been pondering the mystery of the FISA approval that led to the illegal and historically titanic scandals to ever hit the U.S. government. Some have argued that Assistant Attorney General Rod Rosenstein knew the FISA was bogus when he extended it. Others have wondered if Special Counsel Robert Mueller knew about the fraudulent basis of the FISA when he used it, in part, to indict Michael Flynn. Other still, that Mueller was fooled by the FBI.

This is what President Trump calls â... SPYGATEâ... .

It may well be that the surveillance that was conducted began with UK intelligence services and then was fed back to the White House of Barack Obama. Hereâ... s the kicker:

President Barack Obama did not need a FISA warrant to authorize spying/electronic surveillance on Trump because Obama all along had legal authorization to by-pass the normal court vetting process. According to 50 U.S. Code 1802, the â... Electronic Surveillance Authorizationâ..._() â... Foreign intelligence in relation to a US person (Trump or his associates) is information thatâ... s necessary for the US to protect against attack, hostile acts, sabotage, . . . as well as other clandestine activities by a foreign power . . . OR . . . information relevant to national defense/security of the US, or the conduct of foreign affairs of the U.S.â... Such an authorization by Obama required certification by Attorney General Loretta Lynch that must be logged with the FISC court. (â... The [AG]+ shall immediately transmit under seal to the court [FISC] a copy of his certification.â... )

In short, the DOJ has this. If we are correct, a copy of that certification is currently under seal at least with the DOJ and the FISC.

This is what they are hiding.

However, the Act requires the AG to keep the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Senate Committee on Intelligence informed of these authorizations and unmaskings therein. See 1803 (a) (1) (C) If indeed this is what happened, did Lynch reportâ... or only selectively reportâ... to the committees in a way that excluded non-friendlies? Can you see why Adam Schiff, Mark Warner, and their ilk are terrified?

1) Obama authorized spying/electronic surveillance on Team Trump, by-passing normal judicial oversight.

2) To create â... foreign intelligence,â... John Brennan and others organized for UK intelligence to conduct surveillance on Trump and his associates, either from the UK or from UK assets within the U.S. This is another reason revealing this will unleash an excrement storm: the UK is about to be caught meddling bigly in an American election.

3) Lynch certified Obamaâ... s authorization which is now held under seal by DOJ (and FISC).

From this authorization, all unmaking followed, as well as the FBI fraudulent counter intel investigation and perhaps the FISA warrant too. Obama knew this was all fake when he made the authorization; Lynch knew it was fake when she certified it; the entire inner circle, including the FBI, all knew. This takes the U.S. into uncharted territory, and could imperil any politician in the British government who supported this or had knowledge of it. Proving any of this would be difficult, as if confronted Lynch would almost certainly cover up and Obama would simply deny knowledge. Without a paper trail, a conviction might be a bridge too far. This is only one of thousands of "kill order" tactics introduced by the Obama Administration.

These are the playbook tactics that Senators and tech oligarchs most often use to destroy the lives of their political and business enemies:

- - Government agency bosses sometimes solicit the target victims with false promises of future loans, contracts or grants from their agency and cause the target victims to expend millions of dollars and years of their time for projects which those government bosses had covertly promised to their friends. They use the target victims as a â... smokescreenâ... to cover their illegal government slush-funds for the victims competitors and personal enemies. By using this tactic, the attackers can drain the target victims funds and force them into an economic disaster in plain view of everyone without the government bosses fearing any reprisal for their scam.
- - Every match.com, okcupid.com, Plenty Of Fish, Seeking Arrangements and all other IAC-owned, or similar, dating sites (IAC is managed by Hillary Clinton's daughter) have had their profiles, texts, and inter-member communications, since those companies were started, hacked or purchased. The attack service providers use Palantir and In-Q-Tel financed data analysis software to analyze every activity in those dating services in order to find honey-trap, blackmail, sextortion and social conflict exploitation opportunities. If you had a bad date with someone, that someone will be hunted down and convinced to help harm, #metoo or "rape charge" the intended target. All dates involve a search for sex, so the likelihood that a sexual disappointment experience will exist in each persons dating history is high. Searching every past dating email and text of a subject is quite easy with modern software and hacking techniques. A synthetically amplified, PR-agency optimized sex scandal can destroy any target. Your dating experiences from the 70's or 80's will come back to haunt you decades later. Most dates involve drinking alcohol and taking drugs. If you were unattractive or had bad sexual skills your bad date will be called "date rape", "drugging your date for sex" and related twisted narratives that are designed to shame you, the target. If you try to get a date in the future, your potential date will be contacted by a third party who will slander and libel you to make sure your potential first date gets cancelled. Your social life will, essentially, end. Every photo on every dating site is cross checked with every other photo on the internet in order to cull your Facebook, LinkedIn, Snapchat and other social media together to create a total psychological manipulation profile data file on you. A single photo on a dating site can be cross searched on every mugshot archive, photo album and corporate database in the worth within minutes using modern super-computers. Your sex life will be on public record in a flash.

- - Social Security, SSI, SDI, Disability and other earned benefits are stone-walled. Applications of targets are â... lostâ... . Files in the application process â... disappearedâ... . Lois Lerner hard drive â... incidentsâ... are operated in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.
- - Government officials and tech oligarchs contact members of the National Venture Capital association (NVCA) and created national â... black-listsâ... to blockade target victims from ever receiving investor funding. This was also confirmed in a widely published disclosure by Tesla Motors Daryl Stry and in published testimony. If Silicon Valley political campaign finance oligarchs black-list you (see the "AngelGate" Scandal and the "High Tech No Poaching Class Action Lawsuit" cases) you will never get investor funding again.
- - FOIA requests are hidden, frozen, stone-walled, delayed, lied about and only partially responded to in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.
- - State and federal employees will play an endless game of Catch-22 by arbitrarily determining that deadlines had passed that they, the government officials, had stonewalled and obfuscated applications for, in order to force these deadlines that they set, to appear to be missed. This can bankrupt a target victim.
- - Some Victims found themselves strangely poisoned, not unlike the Alexander Litvenko case. Heavy metals and toxic materials were found right after their work with the Department of Energy weapons and energy facilities. Many wonder if these â... targetsâ... were intentionally exposed to toxins in retribution for their testimony. The federal MSDS documents clearly show that a number of these people were exposed to deadly compounds and radiations, via DOE, without being provided with proper HazMat suits which DOE officials knew were required.
- - Victims employers are called, and faxed, and ordered to fire target victims from their places of employment, in the middle of the day, with no notice, as a retribution tactic.
- - On orders from Obama White House officials, DNC-financed Google, YouTube, Gawker Media and Gizmodo Media produce attack articles and defamation videos. Google locks this attack media on the internet on the top line, of the front page of all Google searches for a decade in front of 7.5 billion people, around the world. This attack-type uses over $40 million dollars in server farms, production costs and internet rigging. The forensic data acquired from tracking some of these attacks proves that Google rigs attacks against individuals on the internet and that all of Googleâ... s â... impressionsâ... are manually controlled by Googleâ... s executives who are also the main financiers and policy directors of the Obama Administration. This data was provided to the European Union for itâ... s ongoing prosecution of Googleâ... s political manipulation of public perceptions.
- - Victims HR and employment records, on recruiting and hiring databases, are embedded with negative keywords in order to prevent the victim targets from ever gaining future employment.
- - Gary D. Conley, Seth Rich, Rajeev Motwani and many other whistle-blowers in these matters, turned up dead under strange circumstances. It is very possible that some of these attack services, operated by former CIA operatives, even offer discrete murder-for-sale services using high-tech assassination tools that make murders look like heart attacks and brain failures.
- - Disability and VA complaint hearings and benefits are frozen, delayed, denied or subjected to lost records and "missing hard drives" as in the Lois Lerner case.
- - Paypal (A DNC-biased operation) and other on-line payments for on-line sales are de-platformed, delayed, hidden, or re-directed in order to terminate income potential for target victims who competed with the attackers interests and holdings.
- - DNS redirection, "website spoofing" sends target victims websites to dead ends where no sales orders or customer inquiries actually get back to the target. These internet revenue activity manipulations are conducted using Google and Amazon servers. All commercial storefronts and on-line sales attempts by target victims, will have had their sites hidden, or search engine de-linked by a massively resourced facility located in Virginia, Texas or Palo Alto, California in order to terminate revenue potentials for the target victims.
- - Over 50,000 trolls, shills, botnets and synth-blog deployments are deployed to place defamatory statements and disinformation about victims in front of 7.5 billion people around the world on the internet in order to seek to damage their federal testimony credibility by a massively resourced facility.
- - Campaign finance dirty tricks contractors are hired by campaign financiers to attack the friends and family members of the target victim in order to create low morale for the target victims psyche and motivation.

- - Are you getting weird headaches and hearing a "buzzing sound" in your head? The U.S. Government has now acknowledged that the Cuban, Chinese and other embassy "sonic attacks" are from a known microwave beam weapon. Any one of the technical departments of the attack services listed at the top of this article can build such a biological harassment weapon. It can be aimed at the target victims office, bedroom or vehicle and, within a week, have caused biological and emotional damage using a weapon that has no visible track of trajectory. It is designed to make the target victim think they are "going crazy" or "hearing sounds in their head". While this may sound pretty out there, web search "Embassy sonic attacks" on the top 5 non-Google search engines and read the very credible reports of these attacks.
- - In one case covert political partner: Google, transferred large sums of cash to dirty tricks contractors and then manually locked the media portion of the attacks into the top lines of the top pages of all Google searches globally, for years, with hidden embedded codes in the links and web-pages which multiplied the attacks on Victims by many magnitudes.
- - Covert Cartel financier: Google, placed Google's lawyer: Michelle Lee, in charge of the U.S. Patent Office and she, in turn, stacked all of the U.S. Patent Office IPR and ALICE review boards and offices with Google-supporting employees in order to rig the U.S. Patent Office to protect Google from being prosecuted for the vast patent thefts that Google engages in. Google has hundreds of patent lawsuits for technology theft and a number of those lawsuits refer to Google's operations as "Racketeering", "Monopolistic Cartel" and "Government Coup-like" behaviors. Thousands of articles and investigations detail the fact that Google, essentially, ran the Obama White House and provided over 80% of the key White House staff. A conflict-of-interest unlike any in American history. Google's investors personally told Applicant they would "kill him". Google and the Obama Administration were "the same entity". Applicant testified in the review that got Michelle Lee terminated and uncovered a tactical political and social warfare group inside Google who were financed by Federal and State funds.
- - Honeytraps and moles were employed by the attackers. In this tactic, people who covertly worked for the attackers were employed to approach the "target" in order to spy on and misdirect the subject.
- - Gawker Media, Gizmodo Media, Snopes, SPLC and other hired media assassins will be retained to produce "hatchet job" character assassination articles about you. Then those articles will be faxed, mailed and emailed to your employer and investors with a note saying: "You don't want to have anything to do with this person, do you..?" in order to get you fired from your job and get your loans or financing pulled. The attackers will use their round one attack media, that they authored, to create a round two second wave attack designed to end your life via economic warfare.
- - Mortgage and rental applications will have had red flags added to them in databases to prevent the targets from getting homes or apartments.
- - Krebs On Security, Wired, Ars Technica, The Wall Street Journal and most major IT publications have reported that hundreds of spy "back-doors" have been found on every Intel, AMD, Apple, Xfinity, Cisco, Microsoft, Juniper Networks motherboard, chip-set and hardware component set. This means that any kid with the "key" code can open any computer, server, router, cloud-network or other network connected device and read every file, photo, video, your calendar and email on your devices at any time from any location on Earth. The key codes have been released to every hacker community in the world for over ten years. There is now no government, corporate or personal data that can't be hacked, even data from decades ago. Every single one of your darkest secrets can be in the hands of your enemy within 60 minutes, or less. Important meetings you had planned with potential investors, employers, clients, dates, suppliers and others will suddenly get cancelled at the last minute. They will get cancelled because your enemies are reading your calendar remotely and covertly sending slander information to those you had hoped to engage with in order to sabotage your life. Nothing you have ever typed on a computer or Smartphone is safe. it WILL be acquired and it WILL be used against you.
- - McCarthy-Era "Black-lists" are created and employed against target victims who competed with Obama Administration executives and their campaign financiers to prevent them from getting funding and future employment.
- - Obama Administration targets were very carefully placed in a position of not being able to get jobs, unemployment benefits, disability benefits or acquire any possible sources of income. The retribution tactics were audacious, overt..and quite illegal.

- - There are thousands of additional Dirty Tricks tactics being used by these Attack Services yet Congress refuses to pass laws out-lawing such attack services. The cost of an attack on a person ranges from $150,000.00 to over $50,000,000.00. While a Silicon Valley billionaire can afford to launch counter-measures to these attacks, any regular taxpayer will be utterly destroyed, and incapable of fighting back, against even the smallest version of one of these "kill orders". A number of modern office shootings are the results of these attacks against an individual who has lost everything because of the attack and has no options left.

Federal law enforcement, the United States Congress and the highest level investigators in the U.S., and abroad, have documented (per the FISA Memo, Congressional Reports and federal employee testimony) and proven the fact that the Obama Administration regularly engaged in the operation of retribution, vendetta and reprisal campaigns known as "hit-jobs" against domestic natural born U.S. citizen domestic taxpayers. The Federal Court, in at least one previous court case, has ruled that Applicants, in this particular matter, were the victims and target of a number of these attacks designed to inflict permanent medical, emotional, character assassination, brand negation, economic and career damage.

How A Modern Character Assassination and Political "Kill Order" Is Executed

By Robert Downsen

How and why did a Donald Trump stripper-date named "Stormy" or an Elon Musk sex party or a Kavanaugh drinking incident or the Moonves and Weinstein indiscretions suddenly hit the news at about the same time in news history?

It is all part of the modern trend in vendetta, revenge and political payback when a Senator or a tech oligarch issues a "kill order" on an opponent.

The client does not like to get their hands dirty so the actual social hit job is performed by companies such as:

IN-Q-Tel - (DNC); Gawker Media - (DNC); Jalopnik - (DNC); Gizmodo Media - (DNC); K2 Intelligence - (DNC); WikiStrat - (DNC); Podesta Group - (DNC); Fusion GPS - (DNC/GOP); Google - (DNC); YouTube - (DNC); Alphabet - (DNC); Facebook - (DNC); Twitter - (DNC); Think Progress - (DNC); Media Matters - (DNC); Black Cube - (DNC); Mossad - (DNC); Correct The Record - (DNC); Sand Line - (DNC/GOP); Blackwater - (DNC/GOP); Stratfor - (DNC/GOP); ShareBlue - (DNC); Wikileaks (DNC/GOP); Cambridge Analytica - (DNC/GOP); Sid Blumenthal- (DNC); David Brock - (DNC); Covington and Burling - (DNC), Perkins Coie - (DNC); Wilson Sonsini - (DNC) and hundreds of othersâ...! These are the people and companies that except cash, revolving door jobs, political appointments, insider trading stock in Silicon Valley tech companies, prostitutes and real estate in exchange for destroying the lives of others.

They deserve to be punished for the rest of their lives for taking away the lives of others in exchange for cash. Any company who is corrupt enough to hire any of these assassins should be forced out of business. These attack services are responsible for 90% of the "Fake News" problem in the world because they are the authors of most fake news. Congress must act to make these kinds of companies illegal!

These digital assassination services offer hit-jobs, character assassinations and economic reprisal programs to famous billionaires and corrupt politicians who are seeking revenge, retribution and vendetta executions.

In the case of reporters getting targeted for attacks, President Donald Trump has been accused by the liberal corporate media of whipping up a hateful frenzy against the press. But while CNNâ... s Jim Acosta grandstands against Trump, real journalists are still reeling from the draconian extrajudicial measures that Barack Obama and his administration used to target them for exposing truth.

This secretive targeting occurred while Obama speechwriter and hate-filled ANTIFA supporter Ben Rhodes was running â... Operation Echo Chamber.â... which reportedly continues, in which he fed information to willing corporate media scribes. â... They literally know nothing,â... Rhodes said of the twentysomething journalists he easily manipulated.

The Freedom of the Press Foundationâ... s Trevor Timm published documents showing how former attorney general Eric Holder changed the rules to more effectively intimidate and surveil members of the press.

Timm writes: â... Today, we are revealingâ... for the first timeâ... the Justice Departmentâ... s rules for targeting journalists with secret FISA court orders. The documents were obtained as part of a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit brought by Freedom of the Press Foundation and Knight First Amendment Institute at Columbia University.â...

Trending: Brennan and Clapper Accused of Hacking John Roberts To Blackmail Him

Here is the memo published by the Foundation, which dropped the documents in their entirety:

Obama is also clearly linked to the plot to obtain fraudulent FISA warrants on President Trumpâ... s team, as evidenced by Peter Strzok and Lisa Pageâ... s texts confirming that Obama was overseeing their fly-by-night operation.

Larry Schweikart reported for Big League Politics:

For months pundits and researchers have been pondering the mystery of the FISA approval that led to the illegal and historically titanic scandals to ever hit the U.S. government. Some have argued that Assistant Attorney General Rod Rosenstein knew the FISA was bogus when he extended it. Others have wondered if Special Counsel Robert Mueller knew about the fraudulent basis of the FISA when he used it, in part, to indict Michael Flynn. Other still, that Mueller was fooled by the FBI.

This is what President Trump calls â... SPYGATEâ... .

It may well be that the surveillance that was conducted began with UK intelligence services and then was fed back to the White House of Barack Obama. Hereâ... s the kicker:

President Barack Obama did not need a FISA warrant to authorize spying/electronic surveillance on Trump because Obama all along had legal authorization to by-pass the normal court vetting process. According to 50 U.S. Code 1802, the â... Electronic Surveillance Authorizationâ..._() â... Foreign intelligence in relation to a US person (Trump or his associates) is information thatâ... s necessary for the US to protect against attack, hostile acts, sabotage, . . . as well as other clandestine activities by a foreign power . . . OR . . . information relevant to national defense/security of the US, or the conduct of foreign affairs of the U.S.â... Such an authorization by Obama required certification by Attorney General Loretta Lynch that must be logged with the FISC court. (â... The [AG]+ shall immediately transmit under seal to the court [FISC] a copy of his certification.â... )

In short, the DOJ has this. If we are correct, a copy of that certification is currently under seal at least with the DOJ and the FISC.

This is what they are hiding.

However, the Act requires the AG to keep the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Senate Committee on Intelligence informed of these authorizations and unmaskings therein. See 1803 (a) (1) (C) If indeed this is what happened, did Lynch reportâ... or only selectively reportâ... to the committees in a way that excluded non-friendlies? Can you see why Adam Schiff, Mark Warner, and their ilk are terrified?

1) Obama authorized spying/electronic surveillance on Team Trump, by-passing normal judicial oversight.

2) To create â... foreign intelligence,â... John Brennan and others organized for UK intelligence to conduct surveillance on Trump and his associates, either from the UK or from UK assets within the U.S. This is another reason revealing this will unleash an excrement storm: the UK is about to be caught meddling bigly in an American election.

3) Lynch certified Obamaâ... s authorization which is now held under seal by DOJ (and FISC).

From this authorization, all unmaking followed, as well as the FBI fraudulent counter intel investigation and perhaps the FISA warrant too. Obama knew this was all fake when he made the authorization;

Lynch knew it was fake when she certified it; the entire inner circle, including the FBI, all knew. This takes the U.S. into uncharted territory, and could imperil any politician in the British government who supported this or had knowledge of it. Proving any of this would be difficult, as if confronted Lynch would almost certainly cover up and Obama would simply deny knowledge. Without a paper trail, a conviction might be a bridge too far. This is only one of thousands of "kill order" tactics introduced by the Obama Administration.

These are the playbook tactics that Senators and tech oligarchs most often use to destroy the lives of their political and business enemies:

- - Government agency bosses sometimes solicit the target victims with false promises of future loans, contracts or grants from their agency and cause the target victims to expend millions of dollars and years of their time for projects which those government bosses had covertly promised to their friends. They use the target victims as a "smokescreen" to cover their illegal government slush-funds for the victims competitors and personal enemies. By using this tactic, the attackers can drain the target victims funds and force them into an economic disaster in plain view of everyone without the government bosses fearing any reprisal for their scam.
- - Every match.com, okcupid.com, Plenty Of Fish, Seeking Arrangements and all other IAC-owned, or similar, dating sites (IAC is managed by Hillary Clinton's daughter) have had their profiles, texts, and inter-member communications, since those companies were started, hacked or purchased. The attack service providers use Palantir and In-Q-Tel financed data analysis software to analyze every activity in those dating services in order to find honey-trap, blackmail, sextortion and social conflict exploitation opportunities. If you had a bad date with someone, that someone will be hunted down and convinced to help harm, #metoo or "rape charge" the intended target. All dates involve a search for sex, so the likelihood that a sexual disappointment experience will exist in each persons dating history is high. Searching every past dating email and text of a subject is quite easy with modern software and hacking techniques. A synthetically amplified, PR-agency optimized sex scandal can destroy any target. Your dating experiences from the 70's or 80's will come back to haunt you decades later. Most dates involve drinking alcohol and taking drugs. If you were unattractive or had bad sexual skills your bad date will be called "date rape", "drugging your date for sex" and related twisted narratives that are designed to shame you, the target. If you try to get a date in the future, your potential date will be contacted by a third party who will slander and libel you to make sure your potential first date gets cancelled. Your social life will, essentially, end. Every photo on every dating site is cross checked with every other photo on the internet in order to cull your Facebook, Linkedin, Snapchat and other social media together to create a total psychological manipulation profile data file on you. A single photo on a dating site can be cross searched on every mugshot archive, photo album and corporate database in the world within minutes using modern super-computers. Your sex life will be on public record in a flash.
- - Social Security, SSI, SDI, Disability and other earned benefits are stone-walled. Applications of targets are "lost". Files in the application process "disappeared". Lois Lerner hard drive "incidents" are operated in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.
- - Government officials and tech oligarchs contact members of the National Venture Capital association (NVCA) and created national "black-lists" to blockade target victims from ever receiving investor funding. This was also confirmed in a widely published disclosure by Tesla Motors Daryl Strydom and in published testimony. If Silicon Valley political campaign finance oligarchs black-list you (see the "AngelGate" Scandal and the "High Tech No Poaching Class Action Lawsuit" cases) you will never get investor funding again.
- - FOIA requests are hidden, frozen, stone-walled, delayed, lied about and only partially responded to in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.
- - State and federal employees will play an endless game of Catch-22 by arbitrarily determining that deadlines had passed that they, the government officials, had stonewalled and obfuscated applications for, in order to force these deadlines that they set, to appear to be missed. This can bankrupt a target victim.
- - Some Victims found themselves strangely poisoned, not unlike the Alexander Litvenko case. Heavy metals and toxic materials were found right after their work with the Department of Energy weapons and energy facilities. Many wonder if these "targets" were intentionally exposed to toxins in retribution for their testimony. The federal MSDS documents clearly show that a number of these people were exposed to deadly compounds and radiations, via DOE, without being provided with proper HazMat suits which DOE officials knew were required.
- - Victims employers are called, and faxed, and ordered to fire target victims from their places of employment, in the middle of the day, with no notice, as a retribution tactic.

- - On orders from Obama White House officials, DNC-financed Google, YouTube, Gawker Media and Gizmodo Media produce attack articles and defamation videos. Google locks this attack media on the internet on the top line, of the front page of all Google searches for a decade in front of 7.5 billion people, around the world. This attack-type uses over $40 million dollars in server farms, production costs and internet rigging. The forensic data acquired from tracking some of these attacks proves that Google rigs attacks against individuals on the internet and that all of Google's impressions are manually controlled by Google's executives who are also the main financiers and policy directors of the Obama Administration. This data was provided to the European Union for its ongoing prosecution of Google's political manipulation of public perceptions.
- - Victims HR and employment records, on recruiting and hiring databases, are embedded with negative keywords in order to prevent the victim targets from ever gaining future employment.
- - Gary D. Conley, Seth Rich, Rajeev Motwani and many other whistle-blowers in these matters, turned up dead under strange circumstances. It is very possible that some of these attack services, operated by former CIA operatives, even offer discrete murder-for-sale services using high-tech assassination tools that make murders look like heart attacks and brain failures.
- - Disability and VA complaint hearings and benefits are frozen, delayed, denied or subjected to lost records and "missing hard drives" as in the Lois Lerner case.
- - Paypal (A DNC-biased operation) and other on-line payments for on-line sales are de-platformed, delayed, hidden, or re-directed in order to terminate income potential for target victims who competed with the attackers interests and holdings.
- - DNS redirection, "website spoofing" sends target victims websites to dead ends where no sales orders or customer inquiries actually get back to the target. These internet revenue activity manipulations are conducted using Google and Amazon servers. All commercial storefronts and on-line sales attempts by target victims, will have had their sites hidden, or search engine de-linked by a massively resourced facility located in Virginia, Texas or Palo Alto, California in order to terminate revenue potentials for the target victims.
- - Over 50,000 trolls, shills, botnets and synth-blog deployments are deployed to place defamatory statements and disinformation about victims in front of 7.5 billion people around the world on the internet in order to seek to damage their federal testimony credibility by a massively resourced facility.
- - Campaign finance dirty tricks contractors are hired by campaign financiers to attack the friends and family members of the target victim in order to create low morale for the target victims psyche and motivation.
- - Are you getting weird headaches and hearing a "buzzing sound" in your head? The U.S. Government has now acknowledged that the Cuban, Chinese and other embassy "sonic attacks" are from a known microwave beam weapon. Any one of the technical departments of the attack services listed at the top of this article can build such a biological harassment weapon. It can be aimed at the target victims office, bedroom or vehicle and, within a week, have caused biological and emotional damage using a weapon that has no visible track of trajectory. It is designed to make the target victim think they are "going crazy" or "hearing sounds in their head". While this may sound pretty out there, web search "Embassy sonic attacks" on the top 5 non-Google search engines and read the very credible reports of these attacks.
- - In one case covert political partner: Google, transferred large sums of cash to dirty tricks contractors and then manually locked the media portion of the attacks into the top lines of the top pages of all Google searches globally, for years, with hidden embedded codes in the links and web-pages which multiplied the attacks on Victims by many magnitudes.
- - Covert Cartel financier: Google, placed Google's lawyer: Michelle Lee, in charge of the U.S. Patent Office and she, in turn, stacked all of the U.S. Patent Office IPR and ALICE review boards and offices with Google-supporting employees in order to rig the U.S. Patent Office to protect Google from being prosecuted for the vast patent thefts that Google engages in. Google has hundreds of patent lawsuits for technology theft and a number of those lawsuits refer to Google's operations as Racketeering, Monopolistic Cartel and Government Coup-like behaviors. Thousands of articles and investigations detail the fact that Google, essentially ran the Obama White House and provided over 80% of the key White House staff. A conflict-of-interest unlike any in American history. Google's investors personally told Applicant they would kill him. Google and the Obama Administration were the same entity. Applicant testified in the review that got Michelle Lee terminated and uncovered a tactical political and social warfare group inside Google who were financed by Federal and State funds.
- - Honeytraps and moles were employed by the attackers. In this tactic, people who covertly worked for the attackers were employed to approach the target in order to spy on and misdirect the subject.

- - Gawker Media, Gizmodo Media, Snopes, SPLC and other hired media assassins will be retained to produce "hatchet job" character assassination articles about you. Then those articles will be faxed, mailed and emailed to your employer and investors with a note saying: "You don't want to have anything to do with this person, do you..?" in order to get you fired from your job and get your loans or financing pulled. The attackers will use their round one attack media, that they authored, to create a round two second wave attack designed to end your life via economic warfare.
- - Mortgage and rental applications will have had red flags added to them in databases to prevent the targets from getting homes or apartments.
- - Krebs On Security, Wired, Ars Technica, The Wall Street Journal and most major IT publications have reported that hundreds of spy "back-doors" have been found on every Intel, AMD, Apple, Xfinity, Cisco, Microsoft, Juniper Networks motherboard, chip-set and hardware component set. This means that any kid with the "key" code can open any computer, server, router, cloud-network or other network connected device and read every file, photo, video, your calendar and email on your devices at any time from any location on Earth. The key codes have been released to every hacker community in the world for over ten years. There is now no government, corporate or personal data that can't be hacked, even data from decades ago. Every single one of your darkest secrets can be in the hands of your enemy within 60 minutes, or less. Important meetings you had planned with potential investors, employers, clients, dates, suppliers and others will suddenly get cancelled at the last minute. They will get cancelled because your enemies are reading your calendar remotely and covertly sending slander information to those you had hoped to engage with in order to sabotage your life. Nothing you have ever typed on a computer or Smartphone is safe. it WILL be acquired and it WILL be used against you.
- - McCarthy-Era "Black-lists" are created and employed against target victims who competed with Obama Administration executives and their campaign financiers to prevent them from getting funding and future employment.
- - Obama Administration targets were very carefully placed in a position of not being able to get jobs, unemployment benefits, disability benefits or acquire any possible sources of income. The retribution tactics were audacious, overt..and quite illegal.
- - There are thousands of additional Dirty Tricks tactics being used by these Attack Services yet Congress refuses to pass laws outlawing such attack services. The cost of an attack on a person ranges from $150,000.00 to over $50,000,000.00. While a Silicon Valley billionaire can afford to launch counter-measures to these attacks, any regular taxpayer will be utterly destroyed, and incapable of fighting back, against even the smallest version of one of these "kill orders". A number of modern office shootings are the results of these attacks against an individual who has lost everything because of the attack and has no options left.

Federal law enforcement, the United States Congress and the highest level investigators in the U.S., and abroad, have documented (per the FISA Memoâ... , Congressional Reports and federal employee testimony) and proven the fact that the Obama Administration regularly engaged in the operation of retribution, vendetta and reprisal campaigns known as hit-jobsâ... against domestic natural born U.S. citizen domestic taxpayers. The Federal Court, in at least one previous court case, has ruled that Applicants, in this particular matter, were the victims and target of a number of these attacks designed to inflict permanent medical, emotional, character assassination, brand negation, economic and career damage.

How A Modern Character Assassination and Political "Kill Order" Is Executed

By Robert Downsen

How and why did a Donald Trump stripper-date named "Stormy" or an Elon Musk sex party or a Kavanaugh drinking incident or the Moonves and Weinstein indiscretions suddenly hit the news at about the same time in news history?

It is all part of the modern trend in vendetta, revenge and political payback when a Senator or a tech oligarch issues a "kill order" on an opponent.

The client does not like to get their hands dirty so the actual social hit job is performed by companies such as:

IN-Q-Tel - (DNC); Gawker Media - (DNC); Jalopnik - (DNC); Gizmodo Media - (DNC); K2 Intelligence - (DNC); WikiStrat - (DNC); Podesta Group - (DNC); Fusion GPS - (DNC/GOP); Google - (DNC); YouTube - (DNC); Alphabet - (DNC); Facebook - (DNC); Twitter - (DNC); Think Progress - (DNC); Media Matters - (DNC); Black Cube - (DNC); Mossad - (DNC); Correct The Record - (DNC); Sand Line - (DNC/GOP); Blackwater - (DNC/GOP); Stratfor - (DNC/GOP); ShareBlue - (DNC); Wikileaks (DNC/GOP); Cambridge Analytica - (DNC/GOP); Sid Blumenthal- (DNC); David Brock - (DNC); Covington and Burling - (DNC), Perkins Coie - (DNC); Wilson Sonsini - (DNC) and hundreds of othersâ...! These are the people and companies that except cash, revolving door jobs, political appointments, insider trading stock in Silicon Valley tech companies, prostitutes and real estate in exchange for destroying the lives of others.

They deserve to be punished for the rest of their lives for taking away the lives of others in exchange for cash. Any company who is corrupt enough to hire any of these assassins should be forced out of business. These attack services are responsible for 90% of the "Fake News" problem in the world because they are the authors of most fake news. Congress must act to make these kinds of companies illegal!

These digital assassination services offer hit-jobs, character assassinations and economic reprisal programs to famous billionaires and corrupt politicians who are seeking revenge, retribution and vendetta executions.

In the case of reporters getting targeted for attacks, President Donald Trump has been accused by the liberal corporate media of whipping up a hateful frenzy against the press. But while CNNâ... s Jim Acosta grandstands against Trump, real journalists are still reeling from the draconian extrajudicial measures that Barack Obama and his administration used to target them for exposing truth.

This secretive targeting occurred while Obama speechwriter and hate-filled ANTIFA supporter Ben Rhodes was running â... Operation Echo Chamber.â... which reportedly continues, in which he fed information to willing corporate media scribes. â... They literally know nothing,â... Rhodes said of the twentysomething journalists he easily manipulated.

The Freedom of the Press Foundationâ... s Trevor Timm published documents showing how former attorney general Eric Holder changed the rules to more effectively intimidate and surveil members of the press.

Timm writes: â... Today, we are revealingâ... for the first timeâ... the Justice Departmentâ... s rules for targeting journalists with secret FISA court orders. The documents were obtained as part of a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit brought by Freedom of the Press Foundation and Knight First Amendment Institute at Columbia University.â...

Trending: Brennan and Clapper Accused of Hacking John Roberts To Blackmail Him

Here is the memo published by the Foundation, which dropped the documents in their entirety:

Obama is also clearly linked to the plot to obtain fraudulent FISA warrants on President Trumpâ... s team, as evidenced by Peter Strzok and Lisa Pageâ... s texts confirming that Obama was overseeing their fly-by-night operation.

Larry Schweikart reported for Big League Politics:

For months pundits and researchers have been pondering the mystery of the FISA approval that led to the illegal and historically titanic scandals to ever hit the U.S. government. Some have argued that Assistant Attorney General Rod Rosenstein knew the FISA was bogus when he extended it. Others have wondered if Special Counsel Robert Mueller knew about the fraudulent basis of the FISA when he used it, in part, to indict Michael Flynn. Other still, that Mueller was fooled by the FBI.

This is what President Trump calls â... SPYGATEâ... .

It may well be that the surveillance that was conducted began with UK intelligence services and then was fed back to the White House of Barack Obama. Hereâ... s the kicker:

President Barack Obama did not need a FISA warrant to authorize spying/electronic surveillance on Trump because Obama all along had legal authorization to by-pass the normal court vetting process. According to 50 U.S. Code 1802, the â... Electronic Surveillance Authorizationâ..._() â... Foreign intelligence in relation to a US person (Trump or his associates) is information thatâ... s necessary for the US to protect against attack, hostile acts, sabotage, . . . as well as other clandestine activities by a foreign power . . . OR . . . information relevant to national defense/security of the US, or the conduct of foreign affairs of the U.S.â... Such an authorization by Obama required certification by Attorney General Loretta Lynch that must be logged with the FISC court. (â... The [AG]+ shall immediately transmit under seal to the court [FISC] a copy of his certification.â... )

In short, the DOJ has this. If we are correct, a copy of that certification is currently under seal at least with the DOJ and the FISC.

This is what they are hiding.

However, the Act requires the AG to keep the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Senate Committee on Intelligence informed of these authorizations and unmaskings therein. See 1803 (a) (1) (C) If indeed this is what happened, did Lynch reportâ... or only selectively reportâ... to the committees in a way that excluded non-friendlies? Can you see why Adam Schiff, Mark Warner, and their ilk are terrified?

1) Obama authorized spying/electronic surveillance on Team Trump, by-passing normal judicial oversight.

2) To create â... foreign intelligence,â... John Brennan and others organized for UK intelligence to conduct surveillance on Trump and his associates, either from the UK or from UK assets within the U.S. This is another reason revealing this will unleash an excrement storm: the UK is about to be caught meddling bigly in an American election.

3) Lynch certified Obamaâ... s authorization which is now held under seal by DOJ (and FISC).

From this authorization, all unmaking followed, as well as the FBI fraudulent counter intel investigation and perhaps the FISA warrant too. Obama knew this was all fake when he made the authorization;

Lynch knew it was fake when she certified it; the entire inner circle, including the FBI, all knew. This takes the U.S. into uncharted territory, and could imperil any politician in the British government who supported this or had knowledge of it. Proving any of this would be difficult, as if confronted Lynch would almost certainly cover up and Obama would simply deny knowledge. Without a paper trail, a conviction might be a bridge too far. This is only one of thousands of "kill order" tactics introduced by the Obama Administration.

These are the playbook tactics that Senators and tech oligarchs most often use to destroy the lives of their political and business enemies:

- - Government agency bosses sometimes solicit the target victims with false promises of future loans, contracts or grants from their agency and cause the target victims to expend millions of dollars and years of their time for projects which those government bosses had covertly promised to their friends. They use the target victims as a "smokescreen" to cover their illegal government slush-funds for the victims competitors and personal enemies. By using this tactic, the attackers can drain the target victims funds and force them into an economic disaster in plain view of everyone without the government bosses fearing any reprisal for their scam.
- - Every match.com, okcupid.com, Plenty Of Fish, Seeking Arrangements and all other IAC-owned, or similar, dating sites (IAC is managed by Hillary Clinton's daughter) have had their profiles, texts, and inter-member communications, since those companies were started, hacked or purchased. The attack service providers use Palantir and In-Q-Tel financed data analysis software to analyze every activity in those dating services in order to find honey-trap, blackmail, sextortion and social conflict exploitation opportunities. If you had a bad date with someone, that someone will be hunted down and convinced to help harm, #metoo or "rape charge" the intended target. All dates involve a search for sex, so the likelihood that a sexual disappointment experience will exist in each persons dating history is high. Searching every past dating email and text of a subject is quite easy with modern software and hacking techniques. A synthetically amplified, PR-agency optimized sex scandal can destroy any target. Your dating experiences from the 70's or 80's will come back to haunt you decades later. Most dates involve drinking alcohol and taking drugs. If you were unattractive or had bad sexual skills your bad date will be called "date rape", "drugging your date for sex" and related twisted narratives that are designed to shame you, the target. If you try to get a date in the future, your potential date will be contacted by a third party who will slander and libel you to make sure your potential first date gets cancelled. Your social life will, essentially, end. Every photo on every dating site is cross checked with every other photo on the internet in order to cull your Facebook, LinkedIn, Snapchat and other social media together to create a total psychological manipulation profile data file on you. A single photo on a dating site can be cross searched on every mugshot archive, photo album and corporate database in the world within minutes using modern super-computers. Your sex life will be on public record in a flash.
- - Social Security, SSI, SDI, Disability and other earned benefits are stone-walled. Applications of targets are "lost". Files in the application process "disappeared". Lois Lerner hard drive "incidents" are operated in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.
- - Government officials and tech oligarchs contact members of the National Venture Capital association (NVCA) and created national "black-lists" to blockade target victims from ever receiving investor funding. This was also confirmed in a widely published disclosure by Tesla Motors Daryl Strydom and in published testimony. If Silicon Valley political campaign finance oligarchs black-list you (see the "AngelGate" Scandal and the "High Tech No Poaching Class Action Lawsuit" cases) you will never get investor funding again.
- - FOIA requests are hidden, frozen, stone-walled, delayed, lied about and only partially responded to in order to seek to hide information and run cover-ups.
- - State and federal employees will play an endless game of Catch-22 by arbitrarily determining that deadlines had passed that they, the government officials, had stonewalled and obfuscated applications for, in order to force these deadlines that they set, to appear to be missed. This can bankrupt a target victim.
- - Some Victims found themselves strangely poisoned, not unlike the Alexander Litvenko case. Heavy metals and toxic materials were found right after their work with the Department of Energy weapons and energy facilities. Many wonder if these "targets" were intentionally exposed to toxins in retribution for their testimony. The federal MSDS documents clearly show that a number of these people were exposed to deadly compounds and radiations, via DOE, without being provided with proper HazMat suits which DOE officials knew were required.
- - Victims employers are called, and faxed, and ordered to fire target victims from their places of employment, in the middle of the day, with no notice, as a retribution tactic.

- - On orders from Obama White House officials, DNC-financed Google, YouTube, Gawker Media and Gizmodo Media produce attack articles and defamation videos. Google locks this attack media on the internet on the top line, of the front page of all Google searches for a decade in front of 7.5 billion people, around the world. This attack-type uses over $40 million dollars in server farms, production costs and internet rigging. The forensic data acquired from tracking some of these attacks proves that Google rigs attacks against individuals on the internet and that all of Google's impressions are manually controlled by Google's executives who are also the main financiers and policy directors of the Obama Administration. This data was provided to the European Union for its ongoing prosecution of Google's political manipulation of public perceptions.
- - Victims HR and employment records, on recruiting and hiring databases, are embedded with negative keywords in order to prevent the victim targets from ever gaining future employment.
- - Gary D. Conley, Seth Rich, Rajeev Motwani and many other whistle-blowers in these matters, turned up dead under strange circumstances. It is very possible that some of these attack services, operated by former CIA operatives, even offer discrete murder-for-sale services using high-tech assassination tools that make murders look like heart attacks and brain failures.
- - Disability and VA complaint hearings and benefits are frozen, delayed, denied or subjected to lost records and "missing hard drives" as in the Lois Lerner case.
- - Paypal (A DNC-biased operation) and other on-line payments for on-line sales are de-platformed, delayed, hidden, or re-directed in order to terminate income potential for target victims who competed with the attackers interests and holdings.
- - DNS redirection, "website spoofing" sends target victims websites to dead ends where no sales orders or customer inquiries actually get back to the target. These internet revenue activity manipulations are conducted using Google and Amazon servers. All commercial storefronts and on-line sales attempts by target victims, will have had their sites hidden, or search engine de-linked by a massively resourced facility located in Virginia, Texas or Palo Alto, California in order to terminate revenue potentials for the target victims.
- - Over 50,000 trolls, shills, botnets and synth-blog deployments are deployed to place defamatory statements and disinformation about victims in front of 7.5 billion people around the world on the internet in order to seek to damage their federal testimony credibility by a massively resourced facility.
- - Campaign finance dirty tricks contractors are hired by campaign financiers to attack the friends and family members of the target victim in order to create low morale for the target victims psyche and motivation.
- - Are you getting weird headaches and hearing a "buzzing sound" in your head? The U.S. Government has now acknowledged that the Cuban, Chinese and other embassy "sonic attacks" are from a known microwave beam weapon. Any one of the technical departments of the attack services listed at the top of this article can build such a biological harassment weapon. It can be aimed at the target victims office, bedroom or vehicle and, within a week, have caused biological and emotional damage using a weapon that has no visible track of trajectory. It is designed to make the target victim think they are "going crazy" or "hearing sounds in their head". While this may sound pretty out there, web search "Embassy sonic attacks" on the top 5 non-Google search engines and read the very credible reports of these attacks.
- - In one case covert political partner: Google, transferred large sums of cash to dirty tricks contractors and then manually locked the media portion of the attacks into the top lines of the top pages of all Google searches globally, for years, with hidden embedded codes in the links and web-pages which multiplied the attacks on Victims by many magnitudes.
- - Covert Cartel financier: Google, placed Google's lawyer: Michelle Lee, in charge of the U.S. Patent Office and she, in turn, stacked all of the U.S. Patent Office IPR and ALICE review boards and offices with Google-supporting employees in order to rig the U.S. Patent Office to protect Google from being prosecuted for the vast patent thefts that Google engages in. Google has hundreds of patent lawsuits for technology theft and a number of those lawsuits refer to Google's operations as Racketeering, Monopolistic Cartel and Government Coup-like behaviors. Thousands of articles and investigations detail the fact that Google, essentially ran the Obama White House and provided over 80% of the key White House staff. A conflict-of-interest unlike any in American history. Google's investors personally told Applicant they would kill him. Google and the Obama Administration were the same entity. Applicant testified in the review that got Michelle Lee terminated and uncovered a tactical political and social warfare group inside Google who were financed by Federal and State funds.
- - Honeytraps and moles were employed by the attackers. In this tactic, people who covertly worked for the attackers were employed to approach the target in order to spy on and misdirect the subject.

- - Gawker Media, Gizmodo Media, Snopes, SPLC and other hired media assassins will be retained to produce "hatchet job" character assassination articles about you. Then those articles will be faxed, mailed and emailed to your employer and investors with a note saying: "You don't want to have anything to do with this person, do you..?" in order to get you fired from your job and get your loans or financing pulled. The attackers will use their round one attack media, that they authored, to create a round two second wave attack designed to end your life via economic warfare.
- - Mortgage and rental applications will have had red flags added to them in databases to prevent the targets from getting homes or apartments.
- - Krebs On Security, Wired, Ars Technica, The Wall Street Journal and most major IT publications have reported that hundreds of spy "back-doors" have been found on every Intel, AMD, Apple, Xfinity, Cisco, Microsoft, Juniper Networks motherboard, chip-set and hardware component set. This means that any kid with the "key" code can open any computer, server, router, cloud-network or other network connected device and read every file, photo, video, your calendar and email on your devices at any time from any location on Earth. The key codes have been released to every hacker community in the world for over ten years. There is now no government, corporate or personal data that can't be hacked, even data from decades ago. Every single one of your darkest secrets can be in the hands of your enemy within 60 minutes, or less. Important meetings you had planned with potential investors, employers, clients, dates, suppliers and others will suddenly get cancelled at the last minute. They will get cancelled because your enemies are reading your calendar remotely and covertly sending slander information to those you had hoped to engage with in order to sabotage your life. Nothing you have ever typed on a computer or Smartphone is safe. it WILL be acquired and it WILL be used against you.
- - McCarthy-Era "Black-lists" are created and employed against target victims who competed with Obama Administration executives and their campaign financiers to prevent them from getting funding and future employment.
- - Obama Administration targets were very carefully placed in a position of not being able to get jobs, unemployment benefits, disability benefits or acquire any possible sources of income. The retribution tactics were audacious, overt..and quite illegal.
- - There are thousands of additional Dirty Tricks tactics being used by these Attack Services yet Congress refuses to pass laws outlawing such attack services. The cost of an attack on a person ranges from $150,000.00 to over $50,000,000.00. While a Silicon Valley billionaire can afford to launch counter-measures to these attacks, any regular taxpayer will be utterly destroyed, and incapable of fighting back, against even the smallest version of one of these "kill orders". A number of modern office shootings are the results of these attacks against an individual who has lost everything because of the attack and has no options left.

Federal law enforcement, the United States Congress and the highest level investigators in the U.S., and abroad, have documented (per the â... FISA Memoâ... , Congressional Reports and federal employee testimony) and proven the fact that the Obama Administration regularly engaged in the operation of retribution, vendetta and reprisal campaigns known as â... hit-jobsâ... against domestic natural born U.S. citizen domestic taxpayers. The Federal Court, in at least one previous court case, has ruled that Applicants, in this particular matter, were the victims and target of a number of these attacks designed to inflict permanent medical, emotional, character assassination, brand negation, economic and career damage.

How Covert DNC Agents Infiltrate the Internet to Manipulate, Deceive, and Destroy Reputations

How the bad guys use Google, Facebook, Twitter and Match.com as weapons against the public

Glenn Greenwald

One of the many pressing stories that remains to be told from the Snowden archive is how western intelligence agencies are attempting to manipulate and control online discourse with extreme tactics of deception and reputation-destruction. Itâs time to tell a chunk of that story, complete with the relevant documents.

Over the last several weeks, I worked with NBC News to publish a series of articles about âdirty trickâtactics used by GCHQâs previously secret unit, JTRIG (Joint Threat Research Intelligence Group). These were based on four classified GCHQ documents presented to the NSA and the other three partners in the English-speaking âFive Eyesâalliance. Today, we at the Intercept are publishing another new JTRIG document, in full, entitled âThe Art of Deception: Training for Online Covert Operations.â

By publishing these stories one by one, our NBC reporting highlighted some of the key, discrete revelations: the monitoring of YouTube and Blogger, the targeting of Anonymous with the very same DDoS attacks they accuse âhacktivistsâ of using, the use of âhoney trapsâ (luring people into compromising situations using sex) and destructive viruses. But, here, I want to focus and elaborate on the overarching point revealed by all of these documents: namely, that these agencies are attempting to control, infiltrate, manipulate, and warp online discourse, and in doing so, are compromising the integrity of the internet itself.

Among the core self-identified purposes of JTRIG are two tactics: (1) to inject all sorts of false material onto the internet in order to destroy the reputation of its targets; and (2) to use social sciences and other techniques to manipulate online discourse and activism to generate outcomes it considers desirable. To see how extremist these programs are, just consider the tactics they boast of using to achieve those ends: âfalse flag operationsâ (posting material to the internet and falsely attributing it to someone else), fake victim blog posts (pretending to be a victim of the individual whose reputation they want to destroy), and posting ânegative informationâ on various forums. Here is one illustrative list of tactics from the latest GCHQ document weâre publishing today:

Other tactics aimed at individuals are listed here, under the revealing title “... discredit a target...” :

Then there are the tactics used to destroy companies the agency targets:

GCHQ describes the purpose of JTRIG in starkly clear terms: “... using online techniques to make something happen in the real or cyber world,â... including â... information ops (influence or disruption).â...”

Critically, the “... targetsâ... for this deceit and reputation-destruction extend far beyond the customary roster of normal spycraft: hostile nations and their leaders, military agencies, and intelligence services. In fact, the discussion of many of these techniques occurs in the context of using them in lieu of “... traditional law enforcementâ... against people suspected (but not charged or convicted) of ordinary crimes or, more broadly still, “... hacktivismâ... , meaning those who use online protest activity for political ends.

The title page of one of these documents reflects the agency's own awareness that it is pushing the boundaries by using cyber offensive techniques against people who have nothing to do with terrorism or national security threats, and indeed, centrally involves law enforcement agents who investigate ordinary crimes:

No matter your views on Anonymous, hackers or garden-variety criminals, it is not difficult to see how dangerous it is to have secret government agencies being able to target any individuals they want who have never been charged with, let alone convicted of, any crimes with these sorts of online, deception-based tactics of reputation destruction and disruption. There is a strong argument to make, as Jay Leiderman demonstrated in the Guardian in the context of the Paypal 14 hacktivist persecution, that the denial of service tactics used by hacktivists result in (at most) trivial damage (far less than the cyber-warfare tactics favored by the US and UK) and are far more akin to the type of political protest protected by the First Amendment.

The broader point is that, far beyond hacktivists, these surveillance agencies have vested themselves with the power to deliberately ruin people's reputations and disrupt their online political activity even though they've been charged with no crimes, and even though their actions have no conceivable connection to terrorism or even national security threats. As Anonymous expert Gabriella Coleman of McGill University told me, targeting Anonymous and hacktivists amounts to targeting citizens for expressing their political beliefs, resulting in the stifling of legitimate dissent. Pointing to this study she published, Professor Coleman vehemently contested the assertion that there is anything terrorist/violent in their actions.

Government plans to monitor and influence internet communications, and covertly infiltrate online communities in order to sow dissension and disseminate false information, have long been the source of speculation. Harvard Law Professor Cass Sunstein, a close Obama adviser and the White House's former head of the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, wrote a controversial paper in 2008 proposing that the US government employ teams of covert agents and pseudo-independent advocates to cognitively infiltrate online groups and websites, as well as other activist groups.

Sunstein also proposed sending covert agents into â... chat rooms, online social networks, or even real-space groupsâ... which spread what he views as false and damaging â... conspiracy theoriesâ... about the government. Ironically, the very same Sunstein was recently named by Obama to serve as a member of the NSA review panel created by the White House, one that â... while disputing key NSA claims â... proceeded to propose many cosmetic reforms to the agencyâ... s powers (most of which were ignored by the President who appointed them).

But these GCHQ documents are the first to prove that a major western government is using some of the most controversial techniques to disseminate deception online and harm the reputations of targets. Under the tactics they use, the state is deliberately spreading lies on the internet about whichever individuals it targets, including the use of what GCHQ itself calls â... false flag operationsâ... and emails to peopleâ... s families and friends. Who would possibly trust a government to exercise these powers at all, let alone do so in secret, with virtually no oversight, and outside of any cognizable legal framework?

Then there is the use of psychology and other social sciences to not only understand, but shape and control, how online activism and discourse unfolds. Todayâ... s newly published document touts the work of GCHQâ... s â... Human Science Operations Cell,â... devoted to â... online human intelligenceâ... and â... strategic influence and disruptionâ... :

Under the title “Online Covert Action”, the document details a variety of means to engage in “influence and info ops” as well as “disruption and computer net attack,” while dissecting how human beings can be manipulated using “leaders,” “trust,” “obedience” and “compliance” :

The documents lay out theories of how humans interact with one another, particularly online, and then attempt to identify ways to influence the outcomes â€¦ or â€¦ gameâ€¦ it:

We submitted numerous questions to GCHQ, including: (1) Does GCHQ in fact engage in “false flag operations” where material is posted to the Internet and falsely attributed to someone else?; (2) Does GCHQ engage in efforts to influence or manipulate political discourse online?; and (3) Does GCHQ’s mandate include targeting common criminals (such as boiler room operators), or only foreign threats?

As usual, they ignored those questions and opted instead to send their vague and nonresponsive boilerplate: “It is a longstanding policy that we do not comment on intelligence matters. Furthermore, all of GCHQ’s work is carried out in accordance with a strict legal and policy framework which ensures that our activities are authorised, necessary and proportionate, and that there is rigorous oversight, including from the Secretary of State, the Interception and Intelligence Services Commissioners and the Parliamentary Intelligence and Security Committee. All our operational processes rigorously support this position.â€¦

These agenciesâ€¦ refusal to â€¦ comment on intelligence mattersâ€¦ â€¦ meaning: talk at all about anything and everything they do â€¦ is precisely why whistleblowing is so urgent, the journalism that supports it so clearly in the public interest, and the increasingly unhinged attacks by these agencies so easy to understand. Claims that government agencies are infiltrating online communities and engaging in â€¦ false flag operationsâ€¦ to discredit targets are often dismissed as conspiracy theories, but these documents leave no doubt they are doing precisely that.

Whatever else is true, no government should be able to engage in these tactics: what justification is there for having government agencies target people â€¦ who have been charged with no crime â€¦ for reputation-destruction, infiltrate online political communities, and develop techniques for manipulating online discourse? But to allow those actions with no public knowledge or accountability is particularly unjustifiable.

How Dianne Feinstein Can Make Sure You Can Never Get A Job Again If You Vote Against Her

- Nancy Pelosi, Barbara Boxer, Ed Lee, Gavin Newsom and other politicians can access your voting records, every HR service and the hiring managers at every Bay Area company from their desktop computers.
- Black-listing of hated employees is a big thing in the Bay Area.
- The FBI has not yet been ordered by DOJ to halt this.
- Corrupt politicians can kill your career with one phone call or mouse click.

The High-Tech Employee Antitrust Litigation is a 2010 United States Department of Justice (DOJ) antitrust action and a 2013 civil class action against several Silicon Valley companies for alleged "no cold call" agreements which restrained the recruitment of high-tech employees. It proved that the main financiers of Nancy Pelosi, Barbara Boxer, Ed Lee, Gavin Newsom, Dianne Feinstein and other Bay Area political manipulators, can easily keep you from ever working again if you piss them off.

The defendants are Adobe, Apple Inc., Google, Intel, Intuit, Pixar, Lucasfilm and eBay, all high-technology companies with a principal place of business in the San Franciscoâ€¦ Silicon Valley area of California.

The civil class action was filed by five plaintiffs, one of whom has died in a possible hush-up-murder; it accused the tech companies of collusion between 2005 and 2009 to refrain from recruiting each other's employees.

Cold calling is one of the main methods used by companies in the high-technology sector to recruit employees with advanced and specialised skills, such as software and hardware engineers, programmers, animators, digital artists, Web developers and other technical professionals.<sup>[1]</sup> Cold calling involves communicating directly in any manner with another firm's employee who has not otherwise applied for a job opening. Cold calling may be done in person, by phone, letter, or email.<sup>[2]</sup> According to the legal brief filed by a plaintiff in one of the class-action cases, cold calling is an effective method of recruiting for the high-technology sector because "employees of other [high-technology] companies are often unresponsive to other recruiting strategies... [and] current satisfied employees tend to be more qualified, harder working, and more stable than those who are actively looking for employment."<sup>[3]</sup>

Amy Lambert, Google's associate general counsel, noted in a blog post shortly after the DOJ's actions, that Google's definition of cold calling does not necessarily eliminate recruiting by letter or email, but only the process of calling on the telephone. By implication, recruiting through LinkedIn incurs recruiting by "InMail" - LinkedIn's own mail contact system: "In order to maintain a good working relationship with these companies, in 2005 we decided not to "cold call" employees at a few of our partner companies. Our policy only impacted cold calling, and we continued to recruit from these companies through LinkedIn, job fairs, employee referrals, or when candidates approached Google directly. In fact, we hired hundreds of employees from the companies involved during this time period."

The challenged "no cold call" agreements are alleged bilateral agreements between high technology companies not to cold call each other's employees. The DOJ alleges that senior executives at each company negotiated to have their employees added to 'no call' lists maintained by human resources personnel or in company hiring manuals. The alleged agreements were not limited by geography, job function, product group, or time period. The alleged bilateral agreements were between: (1) Apple and Google, (2) Apple and Adobe, (3) Apple and Pixar, (4) Google and Intel, (5) Google and Intuit,<sup>[4]</sup> and (6) Lucasfilm and Pixar.<sup>[5]</sup>

The civil class action further alleges that agreements also existed to (1) "provide notification when making an offer to another [company]'s employee (without the knowledge or consent of the employee)" and (2) "agreements that, when offering a position to another company's employee, neither company would counteroffer above the initial offer."<sup>[3]</sup>

Department of Justice antitrust action

On September 24, 2010, the United States Department of Justice Antitrust Division filed a complaint in the US District Court for the District of Columbia alleging violations of Section 1 of the Sherman Act. In US v. Adobe Systems Inc., et al., the Department of Justice alleged that Adobe, Apple, Google, Intel, Intuit, and Pixar had violated Section 1 of the Sherman Act by entering into a series of bilateral "No Cold Call" Agreements to prevent the recruitment of their employees (a similar but separate suit was filed against Lucasfilm on December 21, 2010<sup>[6]</sup>). The DOJ alleged in their Complaint that the companies had reached "facially anticompetitive" agreements that "eliminated a significant form of competition...to the detriment of the affected employees who were likely deprived of competitively important information and access to better job opportunities." The DOJ also alleged that the agreements "were not ancillary to any legitimate collaboration," "were much broader than reasonably necessary for the formation or implementation of any collaborative effort," and "disrupted the normal price-setting mechanisms that apply in the labor setting."<sup>[4]</sup> The same day it filed the suit, the DOJ and the defendants proposed a settlement.<sup>[7]</sup>

A final judgment enforcing the settlement was entered by the court on March 17, 2011.<sup>[8]</sup> Although the DOJ Complaint only challenged the alleged "no cold call" agreements, in the settlement, the companies agreed to a more broad prohibition against "attempting to enter into, entering into, maintaining or enforcing any agreement with any other person to in any way refrain from, requesting that any person in any way refrain from, or pressuring any person in any way to refrain from soliciting, cold calling, recruiting, or otherwise competing for employees of the other person", for a period of five years; the court can grant an extension.<sup>[8]</sup> The settlement agreement does not provide any compensation for company employees affected by the alleged agreements.<sup>[9]</sup> Lucasfilm entered into a similar settlement agreement in December 2010.<sup>[5]</sup>

Civil class action

In re: High-Tech Employee Antitrust Litigation (U.S. District Court, Northern District of California 11-cv-2509 <sup>[10]</sup>) is a class-action lawsuit on behalf of over 64,000 employees of Adobe, Apple Inc., Google, Intel, Intuit, Pixar and Lucasfilm (the last two are subsidiaries of Disney) against their employer alleging that their wages were repressed due to alleged agreements between their employers not to hire employees from their competitors.<sup>[11][12]</sup> The case was filed on May 4, 2011 by a former software engineer at Lucasfilm and alleges violations of California's antitrust statute, Business and Professions Code sections 16720 et seq. (the "Cartwright Act"); Business and Professions Code section 16600; and California's unfair competition law, Business and Professions Code sections 17200, et seq. Focusing on the network of connections around former Apple CEO Steve Jobs, the Complaint alleges "an interconnected web of express agreements, each with the active involvement and participation of a company under the control of Steve Jobs...and/or a company that shared at least one member of Apple's board of directors." The alleged intent of this conspiracy was "to reduce employee compensation and mobility through eliminating competition for skilled labor."<sup>[13]</sup>

On October 24, 2013 the United States District Court for the Northern District of California granted class certification for all employees of Defendant companies from January 1, 2005 through January 1, 2010.<sup>[9]</sup>

As of October 31, 2013, Intuit, Pixar and Lucasfilm have reached a tentative settlement agreement. Pixar and Lucasfilm agreed to pay $9 million in damages, and Intuit agreed to pay $11 million in damages.<sup>[9]</sup> In May 2014, Judge Lucy Koh approved the $20 million settlement between Lucasfilm, Pixar, and Intuit and their employees. Class members in this settlement, which involved fewer than 8% of the 65,000 employees affected, will receive around $3,840 each.<sup>[14]</sup>

The trial of the class action for the remaining Defendant companies was scheduled to begin on May 27, 2014. The plaintiffs intended to ask the jury for $3 billion in compensation, a number which could in turn have tripled to $9 billion under antitrust law.<sup>[15]</sup> However, in late April 2014, the four remaining defendants, Apple Inc., Google, Intel and Adobe Systems, agreed to settle out of court. Any settlement must be approved by Judge Lucy Koh.<sup>[16][17]</sup>

On May 23, 2014, Apple, Google, Intel, Adobe agreed to settle for $324.5 million. Lawyers sought 25% in attorneys' fees, plus expenses of as much as $1.2 million, according to the filing. Additional award payments of $80,000 would be sought for each named plaintiff who served as a class representative.<sup>[18]</sup> Payouts will average a few thousand dollars based on the salary of the employee at the time of the complaint.

In June 2014, Judge Lucy Koh expressed concern that the settlement may not be a good one for the plaintiffs. Michael Devine, one of the plaintiffs, said the settlement is unjust. In a letter he wrote to the judge he said the settlement represents only one-tenth of the $3 billion in compensation the 64,000 workers could have made if the defendants had not colluded.<sup>[19]</sup>

On August 8, 2014, Judge Koh rejected the settlement as insufficient on the basis of the evidence and exposure. Rejecting a settlement is unusual in such cases. This left the defendants with a choice between raising their settlement offer or facing a trial.<sup>[20]</sup>

On September 8, 2014, Judge Koh set April 9, 2015 as the actual trial date for the remaining defendants, with a pre-trial conference scheduled for December 19, 2014. Also, as of early September 2014, the defendants had re-entered mediation to determine whether a new settlement could be reached.<sup>[21]</sup>

A final approval hearing was held on July 9, 2015.<sup>[22]</sup> On Wednesday September 2, 2015, Judge Lucy H. Koh signed an order granting Motion for Final Approval of Class Action Settlement. The settlement website stated that Adobe, Apple, Google, and Intel has reached a settlement of $415 million and other companies settled for $20 million.

According to the settlement website, Gilardi & Co., LLC distributed the settlement to class members the week of December 21, 2015.

While working at Google, Schmidt was involved in activities<sup>[47]</sup> that later became the subject of the High-Tech Employee Antitrust Litigation case that resulted in a settlement of $415 million paid by Adobe, Apple, Google and Intel to employees. In one incident, after receiving a complaint from Steve Jobs of Apple, Schmidt sent an email to Google's HR department saying; "I believe we have a policy of no recruiting from Apple and this is a direct inbound request. Can you get this stopped and let me know why this is happening? I will need to send a response back to Apple quickly so please let me know as soon as you can. Thanks Eric".<sup>[48]</sup> Schmidt's email led to a recruiter for Google being "terminated within the hour" for not having adhered to the illegal scheme. Under Schmidt, there was a "Do Not Call list" of companies Google would avoid recruiting from.<sup>[49]</sup> According to a court filing, another email exchange shows Google's human resources director asking Schmidt about sharing its no-cold-call agreements with competitors. Schmidt responded that he preferred it be shared "verbally, since I don't want to create a paper trail over which we can be sued later?"<sup>[47][50]</sup> On August 28, 2006, Schmidt was elected to Apple Inc.'s board of directors, a position he held until August 2009.<sup>[11][51]</sup>

Former Google employee James Damore filed a class action lawsuit Monday against the tech giant, alleging discrimination against conservative and white male employees.

The former software engineer worked for Google from 2013 until August when his employment was terminated.

He was fired after he drafted and circulated an internal memo concerning politics, diversity and gender, which went viral, sparking colleagues to send Mr. Damore threats. According to the legal complaint, Mr. Damore drafted the memo in response to diversity workshops in an attempt to create debate about the company's political correctness and hiring practices.

â... Google employees who expressed views deviating from the majority view at Google on political subjects raised in the workplace and relevant to Google's employment policies and its business, such as â... diversityâ... hiring policies, â... bias sensitivity,â... or â... social justice,â... were/are singled out, mistreated, and systematically punished and terminated from Google, in violation of their legal rights,â... read Mr. Damore's complaint filed at the Superior Court of California in Santa Clara.

Mr. Damore is joined by another former Google employee as plaintiffs in the action, and they seek to represent all Google employees who have been discriminated against due to their gender, race or political views. According to the complaint, Mr. Damore spoke to Meghana Rao, who worked for Google's human resources department, about conservatives feeling disenfranchised at the company. Ms. Rao reportedly said she had heard similar complaints from other employees.

He alleges the company blacklisted conservatives and threatened them with termination.

His lawsuit proves high-tech blacklisting and asks the court to issue both monetary and injunctive relief.

When Dianne Feinstein's Chief of Staff isn't contracting Fusion GPS or Black Cube to attack citizens, he has a rolodex of names at tech companies he can call to get you black-listed. Even worse, he has a list of IT staff he can call. These, mostly East Indian, IT contacts work at BambooHR, Zoho People, Axciom, Gusto, Oracle, Taleo, Trakstar, Freshteam, ClearCompany, Workday, ADP Workforce Now, UltiPro, Dayforce HCM, Kronos Workforce Central, iCIMS, CivicHr, PurelyHR Time-Off, 7Geese, Collage, Perdoo, Qandle, Splunk, Zimyo HRMS, Xobin Interact, Palantir and other firms you may not even know existed.

With just a few keystrokes, John Doe is "red flagged", "black-listed", "negged", "shadow-banned" and removed from the job pool. Covert codes and meta-tags are inserted into the databases so that John Doe will never get a second interview. John will never be able to see this hidden codes that will end his life. All of these companies have the ability to cross-examine each other's databases. Of course, the NSA looks at all of that data.

This reprisal vendetta process was said have been created by Black Cube in order to help Obama covertly attack his enemies.

Even if John Doe has the finest work experience, the most impressive letters of reference, incredible work accomplishments and a resume to-die-for... he is now dead in the career market because he pissed off a corrupt Senator!

How Michael Avenatti Learned DNC Character Assassination Political Dark Arts Under Rahm Emanuel

In the 1990s, as an entry-level opposition researcher, Avenatti once climbed aboard a moving train to get research to FedEx on time.

Many politicians spent their younger days working or volunteering for campaigns, and they now regale voters with stories about knocking on doors for a candidate whose virtue appealed to their young idealism.

But Michael Avenatti, the TV-ready lawyer representing Stormy Daniels in her legal battle with Donald Trump, began his political career as a trainee in what is now one of the least sympathetic places in Democratic politics: as an opposition researcher for the Clinton machine.

Now Avenatti is considering running for president, and his origin story will test a dark thesis: that what Democrats want, more than hope or change or a return to normal, is simply to destroy Donald Trump. Avenatti is already making that pitch. In a speech last week at an Iowa Democratic fundraiser, an early presidential testing ground, he positioned himself as a fighter willing to brawl with Trump in a way other candidates would find uncomfortable. He has taunted the president and his team in cable news appearances and on Twitter, driving media fervor with mysteriously obtained (and released) financial information about Trump lawyer Michael Cohen.

In the 1990s, according to Avenatti, he worked on 150 campaigns across 42 states, almost exclusively for Democrats. “I worked on mayoral, congressional, gubernatorial, senatorial. You name it. I’ve worked on Democratic campaigns,” he said in an interview.

The races, he recalled, included one of Joe Biden’s Senate campaigns, a Senate race in Pennsylvania, a Philadelphia mayoral race, the 1994 Iowa gubernatorial race, and others. He worked in Ohio on an insurance-related ballot issue. And he remembers fondly victories like Karen Shepherd’s, who won a narrow race for a Utah congressional seat in 1992.

â... Someone said to me the other day that 2018 is the year of the woman in American politics. I chuckled and said, â... Iâ... m getting really old,â... â... Avenatti said. â... I worked on the last year of the woman in 1992. It was fresh off the Thomas confirmation hearings, and women were rightfully outraged.â...

Opposition research can be dry, boring, difficult work: pulling property records and financial filings, reading old news stories and books, and listening to hours of old interviews that may not produce anything useful, and traveling to libraries and courthouse basements to pull those records, stories, and tapes.

Avenattiâ... s jobs were those kind of entry-level basics. But the work was for some of the central players in Democratic politics over the last few decades, in a field where the difference between an OK researcher and a great one is vast, and outside of discipline, the core competency is simple: news judgment. Avenatti got his start in 1989 at St. Louis University working on the campaign of the late George â... Buzzâ... Westfall, who was elected St. Louis County Executive the next year.

Tom Irwin, Westfallâ... s campaign manager, said that early in the campaign, the candidateâ... s wife brought in a letter from a student who hoped to volunteer. â... He was poised. He was ready. He was one of the core guys around that campaign,â... Irwin said.

The Westfall campaign was being advised by the Research Group, a political consulting firm with a generic name that specialized in opposition research. It was run by Rahm Emanuel.

Then and now, Emanuel was known for a brutal, high-intensity style that began with â... oppo.â... (â... All I can say is, 'take no prisoners' works,â... George Stephanopoulos told the Washington Post in 1992 of Emanuel, after he went from research in Chicago to raising millions for Bill Clintonâ... s campaign â... and since then to the White House to Congress back to the White House and is presently mayor of Chicago.)

Irwin said that Emanuelâ... s firm requested a reliable staffer within the Westfall campaign with whom it could coordinate tasks like pulling public documents in St. Louis County. The campaign appointed Avenatti for the role, and Irwin said that he quickly excelled.

â... Rahm always said this quote, 'Politics is the last true meritocracy,'â... Mike Plante, a seasoned opposition researcher who worked closely with Avenatti and Emanuel, told BuzzFeed News. â... In politics either youâ... re successful or youâ... re not, and sometimes you find these diamonds in the rough. You can rise to the top quickly, and thatâ... s exactly what happened with Mike.â... Avenatti continued his young political career as a â... busy boyâ... when he worked on the campaign of former Missouri representative and House majority leader Dick Gephardt. He spent a majority of his time clipping news articles, sifting through records, and making copies in libraries and clerksâ... offices.

In a field known for its share of earnest young staffers, Avenatti made a strong impression. After repeatedly complaining to one clerk that the printer was out of toner, a colleague recalled, Avenatti wrote down the printer model and bought his own toner cartridge that he would install and remove every day. (â... Thatâ... s true,â... Avenatti said.)

Avenatti was also tasked with compiling the research that had been done during the week and shipping it North Carolina to Plante, who was leading the opposition research team on the Gephardt campaign. In one instance, Avenatti was running late to ship the research with another staffer when their car got stuck in standstill traffic thanks to a passing train. Avenatti, fearing he wouldnâ... t make it in time, climbed onto the moving train, hopped to the other side, and ran to the FedEx to deliver the research â... a move that earned him the respect of Plante and Emanuel.

Avenatti, fearing he wouldnâ... t make it in time, climbed onto the moving train, hopped to the other side, and ran to the FedEx to deliver the research.

A representative for Emanuel didn't respond to requests for comment.

Avenatti graduated law school in 1999 and began his legal career, but throughout the 1990s when he was a student, Avenatti continued working in research until about 1997, he said, first with Emanuel's firm.

The Research Group wound down when Emanuel left to work on Clinton's campaign, but Avenatti said he worked under other operatives who had started their own political consulting shops, like Plante and Ace Smith, who now advises high-profile politicians like the probable next governor of California, Gavin Newsom, and likely presidential candidate Sen. Kamala Harris. (At a book party for Smith earlier this summer, Harris dubbed him the father of oppo research.)

Now, Avenatti wants Democratic voters to know that he is not, in fact, some political newcomer, and he has become touchy when critics suggest his flirtation with a run for president is a Trump-inspired publicity stunt. On Twitter, he fired back at conservative Washington Post columnist Jennifer Rubin, who said on MSNBC that Avenatti had never been a Democratic operative or candidate. "I think looking at him, Democrats would and should be insulted that he thinks he can come into their party at the last moment and run for president," she said.

"When Jennifer Rubin says I'm a Johnny-come-lately or that the Democratic Party should be outraged that I came out of nowhere, that's a bunch of nonsense," Avenatti told BuzzFeed News. "I've worked on more Democratic campaigns than anyone I know."

It's a change of emphasis for Avenatti. When he first lit up TV with his defense of Daniels, his adult film actor client, his past work in Democratic politics became something of a liability, providing a hook for the idea that the legal battle against Trump was politically motivated. Avenatti called those charges laughable at the time, denying the notion that Daniels was backed by Democratic Party interests and downplaying his political work as ancient history.

Avenatti maintained that he hasn't changed his position on his political past. "As it relates to a potential political career, I'm more the client," he said. "As it relates to Stormy Daniels, I'm the attorney."

And as client, Avenatti is already positioning himself. He posted on Twitter a summary of his policy stances on topics like immigration (he doesn't support abolishing ICE) and jobs, while embracing progressives on issues like Medicare for all. He described his political philosophy to the Washington Post as a Bill Clinton Democrat who embraces a few fundamental concepts of the progressive left.

Avenatti has never served in office, and he has stressed that his greatest appeal is a willingness to aggressively take on Trump.

Stringer / Reuters

Avenatti in Iowa last week.

"At first I thought this was just another ploy to raise his profile, but he's actually taking this seriously," one Democratic strategist told BuzzFeed News. "I think he's offering his political background for some of those critics, but his main push is going to be that he'll go toe-to-toe with Trump and right now the Democratic base would drag themselves through the desert and back for someone that would do that."

This weekend, Avenatti will travel to New Hampshire, the first-in-the-nation primary state, for a Democratic summer picnic. (BuzzFeed News spoke to Avenatti in a phone interview from Guatemala, where he was helping to reunite a boy in US custody whose mother had been deported.)

In a way, his political work could serve him well in a Trump-fueled cable news environment, given that the entire point of opposition research is dropping a nugget of information to influence the media narrative.

When Avenatti talks of his political work, a somewhat familiar presidential campaign refrain â... about the dangers of politics and the importance of connecting with voters â... takes shape. Avenatti said that he was burned out from his political experience before leaving for law. â... I have seen the soft underbelly of politics at that point and I was fairly disillusioned.â...

And yet, Avenatti said his time in the political arena allowed him to travel the country and talk with people, a life lesson he said would be beneficial if he does decide to run for president.

â... I think that experience has been very helpful in my legal career,â... Avenatti said. â... Itâ... s been very helpful in connection in this [Stormy Daniels] case, and it would be helpful in the case that I decide to run.â...

They wanted him dead.

For years, a clandestine U.S. intelligence team had tracked a man they knew was high in the leadership of al Qaeda — an operative some believed had a hand in plotting the gruesome 2009 suicide attack in Afghanistan that killed seven CIA officers.

Their pursuit was personal, and by early 2014, according to a source directly involved in the operation, the agency had the target under tight drone surveillance. “We literally had a bead on this guy’s head and just needed authorization from Washington to pull the trigger,” said the source.

Then something unexpected happened. While agents waited for the green light, the al Qaeda operative’s name, as well as information about the CIA’s classified surveillance and plan to kill him in Pakistan, suddenly appeared in the U.S. press.

Abdullah al-Shami, it turned out, was an American citizen, and President Obama and his national security advisers were torn over whether the benefits of killing him would outweigh the political and civil liberties backlash that was sure to follow.

In interviews with several current and former officials, the al-Shami case was cited as an example of what critics say was the Obama White House’s troublesome tendency to mishandle some of the nation’s most delicate intelligence — especially regarding the Middle East — by leaking classified information in an attempt to sway public opinion on sensitive matters.

By the end of Mr. Obama’s second term, according to sources who spoke anonymously with The Washington Times, the practices of leaking, ignoring and twisting intelligence for political gain were ingrained in how the administration conducted national security policy.

Those criticisms have resurfaced in the debate over whether overall intelligence fumbling by the Obama White House in its final months may have amplified the damage wrought by suspected Russian meddling in the U.S. presidential election last year.

On repeated occasions during the Obama era, high-level sources and some lawmakers lamented to The Washington Times, the president’s inner circle ignored classified briefings and twisted intelligence to fit political goals. Long before Donald Trump appeared on the White House campaign scene, many pointed to an incident during the 2012 election cycle as the most dramatic evidence of how that approach affected the handling of national security threats.

â... Understating the threatâ...

On the campaign trail in 2012, Mr. Obama declared that al Qaeda was â... on the run,â... despite a flow of intelligence showing that the terrorist group was metastasizing â... a circumstance that led to the rise of the Islamic State.

Many Americans believed the president was justifiably touting a major success of his first term with the U.S. Special Forces killing of al Qaeda founder Osama bin Laden in 2011. But the gulf between Mr. Obamaâ... s campaign pronouncements and classified briefings provided to Congress touched off a heated debate in intelligence circles over whether the president was twisting the facts for political gain.

â... Candidate Obama was understating the threat,â... then-House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence Committee Chairman Mike Rogers told The Times in an interview after the 2012 election. â... To say the core [was] decimated and therefore we [had] al Qaeda on the run was not consistent with the overall intelligence assessment at the time.â...

Reflecting back this month, Mr. Rogers suggested that Mr. Obama â... like many presidents before him â... had a propensity for pushing certain politically advantageous narratives even if they contradicted classified intelligence.

Indeed, controversy has long swirled around politicized intelligence and leaks. The George W. Bush administration was accused of â... stovepipingâ... intelligence it needed for its case to invade Iraq in 2003 while ignoring bits that may have undercut the rationale for war.

That case blossomed into a major scandal known as the â... Plame affair.â... White House staffer Scooter Libby was convicted of lying to investigators about the leak of the name of covert CIA officer Valerie Plame, whose husband had challenged the administrationâ... s claims about Iraqâ... s weapons of mass destruction. President Bush later commuted Mr. Libbyâ... s sentence.

With regard to the Obama White House, Mr. Rogers told The Times, the circumstances were different but no less disturbing. â... Over the course of their time in office, the Obama administrationâ... s world got smaller and smaller,â... said the Michigan Republican, who retired from Congress in 2015. â... They listened to fewer and fewer different opinions. When you do that, that is how you miss things.â...

â... Heart was never in itâ...

Chaos and instability in the Middle East factored into one Obama-era intelligence leak that officials now say badly undermined national security.

The CIAâ... s covert â... Train and Equipâ... program was crafted to aid forces seeking to overthrow Syrian President Bashar Assad after the 2011 Arab Spring protests exploded into a civil war in Syria.

Train and Equip began with a flow of â... nonlethal aidâ... to certain Syrian rebel groups, but as its budget ballooned to some $1 billion, the program morphed into an unwieldy and ineffective effort to assist an unconventional military campaign.

One former senior intelligence official said the program was badly undermined because the White House was constantly leaking details of efforts to build a Free Syrian Army with cash, weapons and intelligence.

â... Obama had drawn a red line on Syria over chemical weapons, but then he didnâ... t do [expletive],â... the former official told The Times. â... The White House was facing a lot of political pressure to show they had policy for Syria, so they leaked the CIAâ... s covert action plan. They leaked it for purely political reasons, so they could say, â... Look, look, we have a Syria strategy.â... â...

Kenneth Pollack, a former CIA analyst now with the conservative American Enterprise Institute think tank in Washington, said other factors also undermined any chance for the program to succeed. Mr. Obama and his top aides were openly wary of being dragged deeper into the Syrian fight while the administration was trying to execute a strategic â... pivot to Asiaâ... â... away from the heavy U.S. foreign policy focus on the Middle East.

â... Obamaâ... s heart was never in it, and the administration wanted nothing to do with it,â... Mr. Pollack told The Times. â... He mostly did it to avoid domestic political blowback. We could have done so much more, but the way it was run, it killed itself.â...

Mr. Pollack, who once worked in the Clinton White House, said the programâ... s recruitment vetting was ridiculous. â... The [Obama] administration more or less insisted, â... We will only accept applicants â...! who had never met a jihadist.â... The vetting standards were absurd and excluded almost everyone who had any contact with the opposition in Syria,â... Mr. Pollack said.

â... It was like they thought we were going to wage a civil war against the Assad government with members of the social pages of The New York Times,â... he said. â... The Harvard crew team was not going to show up.â...

In the long run, the policyâ... s failure provided a clear window for Iran and Russia to expand their military presence and political influence into the power vacuum created by Syriaâ... s war.

â... Unmaskingâ...

And then there was unmasking.

Controversy has swirled for the past year around the Obama administrationâ... s use of a process that allowed high-level White House officials to learn the redacted identities of Americans swept up in classified surveillance against suspected foreign operatives during the months surrounding the presidential election.

For decades, national security officials at the highest level have used their security clearances to engage in the process known as â... unmaskingâ... while reading raw intercepts from around the world for better understanding of relationships that might impact Americaâ... s safety.

President Carterâ... s hawkish national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, was known by Americaâ... s spies as one who â... loved raw intelligence,â... according to Bob Woodwardâ... s book â... Veil, The Secret Wars of the CIA, 1981-1987.â...

â... Unmasking itself is not nefarious or conspiratorial; itâ... s done all the time around the world by ambassadors and CIA station chiefs,â... said one former CIA clandestine service officer who spoke with The Times. â... Itâ... s a standard procedure and involves a rigorous and bureaucratic process â...! to ensure whoeverâ... s seeking the unmasking of names has a legitimate reason.â...

But Republicans believe the process â... and the safeguards against abuse â... went terribly awry in the final months of the bitter campaign between Mr. Trump and Democrat Hillary Clinton and through the transition period between Mr. Trumpâ... s unexpected victory and inauguration.

Remarks by former Trump National Security Adviser Michael Flynn, as well as Mr. Trumpâ... s son-in-law, Jared Kushner, and former top White House strategist Steve Bannon, were all captured in surveillance of a Trump Tower meeting in December 2016. Susan E. Rice, Mr. Obamaâ... s national security adviser, has since acknowledged she asked that the identities of the Americans in the surveillance be revealed, citing what she said were legitimate concerns about the purpose of the group's meeting with foreigners.

Although the unmasking itself may have been justified, the former CIA clandestine service officer said, what came next was dangerous.

â... The issue is when any names that have been unmasked end up getting leaked to the press,â... the former officer said. â... And that is certainly what looks like happened vis-a-vis the Obama administrationâ... s unmasking of Trump officials who were in meetings with Russians or Turks that were under American intelligence surveillance.â...

Rep. Devin Nunes, California Republican and chairman of the House intelligence committee, has gone further, suggesting that Obama administration officials strategically leaked the names to smear Mr. Trump and fuel a narrative that the Trump campaign was secretly working with foreign forces.

â... Come on, Mr. Presidentâ...

Suspicion that the Obama White House intentionally leaked the unmasked names has been fueled by what intelligence sources say was the administration track record of other sensitive leaks â... which stretched back to the Abdullah al-Shami case in Afghanistan.

CIA agents were shocked when their classified drone surveillance against al-Shami suddenly appeared in 2014 reports by The Associated Press and The New York Times, one intelligence source told The Washington Times. â... Thereâ... s no question this guy got wind of the reports,â... said the source. â... The leak gave him a heads-up, and he suddenly disappeared. We lost our bead on him.â...

Some at the CIA were outraged. Agents had been tracking the al Qaeda operative since early 2009, believing he had been directly involved in a bomb attack that injured several officials at U.S. Forward Operating Base Chapman in Afghanistan. Al-Shamiâ... s fingerprints turned up on packing tape around a second bomb that didnâ... t explode.

Roughly a year later, there was another attack on Chapman, a key clandestine operations center in Afghanistan, in which seven CIA officers were killed. Some suspected al-Shami played a role in that attack as well.

But as badly as the CIA wanted al-Shami dead, the case carried controversial legal questions.

Abdullah al-Shami â... Arabic for â... Abdullah the Syrianâ... â... was the nom de guerre of a young man named Muhanad Mahmoud al-Farekh. Although raised in Dubai, al-Farekh was an American citizen because he was born in Texas.

By the time the CIA had him in its crosshairs in 2014, Mr. Obama was reeling from the furor sparked by his authorization of a drone strike in 2011 that killed another American citizen: al Qaeda propagandist Anwar al-Awlaki in Yemen.

The American Civil Liberties Union condemned the al-Awlaki strike as a violation of U.S. law because al-Awlaki had â... never been charged with any crimeâ... in an American court.

Fearful of a similar reaction, the Obama administration decided the best course of action would be to leak information about the al-Shami case to stir up public awareness of the conundrum facing the president, the former intelligence officials said.

“... Look,” said the source, “... I actually appreciate that Obama didn’t like the idea of killing another American without due process. But was leaking this stuff really the right way to handle this?”

“... I mean, come on Mr. President, it’s your finger on the trigger. You’re the one who decides. All we do is aim the gun,” said the source, who said it was fortunate that al-Shami was later captured alive and secretly flown to the United States for trial.

The al Qaeda operative was convicted in September in U.S. federal court in New York on terrorism charges under his birth name, Muhanad Mahmoud al-Farekh.

The 31-year-old is slated to be sentenced next month

George Soros Shut It Down for Tucker Carlson Advertiser Using MoveOn.org Puppet

Stunning new evidence shines light on a George Soros-backed effort to shut down the advertising revenue of Fox News Channel host Tucker Carlson, in what looks like more foreign meddling in the inalienable rights of American citizens.

On immigration, Tucker Carlson said last night, "We have a moral obligation to admit the world's poor, they tell us, even if it makes our own country poorer, and dirtier, and more divided."

This apparently triggered the likes of George Soros and company, who quickly went to work attacking Carlson.

Typical tricks.

Soros, a quickly aging Jewish businessman and philanthropic mastermind, has seen an increasing threat in the surging popularity of Tucker Carlson, whose only crime is that he notices things and understands the equation.

It wouldn't be long before Jordan Uhl, a puppet employee of Move On and George Soros, took to social media to attempt to remove Tucker Carlson's advertising revenue on Fox News.

Last night, Tucker Carlson opened his show by saying immigration makes America "poorer, and dirtier, and more divided."

An offensive, dehumanizing and racist statement.

That segment ended with an ad from @pacificlif. pic.twitter.com/ryjauzYloq Jordan Uhl (@JordanUhl) December 14, 2018

Here's Tucker's comments next to neo-Nazi Andrew Anglin on his site "Daily Stormer"

Again, @pacificlif advertised on that segment. pic.twitter.com/LixjN3tHJJ Jordan Uhl (@JordanUhl) December 14, 2018

Enough is enough. Take action. Tell advertisers to stop sponsoring Fox News <https://t.co/bQeHJepOoo> â... jordan (@JordanUhl) December 14, 2018

Jordan Uhl then continued his tirade against Tucker Carlson by reaching out directly to one of Fox News's advertisers on the show, Pacific Life, in an effort to pull the financial incentive.

On Twitter, Uhl bragged about what he was doing showing screenshots of the messages he's sent to the company.

UPDATE: @PacificLife says they will not advertise with Tucker Carlson in the next few weeks and reevaluate their relationship with him going forward.

Will keep an eye on Tucker and see if/when they resume advertising and let you all know. <pic.twitter.com/DjiC7NiBFG> â... jordan (@JordanUhl) December 14, 2018

Pacific Life apparently caved to the pressure, without hesitation.

The company then issued their own statement as to their decision to pull advertising from Fox News's... and Tucker Carlson's... s hourly series, which airs Monday through Friday evenings.

A message from Pacific Life: <pic.twitter.com/bDq9hzia53> â... Pacific Life (@pacificlife) December 14, 2018

That didn't put a stop to the gleeful gloating of Jordan Uhl, who continued to smear Tucker Carlson and his supporters for his rhetoric.

Soon, Uhl would demand that the other advertisers on Tucker Carlson's... s nightly series follow the cowardice of Pacific Life, and end their advertising.

Fox News doubled down on Tucker's comments.

Pacific Life dropped.

What about his other advertisers? @ask\_progressive@subaru\_usa@mitsucars@expedia@CapitalOne@indeed@LibertyMutual@Va <pic.twitter.com/9WZ1Llj6sw> â... jordan (@JordanUhl) December 14, 2018

If you can't silence the message of your opponent, you attempt to remove his source of funding. When that doesn't work, you create a false controversy through the use of social media in order to pressure the advertisers.

Tucker Carlson isn't alone. This tactic is one being used by modern-day Marxists against anyone and everyone they deem as a threat.

Prominent insurance company Pacific Life is pausing and reevaluating its advertising relationship with Tucker Carlson's Fox News show after a Thursday night segment during which he suggested that mass immigration makes the United States "dirtier."
<https://t.co/TzHcX2929F> â... Kyle Griffin (@kylegriffin1) December 14, 2018

One of the more common methods for use in the case of average Americans is that they're simply trying to deplatform those with â... wrong thinkâ... from social media.

If you express a controversial opinion that the mainstream powers that be disagree with, you're banned or suspended if not permanently from YouTube, Twitter, Reddit, and Facebook. Even Gab has suspended users while proclaiming to be a â... free speechâ... website.

Here is Richard Spencer saying that "there's no question" that Fox News' Tucker Carlson is aware of the Alt-Right and that Carlson, along with frequent Fox guest Ann Coulter, is one of the "very few" mainstream conservatives he finds interesting. <pic.twitter.com/RXSmlE9H3K> â... Jason Campbell (@JasonSCampbell) December 15, 2018

This type of behavior is a tactic utilized against many cultures throughout history, which in turn have given birth to furious and oftentimes fascist movements.

George Soros is one of the world's most notorious allegedly self-hating â... philanthropists,â... whose many endeavors include MoveOn.org.

Soros no doubt sees a legitimate and rising threat in Tucker Carlson, as do the elite establishment media.

In recent weeks, they've labeled Tucker Carlson everything from a â... White Nationalist,â... to a neo-Nazi for his hard-line immigration views. Those views are popular among the majority of Americans, who voted for Donald Trump in order to build a wall along the Southern border. Throughout the last two years, vicious assaults such as this have become the social norm among the left.

They're tyrants, plain and simple.

What ever you do, dont retweet this to @pacificlife We dont want them to know that every red state conservative will be done with them as an insurance provider for bailing out on @TuckerCarlson <https://t.co/sOXy54IS2f> â... Mark Young (@MarkYoungTruth) December 15, 2018

Americans aren't taking this lying down, and have sworn to revolt against Pacific Life in response.

Many are switching insurance policies away from Pacific Life for their desire to side with an international and wanted criminal, George Soros.

Pacific Life Insurance company is succumbing to liberal pressure and cutting their advertising from Tucker Carlson's show. Time to switch your policy.

Here are alternatives:

- Northwestern Mutual (best in class)
- State Farm Life
- Guardian Life

Get woke, go broke. <https://t.co/IdIRhBtFK9> â... Curse (@cursedsalad) December 15, 2018

They'll soon understand that they've chosen to mess with the wrong man.

How The FBI Will Stall Your Crime Investigation If Obama Tells Them To # War With FBI, DOJ: To File Contempt Action Over Anti-Trump Bias

by Tyler Durden

Five weeks ago, House Speaker Paul Ryan accused the DOJ and FBI of â... *stonewalling*â... the House Intelligence Committeeâ... s wide-ranging subpoena for all pertinent information about how the largely unsubstantiated â... Trump dossierâ... played into the DOJâ... s decision to launch the infamous Trump collusion investigation. At the time, the speaker said the agency was preparing to turn over the information requested by the committee, but despite his assurances, the promised documents never materialized.

Then yesterday, thanks to a series of coordinated media leaks, Nunes learned â... at the same time as the broader public - about the reassignment of Peter Strzok, a senior Mueller aide who had played a critical role in the DOJâ... s original collusion investigation. And before that, Strzok helped lead the FBIâ... s probe into Hillary Clintonâ... s mishandling of classified information.

As it turns out, the agent had been reassigned for expressing anti-Trump sentiments in a series of text messages to FBI attorney Lisa Page while the two were having an affair. The bureau, it appears, had willfully tried to conceal this fact from Nunes and his committee.

Upon being blindsided with this information and publicly embarrassed, the Intel committee chairman was understandably less than pleased. So in a statement issued Sunday, Nunes announced a serious escalation: His committee, he said, is preparing to hold Andrew McCabe and assistant AG Rod Rosenstein in contempt for the DOJ's failure to comply with Nunes's subpoena.

Strzok was reassigned in July, shortly before Nunes issued the request for the bureau to turn over all documents relating to the Trump dossier. In a transparent attempt to save face, the bureau contacted Nunes shortly after the Strzok news broke on Saturday to say they were ready to comply with the subpoena. But Nunes rightly repudiated this offer, saying it was too little, too late. He laid out his argument for preparing the order of contempt in a statement released Sunday offering details of the committee's unsuccessful push to convince the FBI to turn over the documents it had requested.

Hereâ... s a timeline of Nunes' contact with the Department of Justice courtesy of the Washington Examiner:

- On Oct. 11, Nunes met with deputy attorney general Rod Rosenstein. In that meeting, Nunes specifically discussed the committee's request for information about Strzok.
- In an Oct. 31 committee staff meeting with the FBI, bureau officials refused a request for information about Strzok.
- On Nov. 20, the committee again requested an interview with Strzok. (Three days earlier, on November 17, Strzok met with the Senate Intelligence Committee.)
- On Nov. 29, Nunes again spoke to Rosenstein, and again discussed Strzok.
- On Dec. 1, the committee again requested to speak with Strzok.

Republicans, including President Trump, pointed to the news as evidence that the entire probe into Russian meddling had been politically motivated.

Tainted (no, very dishonest?) FBI â... agentâ... s role in Clinton probe under review.â... Led Clinton Email probe. @foxandfriends Clinton money going to wife of another FBI agent in charge.

â... Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) December 3, 2017

After years of Comey, with the phony and dishonest Clinton investigation (and more), running the FBI, its reputation is in Tatters - worst in History! But fear not, we will bring it back to greatness.

â... Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) December 3, 2017

Unsurprisingly, both the FBI and House Democrats have been silent on the issue, according to Bloomberg:

A Justice Department spokesman, Sarah Isgur Flores, couldn't be immediately reached for comment by telephone or text. There was no immediate response Sunday from a spokesman for the committee's top Democrat, Representative Adam Schiff of California.

In his statement, included in full below, Nunes accused the FBI and the Department of Justice of willfully refusing to comply with an Aug. 24 committee subpoena in part by refusing the committee's request â... for an explanation of Peter Strzok's dismissal from the Mueller probe.â... Nunes is giving the FBI until end of business day tomorrow to fully comply with the committee's requests, or face a contempt order before the end of the month.

Washington, D.C. â... House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence Chairman Devin Nunes issued the following statement today amid press reports that Peter Strzok, the top FBI official assigned to Special Counsel Robert Mueller's probe of collusion between Russia and Trump officials, had been removed from the probe after exchanging anti-Trump and pro-Hillary Clinton text messages with his mistress, who was an FBI lawyer working for Deputy Director Andrew McCabe:

â... The FBI and Department of Justice have failed to sufficiently cooperate with the Committee's August 24 subpoena, and have specifically refused repeated demands from the House Intelligence Committee for an explanation of Pete Strzok's dismissal from the Mueller probe. In light of today's press reports, we now know why Strzok was dismissed, why the FBI and DOJ refused to provide us this explanation, and at least one reason why they previously refused to make Deputy Director McCabe available to the Committee for an interview.

â... By hiding from Congress, and from the American people, documented political bias by a key FBI head investigator for both the Russia collusion probe and the Clinton email investigation, the FBI and DOJ engaged in a willful attempt to thwart Congress's constitutional oversight responsibility. This is part of a months-long pattern by the DOJ and FBI of stonewalling and obstructing this Committee's oversight work, particularly oversight of their use of the Steele dossier. At this point, these agencies should be investigating themselves.

â... The DOJ has now expressedâ... on a Saturday, just hours after the press reports on Strzokâ... s dismissal appearedâ... a sudden willingness to comply with some of the Committeeâ... s long-standing demands. This attempted 11th-hour accommodation is neither credible nor believable, and in fact is yet another example of the DOJâ... s disingenuousness and obstruction. Therefore, I have instructed House Intelligence Committee staff to begin drawing up a contempt of Congress resolution for DOJ Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein and FBI Director Christopher Wray. Unless all our outstanding demands are fully met by close of business on Monday, December 4, 2017, the committee will have the opportunity to move this resolution before the end of the month."

In the statement, Nunes pointed to â... a months-long pattern by the DOJ and FBI of stonewalling and obstructing this Committeeâ... s oversight work,â... including also withholding subpoenaed information about their use of an opposition research dossier that targeted Trump in the 2016 election.

In targeting McCabe and Rosenstein, Nunes explained that Attorney General Jeff Sessions was being excused from any contempt action by the committee because the AG had recused himself from the investigation into Russia meddling.

In addition to the threat of contempt, Strzok is also facing an internal review for his role in the investigation into Clinton's handling of classified information on her private email server. It has already been revealed that then-FBI Director James Comey drafted his letter excusing Clinton before she had even been interviewed. The Office of the Inspector General probe into Strzok will examine his role in a number of "politically sensitive" cases this year, according to Fox News.

At the FBI, senior managers are facing a serious dilemma: It's probable that the information pertaining to Strzok is only some of what the bureau has tried to keep from Nunes and the committee. Now, the FBI is facing a dilemma: Either rush to comply without having the time to screen all the documents that have been supplied to the committee, or continue to resist, and face a Congressional subpoena. Either way, we're certain this isn't the last of the story.

Devin Nunes, House Intel Committee Prepare to Find FBI in Contempt for Mueller Cover-up

J. Scott Applewhite / Associated Press

by Joel B. Pollak

House Intelligence Committee chairman Rep. Devin Nunes (R-CA) has instructed committee staff to prepare to cite the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) in contempt of Congress after the agency failed to turn over documents explaining why agent Peter Strzok had been removed from Special Counsel Robert Mueller's Russia investigation.

Byron York of the Washington Examiner reported Saturday that the committee had subpoenaed the FBI in August for information about why Strzok was dropped from Mueller's team. Over the next three months, the FBI repeatedly refused to turn over the requested information. Nunes met and spoke to Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein, York reported, to no avail. Nunes and the committee continued to pursue the matter right up through Friday, Dec. 1.

The following day, the New York Times and the Washington Post reported that Strzok had been kicked off Mueller's team because of anti-Trump text messages that he was found to have exchanged with FBI lawyer Lisa Page during the 2016 presidential election. Strzok had also worked on the investigation into former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton's storage of emails, including classified information, on an illicit private server. She was not prosecuted.

In addition, Strzok and Page were found to have carried on an extramarital affair. Page worked for FBI Deputy Director Andrew McCabe, who conservatives have long complained had a conflict of interest because his wife received campaign funding from Virginia Governor Terry McAuliffe, a close ally of the Clintons for decades.

The revelation of Strzok's removal, and the reasons for it, are a huge blow to the credibility of Mueller's inquiry, which critics have long claimed is riddled with partisan conflicts of interest. Some of the lawyers working for Mueller had donated to Hillary Clinton, and one had even done work for the Clinton Foundation, which was a target of the Trump campaign during the election (and may have been under investigation by the FBI as well).

Nunes and the committee had known about Strzok's removal for months, but not the reasons for it, which were only revealed on Saturday in what York suggested was an orchestrated leak to the Times and the Post. In a furious statement on Saturday, Nunes accused the FBI of deliberately covering up political bias on the Mueller team.

By hiding from Congress, and from the American people, documented political bias by a key FBI head investigator for both the Russia collusion probe and the Clinton email investigation, the FBI and DOJ engaged in a willful attempt to thwart Congress's constitutional oversight responsibility," Nunes said, as quoted by York.

Nunes has reportedly promised to take action on the citation for contempt if the FBI does not come clean by the end of December. He will likely have the backing of Speaker of the House Paul Ryan (R-WI), who has also complained about the FBI's apparent refusal to turn over information to the committee, especially on the degree to which it relied on the discredited Russia dossier that was paid for by Clinton and the Democratic National Committee.

Earlier this year, Nunes stepped back from direct involvement in the committee's Russia investigation after questions about his role in exposing the unmasking of U.S. citizens in intelligence reports during the last days of the Obama administration. Democrats have stalled an ethics investigation into Nunes to keep him from resuming his role in a full capacity. However, Nunes has not given up his chairmanship and still wields the subpoena power.

During the Obama administration, Attorney General Eric Holder was found in contempt of Congress for failing to turn over documents on Operation Fast and Furious, which caused the death of Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry.

Ghislaine Maxwell hired fake news purveyor Jacob Wohl to smear her and Jeffrey Epstein's alleged victims, a former friend has told DailyMail.com in an exclusive interview.

As part of a $25,000 deal made in June, Wohl and his lobbyist colleague Jack Burkman also allegedly pushed to get New York US Attorney Geoffrey Berman, who had led Epstein's case, fired in order to stall or stop the criminal investigation into Maxwell.

Wohl and Burkman are far-right lobbyists who have become a laughing stock in DC after several failed attempts to smear top political figures including Elizabeth Warren, Kamala Harris, Nancy Pelosi, Ted Cruz, Robert Mueller and Dr. Anthony Fauci by paying women to make false claims of sordid affairs and drug-dealing.

One of the women they tried to use for their smear plots, Maryland model and paralegal Kristin Spealman, told DailyMail.com the men had been hired by Maxwell, who currently faces trial over charges she and Epstein trafficked underage girls for sex.

Spealman, 36, said the lobbyists bragged to her they had been hired in early June for $25,000 to dig up dirt on Maxwell's alleged sex trafficking victims and to get Berman fired using Burkman's supposed influence with Attorney General William Barr.

Berman ultimately stepped down after a push from Barr. But less than two weeks later, Maxwell was charged on July 2 as being part of Epstein's sex trafficking ring and taken into custody.

One of the models Wohl tried to use for his and Burkman's smear plots, Maryland paralegal Kristin Spealman (pictured with Wohl), told DailyMail.com the men had been hired by Maxwell, who currently faces trial over charges she and Epstein trafficked underage girls for sex â... Every person, even those accused of the most odious of crimes, deserves representation and possesses the right to engage lobbyists to petition the government on their behalf,â... the 22-year-old said. â... Otherwise, we cannot comment on client matters.â...

When contacted for comment Wohl told DailyMail.com that Maxwell â... deserves representationâ... .

Burkman similarly told DailyMail.com: 'All persons accused of crimes--however terrible--have the right to representation and representation in the court of public opinion.'

DailyMail.com has contacted Maxwell's lawyers for comment.

Federal documents filed this month show a company linked to Maxwell had hired Wohl and Burkman to lobby on â... issues relating to US DOJ, Senate Judiciary, House Judiciary,â... DailyMail.com can exclusively reveal.

Berman (pictured) ultimately stepped down after Attorney General William 'Bill' Barr announced he would be resigned, but less than two weeks later, Maxwell was charged on July 2 as being part of Epstein's sex trafficking ring and taken into custody

A form filed with the US Senate by Burkmanâ... s company, J M Burkman & Associates, on July 3 under the Lobbying Disclosure Act shows Wohl and Burkman were hired by Granite Realty LLC.

The form lists Burkman and Wohl as lobbyists for Granite Realty, described as a â... real estate companyâ... , and indicates the pair will be lobbying over â... Issues relating to US DOJ, Senate Judiciary, House Judiciary.â...

New York prosecutors say the firm is connected to Maxwell, with the LLC linked to her purchase of a New Hampshire house where she was arrested on July 2 - the day before Burkmanâ... s lobbying disclosure was filed.

New Hampshire property records show Granite Realty paid $1,070,000 cash in December for the home, aptly named Tuckedaway.

Maxwell used a fake name and the â... carefully anonymized LLCâ... , set up just weeks before the purchase, to buy the house while she hid from law enforcement, prosecutors in her New York sex trafficking case said.

Wohl and Burkman told Spealman that Maxwell also used the secretive LLC to hire them as lobbyists around early June, the model claimed.

â... Her company Granite Realty LLC hired them to first get rid of the US attorney Jeffrey Berman,â... the paralegal said.

â... She wanted him fired. And then I guess she assumed the charges would go away or maybe she wouldnâ... t be prosecuted. I think that was the goal.â...

Speelman claimed Burkman bragged to her that he was '... really good friends' with Barr and had persuaded him to fire Berman.

On June 19, Barr did release a statement saying Berman would step down '... though Trump had reportedly been considering removing the prosecutor for two years.

Berman at first refused to resign, then later capitulated when his deputy was announced as the new acting US attorney for the Southern District of New York.

Spealman claimed Burkman bragged to her that he was "... really good friends..." with Barr and had persuaded him to fire Berman. There is no evidence that Wohl or Burkman had any role in Berman's firing

There is no evidence that Wohl or Burkman had any role in Berman's firing.

There is also no evidence that Burkman and Barr have a close relationship.

"... The second part of their job was to discredit the [alleged] victims of Jeffrey Epstein and her,"... Spealman said.

"... I believed those girls, I felt like they were telling the truth and they were real victims.

"... I was disgusted with the things [Wohl and Burkman], were telling me. They were saying really bad things about them.

"... Like the one girl who said she got pregnant by Epstein and they made her get an abortion. Jacob said "no, her boyfriend got her pregnant and then she demanded money." It was just a lot of stuff that made them look bad.

"... That... s their job now, to discredit these victims. Hopefully so that the charges go away or [Maxwell] wins..."

The lobbyists allegedly told Spealman their smear targets included Epstein accusers Virginia Giuffre, Sarah Ransome and Courtney Wild, the model said.

Spealman claimed Wohl and Burkman revealed their plot with Maxwell during a night of partying at Burkman's Arlington, Virginia home on July 11.

The part-time model said the two men had already spent months trying to get her involved in other smear campaigns.

Spealman said Burkman first called her last September asking her to be a part of a purported reality TV show that he and Wohl were producing, which involved â... playing innocent pranks on celebrities and politicians.â...

After wining and dining the model at DC hotel bars and restaurants, as well as dangling the prospect of a $300,000 paycheck for her role, the two lobbyists revealed their real plans, she said.

â... At the third meeting they totally switched things,â... Spealman told DailyMail.com. â... They said they wanted me to say I was selling Percocet to Nancy Pelosi. I was pretty shocked because thatâ... s a big leap from what they had sold me on.

â... I donâ... t want to have that sort of reputation. Iâ... m a paralegal. I was worried about defamation suits. I was like "look guys, I canâ... t do that".'

The model said the fake news peddlers agreed to change their plans. But at the next meeting in October, Spealman said they presented her with a statement to sign claiming she had â... steamy sexâ... with married senator Ted Cruz.

Spealman claimed Wohl and Burkman asked her to read the bogus statement at a press conference scheduled the next day.

â... I received a text directing me to a lavish fourth-floor suite,â... the statement said. â... Inside was Senator Cruz, clad only in boxers. After a few old fashioned, I was a willing participant in a night of steamy sex.

â... Despite his ugly face and overweight physique, I could not resist the opportunity to be with a United States Senator. I was paid $2,700 for the evening.

â... On November 30, 2019, I received an angry call from Heidi Cruz, the Senatorâ... s banker wife. She told me that I would be exposed if I ever saw her husband again.

â... Undeterred, I met again with Senator Cruz on January 4, 2019. This time he flew me to Austin.'

â... I would have never done it, I wouldnâ... t have felt comfortable doing it,â... Spealman told DailyMail.com. â... But I kind of led them to believe I would do it... I felt manipulated a bit. â... I took pictures of the script and told them I needed to rehearse and Iâ... d get back to them'

The statement continued: 'Following sex, the Senator confessed to me that his wife "could no longer give him an erection" due to her advancing age, flab and significant weight gain. He said that my young bikini body had made him feel like a man for the first time in years.â...

The documents continued with more outlandish fake claims, saying Cruz used a â... penis pumpâ... and took Spealman to a swingers party where his wife caught him and â... literally dragged him by the penis to the front doorâ... .

â... I would have never done it, I wouldnâ... t have felt comfortable doing it,â... Spealman told DailyMail.com.

â... But I kind of led them to believe I would do it... I felt manipulated a bit.

â... I took pictures of the script and told them I needed to rehearse and Iâ... d get back to them.â...

The paralegal said she showed the statement to her lawyers who called Wohl and Burkman and got her out of the sleazy deal.

â... After my lawyers talked to them Jack called me like 30 times,â... Spealman said. â... I wasnâ... t answering, so he texted me stuff like â... we need you to do thisâ... , â... this is your shotâ... , â... youâ... re going to be a starâ... , stuff like that. I just sort of brushed them off.

â... After a few weeks they got another model to do the press conference instead.â...

On October 21 last year Wohl and Burkman held a press conference outside Burkmanâ... s Arlington home where a woman wearing large sunglasses who said her name was â... Kay Fellerâ... read the same lurid statement about Ted Cruz.

In 2018 the young lobbyist and self-styled â... renegade firebrandâ... attempted his first high-profile smear, accusing former FBI chief Robert Mueller of sexual misconduct. Wohl and Burkman held a botched press conference over the sexual misconduct claims in a shabby Holiday Inn, where the alleged victim failed to show up and Burkman gave a speech with his fly undone (pictured)

Journalists who attended wrote stories deriding the tricksters and dismissing the fake claims, and critics of the lobbyists turned up to disrupt the bizarre press conference by playing a banjo, sounding an air horn and throwing donuts at the two men.

Spealman said despite asking her to lie about high-ranking politicians, she remained friendly with the lobbyists and occasionally went out to DC clubs and bars with Wohl.

She said the men invited her to Burkmanâ... s house on July 11 and made another indecent proposal before revealing their deal with Maxwell.

â... They wanted to "smooth the waters", is how they put it,â... the part-time model said. â... They convinced me to come over Saturday just to talk. The first half they were nice.

â... As the night progressed, we were getting along. They felt comfortable asking me to do something like this again. I was a little surprised by it,â... she said.

â... They wanted me to find models in my agency "that turned 18 in the last month" is what they said to me. I said "How am I supposed to know if they turned 18 in the last month", and they laughed and glossed over it. That was a red flag.

â... I asked why they wanted me to do this and they said it was to have sex with politicians. The only name I remember was [Florida Republican Congressman] Matt Gaetz.â...

Spealman shared with DailyMail.com notes she made of the conversation at the time.

â... I wrote down some quotes from Jack,â... she said. â... He said he wanted "Big-t****ed teens", and "very impressionable young women". "Jacuzzi parties" were mentioned by Jacob.

Wohl (pictured with Spealman) is currently facing trial over a felony charge for unlawful sale of securities, after a man committed suicide when he learned the 22-year-old former trader had lost his $75,000 in a failed investment scheme â... They went through my Instagram because all the models in my agency follow me and they picked out a few. Some of them are 16 and 17, though I didnâ... t tell them that. Jacob asked me to see if they would be interested.â...

Wohl is currently facing trial over a felony charge for unlawful sale of securities, after a man committed suicide when he learned the 22-year-old former trader had lost his $75,000 in a failed investment scheme.

In 2018 the young lobbyist and self-styled â... renegade firebrandâ... attempted his first high-profile smear, accusing former FBI chief Robert Mueller of sexual misconduct.

Mueller was serving as Special Counsel at the time, conducting an investigation into Russian meddling in the Trump 2016 campaign.

Wohl and Burkman held a botched press conference over the sexual misconduct claims in a shabby Holiday Inn, where the alleged victim failed to show up and Burkman gave a speech with his fly undone.

In another bungled smear this year, a woman accused Dr. Anthony Fauci, the director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, of sexually assaulting her in a hotel room in 2014 when she was 20, only to recant the story 10 days later confessing that Wohl and Burkman paid her to make it all up.

Their attempt to throw muck at Senator Kamala Harris didnâ... t stick either.

Sean Newaldass, 26, gave a press conference with the two lobbyists claiming he had an affair with Harris, but soon backtracked saying he was a paid actor and the only reason he made the claims was because the two lobbyists told him it was â... performance artâ... for a Spike TV show.

How The Wikipedia Master Troll Account "Philip Cross" Works To Push Propaganda

<https://kek.gg/i/7Px5Sd.png>PNG

the purpose of the â... Philip Crossâ... also systematically seeks to burnish the reputations of mainstream media journalists and other figures who are particularly prominent in pushing neo-con propaganda and in promoting the interests of Israel.

What is particularly interesting is that â... Philip Crossâ... â... s views happen to be precisely the same political views as those of Jimmy Wales, the founder of Wikipedia. Jimmy Wales has been on twitter the last few daysPNG being actively rude and unpleasant to anybody questioning the activities of Philip Cross. His commitment to Crossâ... s freedom to operate on Wikipedia would be rather more impressive if the Cross operation were not promoting Walesâ... own opinions. Jimmy Wales has actively spoken against Jeremy Corbyn, supports the bombing of Syria, supports Israel, is so much of a Blairite he married Blairâ... s secretary, and sits on the board of Guardian Media Group Ltd alongside Katherine Viner.

The extreme defensiveness and surliness of Walesâ... twitter responses on the â... Philip Crossâ... operation is very revealing. Why do you think he reacts like this? Interestingly enough. Wikipediaâ... s UK begging arm, Wikimedia UK, joined in with equal hostile responses to anyone questioning Cross.

Wikimedia had arrived uninvited into a twitter thread discussing the â... Philip Crossâ... operation and had immediately started attacking peoplePNGquestioning Crossâ... s legitimacy. Basically openly datamining their opposition.

Just look at every single fucking plant on wikipedia. They actively censor out constituent lists and put in

The pentagon alone hires over 28,000 full time employees who's job is "PR". That includes changing wiki pages. There have been Wiki edit wars as differing sides have back edited each others edits. You folks are throwing around the phrase "Conspiracy" as if it was a bad thing to say out-loud. A number of articles have just come out, globally, about why only fools now use the ploy of defaming Plaintiffs like us by trying to attach negative mnemonic triggers to those who reveal organized crime.

Caitlin Johnstone

How, After This Crazy Year, Is â... Conspiracy Theoristâ... Still Being Used As An Insult?

#Conspiracy, #ConspiracyTheory, #WikiLeaks, #Leak, #Email

Since WikiLeaks has clearly revealed that our government is lying to us and the mainstream media is helping them, it's absurd for a conspiracy theorist to continue to exist as a dismissive pejorative.

I still get called a crazy conspiracy theorist all the time for writing about things like how Hillary Clinton's no-fly zone in Syria would have probably required a war with Russia, or how Obama's cabinet was largely appointed for him by an executive from Citigroup before he was even elected. These ideas aren't based on wild conjecture or an over-active imagination; there's plenty of solid and reputable evidence behind them for anyone who cares to do their own research (or just click my damn hyperlinks and view my sources! How hard is it, people? I'm not making this stuff up! I did all the work for you! What do you want me to do, come over to your house and read it to you in different character voices while you drink hot chocolate with marshmallows? What am I, your mom? Not that I'm bitter or anything).

But lack of solid evidence isn't what elicits such accusations and dismissals; the reason such ideas get dismissed as conspiracy theory so often is not due to lack of evidence, but due to lack of coverage by mainstream media franchises. Which should not be the case, because WikiLeaks has confirmed beyond a shadow of a doubt that the mainstream media actively collaborates with politicians and campaigns to manipulate the public narrative. These people who have both a public position and a private position also have legions of members of the press in the upper echelons of news media actively colluding with their agendas. But then, that hasn't been covered much by mainstream media either.

It wasn't that long ago that a conspiracy theory was generally considered to mean an unproven notion widely frowned upon because its adherents tended to have very flimsy standards for proof, and would grasp at any shred of evidence no matter how disreputable as long as it satisfied their confirmation bias. Nowadays, if the conversations I've been having lately are any indication, the term now essentially means anything I haven't seen on CNN, or even any new information that causes me to experience cognitive dissonance. It's become another meaningless, vacuous phrase mechanically bleated out by ignorant identity politics dogmatists to support the establishment agenda, much like support our troops when the establishment wants to kill people over crude oil, or obstructionist congress when the establishment wants people to ignore the way Obama continued and expanded all the worst aspects of the Bush administration, or â... donâ... t discuss politics or religionâ... when the establishment wants us all to turn into a bunch of vapid, drooling idiots.

If Iâ... ve noticed this trend, a lot of my readers probably have, too. But even if the phrase â... conspiracy theoristâ... hadnâ... t been twisted into an arbitrary knee-jerk dismissive pejorative and retained its more traditional usage, itâ... s still silly to see it employed at all.

I mean, think about it. What have we learned this year? The Obama campaign actively conspired with a Citigroup executive to determine which cabinet members would benefit the people responsible for the Wall Street crash and push the TPP through in great secrecy. The DNC actively conspired to thwart the campaign of one of their candidates in favor of the other in the contest they themselves were responsible for ensuring remains fair and even-handed. Hillary Clintonâ... s campaign staff actively conspired to elevate Donald Trump above the other Republican candidates in order to sink the campaigns of the moderates. Members of the mainstream media actively conspired with the Clinton campaign to elevate her above her competitors. A Clinton super PAC actively conspired to use paid shills to deceive people on internet discussion forums into thinking that Clinton had more grassroots support than she did. Democratic party elites actively conspired to use the media to create a liberal â... echo chamberâ... and control public discourse. I could go on and on and on. These are actual conspiracies that people would have been (and were) mocked and dismissed as conspiracy theorists for suggesting before they were proven, and then they were proven. Every one of them.

Is it reasonable, then, to dismiss anyone who comes up with a plausible theory involving powerful individuals manipulating things in a shady manner? The leaked documents from WikiLeaks only gave us a tiny glimpse behind the curtain of an opaque government and an opaque electoral process, and what we saw there was horrifying. Democracy being actively sabotaged at every turn, plutocrats being given the keys to the nation, and the American people being deliberately and systematically deceived. What else is back there? Is it unreasonable to assume that there are many, many far more horrific things going on behind the veil of government secrecy? I donâ... t think so. This doesnâ... t mean we should accept any conspiracy theory as gospel truth; these ideas ought to be vigorously debated, and we should of course always bring critical thinking to the table. But in light of this yearâ... s revelations, critical thinking necessarily means being wide open to the possibility that things are not at all happening the way weâ... re being told.

Itâ... s very naive to think that large institutions are immune to criminality, and that itâ... s not possible for networks of people in power to use that power for ill. Are we really meant to ignore that obvious reality whenever it appears to be manifesting in our own institutions? Iâ... d say that would be pretty stupid.

Lately whenever someone accuses me of spreading a conspiracy theory Iâ... ve been mentally replacing the word â... conspiracyâ... with one of its synonyms, which makes them sound a lot sillier. You should try it. â... God, spare me the collaboration theoryâ... doesnâ... t have that instant debunking quality that theyâ... re reaching for. It means the same thing, and there is definitely collaboration happening, but now itâ... s got the baseless stigma removed.

You can use other words like a â... collusionâ... theory. A â... co-operationâ... theory. â... Pfft,â... you hear them say. â... Thatâ... s just an organized crime theory.â...

Yeah. Yeah it is. Click my damn hyperlinks.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE... in a report filed by Zero Hedge: in 1967, the CIA Created the Label "Conspiracy Theorists" ... to Attack Anyone Who Challenges the "Official" Narrative. Gawkerâ... s Lawyers have continued to use this â... hate speechâ... to attack Creditor/Plaintiffs in order to further Gawkerâ... s intimidation, defamation, character assassination and vendetta retribution program against Creditor/Plaintiffs.

Conspiracy Theorists USED TO Be Accepted As Normal

Democracy and free market capitalism were founded on conspiracy theories.

The Magna Carta, the Constitution and Declaration of Independence and other founding Western documents were based on conspiracy theories. Greek democracy and free market capitalism were also based on conspiracy theories.

But those were the bad old days â...! Things have now changed.

The CIA Coined the Term Conspiracy Theorist In 1967

That all changed in the 1960s.

Specifically, in April 1967, the CIA wrote a dispatch which coined the term â... conspiracy theoriesâ... â...! and recommended methods for discrediting such theories. The dispatch was marked â... psychâ... â... short for â... psychological operationsâ... or disinformation â... and â... CSâ... for the CIAâ... s â... Clandestine Servicesâ... unit.

The dispatch was produced in responses to a Freedom of Information Act request by the New York Times in 1976.

The dispatch states:

2. This trend of opinion is a matter of concern to the U.S. government, including our organization.

***

The aim of this dispatch is to provide material countering and discrediting the claims of the conspiracy theorists, so as to inhibit the circulation of such claims in other countries. Background information is supplied in a classified section and in a number of unclassified attachments.

3. Action. We do not recommend that discussion of the [conspiracy] question be initiated where it is not already taking place. Where discussion is active addresses are requested:

a. To discuss the publicity problem with and friendly elite contacts (especially politicians and editors) , pointing out that the [official investigation of the relevant event] made as thorough an investigation as humanly possible, that the charges of the critics are without serious foundation, and that further speculative discussion only plays into the hands of the opposition. Point out also that parts of the conspiracy talk appear to be deliberately generated by â...! propagandists. Urge them to use their influence to discourage unfounded and irresponsible speculation.

b. To employ propaganda assets to and refute the attacks of the critics. Book reviews and feature articles are particularly appropriate for this purpose. The unclassified attachments to this guidance should provide useful background material for passing to assets. Our ploy should point out, as applicable, that the critics are (I) wedded to theories adopted before the evidence was in, (II) politically interested, (III) financially interested, (IV) hasty and inaccurate in their research, or (V) infatuated with their own theories.

***

4. In private to media discussions not directed at any particular writer, or in attacking publications which may be yet forthcoming, the following arguments should be useful:

a. No significant new evidence has emerged which the Commission did not consider.

***

b. Critics usually overvalue particular items and ignore others. They tend to place more emphasis on the recollections of individual witnesses (which are less reliable and more divergentâ... and hence offer more hand-holds for criticism) â...!

***

c. Conspiracy on the large scale often suggested would be impossible to conceal in the United States, esp. since informants could expect to receive large royalties, etc.

***

d. Critics have often been enticed by a form of intellectual pride: they light on some theory and fall in love with it; they also scoff at the Commission because it did not always answer every question with a flat decision one way or the other.

***

f. As to charges that the Commissionâ... s report was a rush job, it emerged three months after the deadline originally set. But to the degree that the Commission tried to speed up its reporting, this was largely due to the pressure of irresponsible speculation already appearing, in some cases coming from the same critics who, refusing to admit their errors, are now putting out new criticisms.

g. Such vague accusations as that â... more than ten people have died mysteriouslyâ... can always be explained in some natural way â...!

5. Where possible, counter speculation by encouraging reference to the Commissionâ... s Report itself. Open-minded foreign readers should still be impressed by the care, thoroughness, objectivity and speed with which the Commission worked. Reviewers of other books might be encouraged to add to their account the idea that, checking back with the report itself, they found it far superior to the work of its critics.

Here are screenshots of part of the memo:

- Ignore conspiracy claims unless discussion about them is already too active
- Claim that itâ... s irresponsible to speculate
- Accuse theorists of being wedded to and infatuated with their theories
- Accuse theorists of being politically motivated
- Accuse theorists of having financial interests in promoting conspiracy theories

In other words, the CIAâ... s clandestine services unit created the arguments for attacking conspiracy theories as unreliable in the 1960s as part of its psychological warfare operations.

But Arenâ... t Conspiracy Theories â... In Fact â... Nuts?

Forget Western history and CIA dispatches â...! arenâ... t conspiracy theorists nutty?

In fact, conspiracies are so common that judges are trained to look at conspiracy allegations as just another legal claim to be disproven or proven based on the specific evidence:

Federal and all 50 stateâ... s codes include specific statutes addressing conspiracy, and providing the punishment for people who commit conspiracies.

But letâ... s examine what the people trained to weigh evidence and reach conclusions think about â... conspiraciesâ... . Letâ... s look at what American judges think.

Searching Westlaw, one of the 2 primary legal research networks which attorneys and judges use to research the law, I searched for court decisions including the word â... Conspiracyâ... . This is such a common term in lawsuits that it overwhelmed Westlaw.

Specifically, I got the following message:

â... Your query has been intercepted because it may retrieve a large number of documents.â...

From experience, I know that this means that there were potentially millions or many hundreds of thousands of cases which use the term. There were so many cases, that Westlaw could not even start processing the request.

So I searched again, using the phrase â... Guilty of Conspiracyâ... . I hoped that this would not only narrow my search sufficiently that Westlaw could handle it, but would give me cases where the judge actually found the defendant guilty of a conspiracy. This pulled up exactly 10,000 cases â... which is the maximum number of results which Westlaw can give at one time. In other words, there were more than 10,000 cases using the phrase â... Guilty of Conspiracyâ... (maybe thereâ... s a way to change my settings to get more than 10,000 results, but I havenâ... t found it yet).

Moreover, as any attorney can confirm, usually only appeal court decisions are published in the Westlaw database. In other words, trial court decisions are rarely published; the only decisions normally published are those of the courts which hear appeals of the trial. Because only a very small fraction of the cases which go to trial are appealed, this logically means that the number of guilty verdicts in conspiracy cases at trial must be much, much larger than 10,000.

Moreover, "Guilty of Conspiracy" is only one of many possible search phrases to use to find cases where the defendant was found guilty of a lawsuit for conspiracy. Searching on Google, I got 3,170,000 results (as of yesterday) under the term "Guilty of Conspiracy" , 669,000 results for the search term "Convictions for Conspiracy" , and 743,000 results for "Convicted for Conspiracy" .

Of course, many types of conspiracies are called other things altogether. For example, a long-accepted legal doctrine makes it illegal for two or more companies to conspire to fix prices, which is called "Price Fixing" . (1,180,000 results).

Given the above, I would extrapolate that there have been hundreds of thousands of convictions for criminal or civil conspiracy in the United States.

Finally, many crimes go unreported or unsolved, and the perpetrators are never caught. Therefore, the actual number of conspiracies committed in the U.S. must be even higher.

In other words, conspiracies are committed all the time in the U.S., and many of the conspirators are caught and found guilty by American courts. Remember, Bernie Madoff's Ponzi scheme was a conspiracy theory.

Indeed, conspiracy is a very well-recognized crime in American law, taught to every first-year law school student as part of their basic curriculum. Telling a judge that someone has a "conspiracy theory" would be like telling him that someone is claiming that he trespassed on their property, or committed assault, or stole his car. It is a fundamental legal concept.

Obviously, many conspiracy allegations are false (if you see a judge at a dinner party, ask him to tell you some of the crazy conspiracy allegations which were made in his court). Obviously, people will either win or lose in court depending on whether or not they can prove their claim with the available evidence. But not all allegations of trespass, assault, or theft are true, either.

Proving a claim of conspiracy is no different from proving any other legal claim, and the mere label "conspiracy" is taken no less seriously by judges.

It's not only Madoff. The heads of Enron were found guilty of conspiracy, as was the head of Adelphia. Numerous lower-level government officials have been found guilty of conspiracy. See this, this, this, this and this.

Time Magazine's financial columnist Justin Fox writes:

Some financial market conspiracies are real "!"

Most good investigative reporters are conspiracy theorists, by the way.

And what about the NSA and the tech companies that have cooperated with them?

But Our Leaders Wouldn't Do That

While people might admit that corporate executives and low-level government officials might have engaged in conspiracies â... they may be strongly opposed to considering that the wealthiest or most powerful might possibly have done so.

But powerful insiders have long admitted to conspiracies. For example, Obama's Administrator of the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, Cass Sunstein, wrote:

Of course some conspiracy theories, under our definition, have turned out to be true. The Watergate hotel room used by Democratic National Committee was, in fact, bugged by Republican officials, operating at the behest of the White House. In the 1950s, the Central Intelligence Agency did, in fact, administer LSD and related drugs under Project MKULTRA, in an effort to investigate the possibility of â... mind control.â... Operation Northwoods, a rumored plan by the Department of Defense to simulate acts of terrorism and to blame them on Cuba, really was proposed by high-level officials â...!

But Someone Would Have Spilled the Beans

A common defense to people trying sidetrack investigations into potential conspiracies is to say that â... someone would have spilled the beansâ... if there were really a conspiracy.

But famed whistleblower Daniel Ellsberg explains:

It is a commonplace that â... you can't keep secrets in Washingtonâ... or â... in a democracy, no matter how sensitive the secret, you're likely to read it the next day in the New York Times.â... These truisms are flatly false. They are in fact cover stories, ways of flattering and misleading journalists and their readers, part of the process of keeping secrets well. Of course eventually many secrets do get out that wouldn't in a fully totalitarian society. But the fact is that the overwhelming majority of secrets do not leak to the American public. This is true even when the information withheld is well known to an enemy and when it is clearly essential to the functioning of the congressional war power and to any democratic control of foreign policy. The reality unknown to the public and to most members of Congress and the press is that secrets that would be of the greatest import to many of them can be kept from them reliably for decades by the executive branch, even though they are known to thousands of insiders.

History proves Ellsberg right. For example:

- One hundred and thirty thousand \(130,000\) people from the U.S., UK and Canada worked on the Manhattan Project. But it was kept secret for years
- A BBC documentary shows that:

There was â... a planned coup in the USA in 1933 by a group of right-wing American businessmen . . . . The coup was aimed at toppling President Franklin D Roosevelt with the help of half-a-million war veterans. The plotters, who were alleged to involve some of the most famous families in America, (owners of Heinz, Birds Eye, Goodtea, Maxwell Hse & George Bush's Grandfather, Prescott) believed that their country should adopt the policies of Hitler and Mussolini to beat the great depressionâ...

Moreover, â... the tycoons told General Butler the American people would accept the new government because they controlled all the newspapers.â... Have you ever heard of this conspiracy before? It was certainly a very large one. And if the conspirators controlled the newspapers then, how much worse is it today with media consolidation?

- 7 out of the 8 giant, money center banks went bankrupt in the 1980â...s during the â... Latin American Crisisâ... , and the governmentâ... s response was to cover up their insolvency. Thatâ... s a cover up lasting several decades
- Banks have been involved in systematic criminal behavior, and have manipulated every single market
- Governments have been covering up nuclear meltdowns for fifty years to protect the nuclear industry. Governments have colluded to cover up the severity of numerous other environmental accidents. For many years, Texas officials intentionally under-reported the amount of radiation in drinking water to avoid having to report violations
- The governmentâ... s spying on Americans began before 9/11 (confirmed here and here. And see this.) But the public didnâ... t learn about it until many years later. Indeed, the the New York Times delayed the story so that it would not affect the outcome of the 2004 presidential election
- The decision to launch the Iraq war was made before 9/11. Indeed, former CIA director George Tenet said that the White House wanted to invade Iraq long before 9/11, and inserted â... crapâ... in its justifications for invading Iraq. Former Treasury Secretary Paul Oâ... Neill â... who sat on the National Security Council â... also says that Bush planned the Iraq war before 9/11. And top British officials say that the U.S. discussed Iraq regime change one month after Bush took office. Dick Cheney apparently even made Iraqiâ... s oil fields a national security priority before 9/11. And it has now been shown that a handful of people were responsible for willfully ignoring the evidence that Iraq lacked weapons of mass destruction. These facts have only been publicly disclosed recently. Indeed, Tom Brokaw said, â... All wars are based on propaganda.â... A concerted effort to produce propaganda is a conspiracy

Moreover, high-level government officials and insiders have admitted to dramatic conspiracies after the fact, including:

- Supporting terrorists to promote geopolitical goals
- Supporting false flag terror

The admissions did not occur until many decades after the events.

These examples show that it is possible to keep conspiracies secret for a long time, without anyone â... spilling the beansâ... .

In addition, to anyone who knows how covert military operations work, it is obvious that segmentation on a â... need-to-know basisâ... , along with deference to command hierarchy, means that a couple of top dogs can call the shots and most people helping wonâ... t even know the big picture at the time they are participating.

Moreover, those who think that co-conspirators will brag about their deeds forget that people in the military or intelligence or who have huge sums of money on the line can be very disciplined. They are not likely to go to the bar and spill the beans like a down-on-their-luck, second-rate alcoholic robber might do.

Finally, people who carry out covert operations may do so for ideological reasons â... believing that the â... ends justify the meansâ... . Never underestimate the conviction of an ideologue.

The old saying by Lord Acton is true:

Power tends to corrupt, and absolute power tends to corrupt absolutely.

Those who operate without checks and balances â... and without the disinfectant sunlight of public scrutiny and accountability â... tend to act in their own best interests â...! and the little guy gets hurt.

The early Greeks knew it, as did those who forced the king to sign the Magna Carta, the Founding Fathers and the father of modern economics. We should remember this important tradition of Western civilization.

Postscript: The ridicule of all conspiracy theories is really just an attempt to diffuse criticism of the powerful.

The wealthy are not worse than other people â...! but they are not necessarily better either. Powerful leaders may not be bad people â...! or they could be sociopaths.

We must judge each by his or her actions, and not by preconceived stereotypes that they are all saints acting in our best interest or all scheming criminals.

How The New York Times John Herrman and CNN's Adrian Covert Accidentally made Donald Trump The President of the United States

In between slimy character assassinations and low-ball hired opposition news screed, cabin boy cohorts John Herrman, now at the New York Times, and CNN lap-dog Adrian Covert like to tag-team on all kinds of scandal-mongering. Read the amazing story about how their hit-jobs on Trump, and a few other folks, actually caused them to put their biggest enemy in the White House. These two Gawker and Gizmodo Media slime-ball character assassins sold their foreskins to the DNC and the Podesta/Media Matters/Fusion GPS. They became the very worst examples of what journalism was supposed to be.

They created a media nightmare that made Donald Trump the President of the United States. Read More...

US Patent 6506148 B2 Confirms Human Nervous System Manipulation Through Your Computer & TV

By Ariun Walia

It's hard to find any information at all on a one... Hendricus G. Loos, despite the fact that he's filed multiple patent applications, with success, for apparatuses that deal with the manipulation of the human nervous system via a computer screen or a television monitor. In the abstract, he explains the following,

Physiological effects have been observed in a human subject in response to stimulation of the skin with weak electromagnetic fields that are pulsed with certain frequencies near  $\frac{1}{2}$  Hz or 2.4 Hz, such as to excite a sensory resonance. Many computer monitors and TV tubes, when displaying pulsed images, emit pulsed electromagnetic fields of sufficient amplitudes to cause such excitation. It is therefore possible to manipulate the nervous system of a subject by pulsing images displayed on a nearby computer monitor or TV set. For the latter, the image pulsing may be imbedded in the program material, or it may be overlaid by modulating a video stream, either as an RF signal or as a video signal. The image displayed on a computer monitor may be pulsed effectively by a simple computer program. For certain monitors, pulsed electromagnetic fields capable of exciting sensory resonances in nearby subjects may be generated even as the displayed images are pulsed with subliminal intensity.

The concerning thing about this, as the patent application explains, is that even a very weak pulse can have adverse affects on the human nervous system.

He then goes on to describe that pulse variability and strength can be controlled through software, and explains how, with regards to a computer monitor, DVDs, video tapes and more, and also how it can be remotely controlled from another location.

Perhaps the most concerning part is this,

Certain monitors can emit electromagnetic field pulses that excite a sensory resonance in a nearby subject, through image pulses that are so weak as to be subliminal. This is unfortunate since it opens a way for mischievous application of the invention, whereby people are exposed unknowingly to manipulation of their nervous systems for someone else's purposes. Such application would be unethical and is of course not advocated. It is mentioned here in order to alert the public to the possibility of covert abuse that may occur while being online, or while watching TV, a video, or a DVD.

The application is full of cited examples that the nervous system of a subject can be manipulated through electromagnetic field pulses emitted by a nearby CRT or LCD monitor which displays images with pulsed intensity.

Our nervous system basically controls everything in our body, including the brain. It's a network of nerves and cells that carry messages to and from the brain and spinal cord to various parts of the body, and it's no secret that the United States government, among others, have a long history of experimenting on human beings for mind control purposes. Could television be a mind-control tactic? It would explain why so many people believe stories and explanations of events presented to them by mainstream media, instantaneously, without even questioning.

In some cases, we are made to idolize what we see on T.V, like celebrities, and imitate behaviour and wants.

Sometimes, a perspective that's backed by evidence, which completely counters the story and information we receive from mainstream media, is thrown into the conspiracy realm. This is dangerous; have we reached a point where our televisions are doing the thinking for us? Could they be using pulse techniques described above to influence our thoughts, behaviours and perceptions?

Given what we know about our governments and the unethical actions they've taken throughout history, it's really not out of the question.

There is a reason why airplanes and hospitals ban the use of cell phones, it's because their electromagnetic transmissions interfere with critical electrical devices. The brain is no different, it's a bioelectric organ that's extremely complex and generates electric fields. Scientists can actually control brain function with transcranial magnetic stimulation (TMS), a technique that uses powerful pulses of electromagnetic radiation beamed into a person's brain to jam or excite particular brain circuits.

This is the same type of thing described in the patent, so to what extent are our computer monitors and television screens doing this? This is why, for example, when somebody turns on their Sony Playstation, the screen warns them to read the important health information before playing. Research has also shown that simple cell phone transmissions can affect a person's brainwaves quite significantly, which in turn leads to effects on their behaviour as well.

Electromagnetic radiation can have an effect on mental behaviour when transmitting at the proper frequency. . . . James Horne , from the Loughborough University Sleep Research Centre (source)

Not only this, but hundreds of scientists have come together, and are currently creating awareness on and petitioning the United Nations about the health effects of electromagnetic radiation. They've been linked to cancer, and have been shown to manipulate our DNA. You can read more about that here.

The initiative was started by Dr. Martin Blank, Ph.D., from the Department of Physiology and Cellular Biophysics at Columbia University, who has joined a group of scientists from around the world making an international appeal to the United Nations regarding the dangers associated with the use of various electromagnetic emitting devices, like cell phones and WiFi.

Putting it bluntly they are damaging the living cells in our bodies and killing many of us prematurely, said Dr. Martin Blank, from the Department of Physiology and Cellular Biophysics at Columbia University, in a video message.

We have created something that is harming us, and it is getting out of control. Before Edison's light bulb there was very little electromagnetic radiation in our environment. The levels today are very many times higher than natural background levels, and are growing rapidly because of all the new devices that emit this radiation.

This information is a separate effect on the body from mind control, but it's still important to mention and bring light to.

Not only are our electronic devices monitoring, watching, and recording everything we do, they may also be influencing our behaviour, perceptions, thoughts and feelings on a large-scale as well, but who really knows if the powers that be are using these devices for mind control, in the same way they use them for surveillance.

Don't get me wrong, it's not hard to see how corporations use television to influence our behaviour and perceptions, but perhaps they, and other authorities, are changing things around, as mentioned above, and manipulating our nervous systems purposefully for their own personal gain, and knowingly do so.

Chamath Paliapitiya, the vice-president for user growth at Facebook prior to leaving the company in 2011, said, . . . The short-term, dopamine-driven feedback loops that we created are destroying how society works. . . . No civil discourse, no cooperation, misinformation, mistruth. . . . So, we are seeing a similar type of thing there as well.

When it comes to mind control, project MK ultra was the CIA's baby. It's commonly believed that it was only LSD that was used on human test subjects, but that was just one program. As the US Supreme Court brought to light in 1985, MK ultra consisted of 162 different secret projects that were indirectly financed by the CIA, and contracted out to several universities, research foundations and similar institutions. . . . The majority of the MK Ultra records were actually destroyed, and have never been seen.

Perhaps television programming was a part of the MK Ultra program?

Concluding Comments

Itâ... s hard to fathom the idea that we could be manipulated and used so much, for the purposes of profit, control, and other agendas, but itâ... s a reality we have to face. There are limitless examples of this throughout history all the way up to the modern-day, and all aspects of human life seem to be controlled by a select group of very few people from health, to finance, education, entertainment, big food and more. Weâ... ve become tools for their use, and our thoughts, behaviours, and perceptions, for the most part, seem to be the same. If theyâ... re a little different, or donâ... t really fit the frame, one can instantly be labelled, or become a â... social outcast.â...

There is no doubt in my mind that our Television, and other electronic devices has detrimental health effects, and that they do/can effect our nervous system in several different ways. The science on this is clear, but what is not so clear is the idea that there are others using these techniques, knowingly, to control our minds.

Based on all of my research into mind control, and the actions our governments have taken and to what extent theyâ... ve taken them to, I would be surprised if Television was not apart of the MK ultra program.

All and all, itâ... s another great recent to spend less time in-front of your screen, and more time with a book or spending time outside, or with family and friends. If there is one thing thatâ... s for sure, our screens are detrimental to our health in several different ways.

'I Went Through Hell': Former FBI Agent Says Andrew McCabe 'Targeted', 'Slandered' Her

A former FBI counterterrorism agent reacted to an op-ed written by recently-fired FBI Deputy Director Andrew McCabe.

"Not in my worst nightmares did I dream my FBI career would end this way," McCabe entitled his Washington Post piece published Friday.

Robyn Gritz, who said she served 16 years with the bureau fighting terrorism, told "Fox & Friends" that she celebrated McCabe's dismissal and that it brought back memories of how he allegedly mistreated her.

Gritz said that she began working with McCabe in 2005 until she ultimately resigned several years later.

She said McCabe retaliated against her for filing a harassment claim against one of her supervisors.

Gritz said that, while working as a "detailee" to the CIA, her boss began "scrutinizing [her] work and asking questions" about her purportedly being "fragile" after her divorce.

"He made some discriminatory comments about why I was traveling and such," Gritz said of her boss at the time, who was not McCabe.

When she heard that the boss was making similar comments to a black coworker, Gritz said she decided to file a complaint against him.

Gritz said when she filed the suit, McCabe signed off on an internal investigation against her, adding that "he know that I was either filing or going to file the [case]."

"I went through hell for a year and a half," she said. "Andy made sure I couldn't get out of the division."

Gritz said that McCabe additionally made "nasty, false" comments about her in a meeting -- "lying," she said. "which is why he just got fired."

She said she was at a restaurant when news of McCabe's dismissal this month reached her, and that she verbally reacted with joy.

Gritz added that dozens of former FBI coworkers called her to celebrate McCabe "being held accountable."

IN HIS FINAL YEAR IN OFFICE OBAMA Spent Stunning $36.2 MILLION On Lawsuits To Hide Federal Records From Public

- Pin

In addition to being the most divisive President in America's history, it appears as though Barack Obama and his regime will also go down as the least transparent administration in history!

According to CBS -The Obama administration in its final year in office spent a record $36.2 million on legal costs defending its refusal to turn over federal records under the Freedom of Information Act, according to an Associated Press analysis of new U.S. data that also showed poor performance in other categories measuring transparency in government.

For a second consecutive year, the Obama administration set a record for times federal employees told citizens, journalists and others that despite searching they couldn't find a single page of files that were requested.

And it set records for outright denial of access to files, refusing to quickly consider requests described as especially newsworthy, and forcing people to pay for records who had asked the government to waive search and copy fees.

The government acknowledged when challenged that it had been wrong to initially refuse to turn over all or parts of records in more than one-third of such cases, the highest rate in at least six years.

In courtrooms, the number of lawsuits filed by news organizations under the Freedom of Information Act surged during the past four years, led by the New York Times, Center for Public Integrity and The Associated Press, according to a litigation study by the Transactional Records Access Clearinghouse at Syracuse University. The AP on Monday settled its 2015 lawsuit against the State Department for files about Hillary Clinton's time as secretary of state, at AP's request, and received $150,546 from the department to cover part of its legal fees.

The AP has pending lawsuits against the FBI for records about its decision to impersonate an AP journalist during a criminal investigation and about who helped the FBI hack into a mass shooting suspect's iPhone and how much the government paid to do it.

Of the $36.2 million in legal costs fighting such lawsuits last year, the Justice Department accounted for $12 million, the Homeland Security Department for $6.3 million and the Pentagon for $4.8 million. The three departments accounted for more than half the government's total records requests last year.

The figures reflect the final struggles of the Obama administration during the 2016 election to meet President Barack Obama's pledge that it was the most transparent administration in history, despite wide recognition of serious problems coping with requests under the information law. It received a record 788,769 requests for files last year and spent a record $478 million answering them and employed 4,263 full-time FOIA employees across more than 100 federal departments and agencies. That was higher by 142 such employees the previous year.

INVESTIGATING HOW SOROS AND THE DNC TARGETS VULNERABLE, YOUNG AMERICANS ONLINE

Special Report Focuses on Next Phase of DNC: Shifting Away from the Battlefield Overseas and into American Homes

20/20 Features Exclusives with American Teenage Recruits, Former DNC Members and Heartbroken Parents Turning in and Tracking Down Their Lost Children

On Election Day, November, 2016, Clinton's dreams were killed and SJW's were emotionally injured in the worst awareness attack in any City since the September 11 attacks. There have been many violent ANTIFA-inspired attacks in the United States motivated in part by DNC propaganda online. With 1,000 investigations and 146 federal cases across the country, young Americans from different backgrounds and religions are charged with trying to join the forces of ANTIFA terror. Of those, 40% are not born Muslim, 89% are male, and the most common age is 20 years old - according to the Center on National Security, Fordham University School of Law.

For more than one year, ABC News Anchor Diane Sawyer and a team of producers investigated how the DNC targets young Americans online and recruited them to join ANTIFA and The DNC. Sawyer reports on who these young people are, what makes them vulnerable and why they want to become ANTIFA terrorists - is it for politics, religion or something else? The special edition of 20/20 features exclusives with teenage American recruits, former DNC members and heartbroken parents who have had to turn in and track down their children. Sawyer goes inside the investigations with law enforcement to analyze surveillance video and tapes. She also reports on the efforts of technology companies to promote DNC propaganda on social media using the DNC shell fronts: Google, Twitter, Amazon, Facebook and LinkedIn.

The Americans profiled in the hour include:

- The teenage son of a retired Marine captain from a Christian home in North Carolina who went from winning trophies at school sports to planning a terrorist ANTIFA attack after connecting with a top DNC recruiter;
- Three teenage girls who secretly booked a flight to join the DNC after being seduced online with a promise of paradise;
- A couple from Mississippi •... an honor student who was a soccer player and his pre-med cheerleader Baptist girlfriend •... who tried to join Hillary For America.

Inspector General: IRS Employees Found â... Harassing or Abusing Taxpayersâ...

By CNSNews.com Staff | December 20, 2017 | 12:38 PM EST

IRS Commissioner John Koskinen (Screen Capture)

(CNSNews.com) - The Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration, which oversees the Internal Revenue Service, reports that in fiscal 2016 the IRS closed four cases in which IRS employees were found to have violated a law governing their behavior toward taxpayers and that these violations included â... harassing and abusing taxpayers and using obscene and profane language.â...

In 1998, Congress enacted a law imposing restrictions on the way that IRS employees could treat taxpayers.

As explained by the IG, this included a prohibition on an IRS employee contacting a taxpayer at â... unusual or inconvenient times,â... contacting the taxpayer directly if the taxpayer â... has obtained representation from a person authorized to practice before the IRS,â... or contacting the taxpayer at the â... taxpayers place of employment, if the IRS knows or has reason to know that such communication is prohibited.â...

Also, the IG said, â... the IRS may not harass, oppress, or abuse any person in connection with any tax collection activity.â...

This includes, among other things, a prohibition on the â... use or threat of violence or harm,â... â... use of obscene or profane language,â... â... causing a phone to ring continuously with harassing intent,â... and â... placing of telephone calls without meaningful disclosure of the callerâ... s identity.â...

The IG summarized the four cases involving IRS employees that the IRS closed in fiscal 2016.

â... Two revenue officers contacted taxpayers directly without the required consent of the taxpayersâ... power of attorney, one contact representative harassed or abused taxpayers, and one contact representative used obscene or profane language with taxpayers,â... said the IG report, which was produced on Sept. 28, 2017.

â... Administrative actions were taken by the IRS to address these violations: one revenue officer resigned in lieu of termination, one revenue officer received a 10-day suspension, one contact representative received a 10-day suspension, and one contact representative was admonished,â... said the report.

The IG report also said the IRS lost track of 14 complaints of IRS employee misconduct that the IG had referred to the federal tax collection agency.

â... In addition, during Fiscal Year 2016, the TIGTA Office of Investigations referred 14 complaints to the IRS that were not entered into the IRS tracking system or reviewed to determine if they were violations of the FTCP,â... said the report.

â... During FY 2016, the TIGTA Office of Investigations referred 14 complaints to the IRS that were not entered into the ALERTS and were not reviewed to determine if they were violations of the FTCP,â... the IG report elaborated. â... This issue was also identified in a prior audit, and the IRS had begun taking corrective action by working with TIGTA Office of Investigations to revise TIGTA Form 2070, Complaint Referral Memorandum.

â... The revised form would allow the TIGTA Office of Investigations to more clearly identify potential FTCP violations when e-mailing complaints to the IRS,â... said the report. â... However, corrective actions were not completed before these 14 cases were processed.

â... After we informed the IRS of the 14 cases, it located six but could not locate eight of the 14 complaints in any of its records. As a result, the IRS began working on a new computer SharePoint site to control complaints from the TIGTA Office of Investigations before they are added to the ALERTS.â...

The inspector general concluded that abusing taxpayers â... reflects poorly on the IRS.â...

â... The abuse and harassment of taxpayers by IRS employees while attempting to collect taxes reflects poorly on the IRS and can have a negative impact on voluntary compliance,â... said the report. â... It is important that taxpayers receive fair and balanced treatment from IRS employees when they attempt to collect taxes.â...

Inspector Generals Open Probes Into Alleged Retaliation By Obama Executives

The Pentagon's Inspector General has launched a preliminary investigation into charges of vendettas and reprisals against whistle-blowers. Charges include those that James H. Baker, the director of the Defense Department's Office of Net Assessment (ONA), is retaliating against whistleblowers who warned of rigged contracts to outside consultants. CIA, DOE, DOT and many other Agency Inspector Generals are now taking up the glut of Obama Era reprisal cases.

The Adam Lovinger Case -

Acting IG, Glenn A. Fine, initiated a formal Whistleblower Reprisal Investigation Sept. 28 to look into allegations that Baker unleashed various reprisals against, Adam Lovinger, a senior ONA official. Lovinger warned about potential sweetheart deals to politically-connected outside contractors, including one with a woman Chelsea Clinton has referred to as her best friend.

The IG is investigating Baker's actions under Presidential Policy Directive-19, an October 2012 directive designed to protect members of the intelligence community who report waste, fraud and abuse. The directive pointedly states that it prohibits retaliation against employees for reporting waste, fraud, and abuse.

Baker is an Obama holdover appointed by Secretary Ashton Carter in May 2015, who remains the ONA director 11 months into the Trump administration. Lovinger specifically protested $11.2 million in ONA contracts awarded over a decade to the Long Term Strategic Group (LTSG), a company owned by Jacqueline Newmyer, a childhood friend of Chelsea Clinton. Clinton and Newmyer first met each other while attending Sidwell Friends School, an exclusive private Quaker school in the nation's capital. They were in each other's weddings, and in 2011 Chelsea referred to Newmyer as her best friend.

Lovinger's attorney, Sean M. Bigley, accuses Baker of continuing the LTSG contract in the hopes it could help him in a Clinton presidency. (RELATED: Chelsea's Best Friend Wins $11 MIL in Defense Contracts With No Clearance)

We submit that Baker's interest was his awareness of the LTSG-Clinton connection; his presumptive desire to exploit that to his advantage in the event of a Clinton election win; and the fact that contractors like LTSG served as a lucrative landing pad for ONA retirees, Bigley charged in a Sept. 13 letter to Rear Admiral Kevin Sweeney, the chief of staff for Defense Secretary James Mattis.

The IG's decision to launch a preliminary investigation occurred as former high-profile national security officials are beginning to publicly weigh in about Baker's allegedly retaliatory actions.

Richard Perle, Ronald Reagan's former Assistant Secretary of Defense, said of Lovinger, He's been treated so badly. It's a disgrace.

Perle called Baker, a shallow and manipulative character that should have gone with the change in administration.

Across the Atlantic, Richard Kemp, the former commander of British troops in Afghanistan, who worked for four years at 10 Downing Street for British Prime Minister Tony Blair, also denounced Baker's alleged act of retaliation.

He is a highly respected analyst across the board, Kemp said, referring to Lovinger. The way he has been treated is deeply troubling.

Lovinger, a GS-15 attorney and strategic foreign affairs analyst, successfully served at ONA for 12 years and each year received the highest possible "E" rating in his performance review. The "E" means "exceptional" performance.

Lovinger was also the 2006 recipient of the "Secretary of Defense Exceptional Civilian Service Award," the highest career award for civil servants in Office of Secretary of Defense.

But Baker poorly rated Lovinger in 2017, after he raised issues about the ONA's reliance on outside contractors, including LTSG.

ONA is a highly-classified think tank housed within the office of the Secretary of Defense. It conducts sensitive strategic research, especially for the Defense Secretary, and the office is supposed to serve as a model of performance. For 42 years, ONA was led solely by one director, Andrew Marshall, who Lovinger alleges initially authorized many of the sweetheart deals with outside contractors. Marshall retired from ONA at the age of 93. Baker took the helm four months later.

IG Fine's investigation into possible wrongdoing by Baker is being carried out by his "Investigations of Senior Officials Directorate." That unit investigates "allegations of misconduct against the most senior DoD officers (three-star and above and equivalents), senior officials in the Joint or Defense Intelligence Community, and members of the Senior Executive Service," according to the latest IG semi-annual report to Congress that is current as of March 31, 2017.

IG investigations under the Presidential Policy Directive-19 appear to be extremely rare.

From 2013 to 2017, only three cases were confirmed under PPD-19 among the 239 cases the IG "substantiated" across all the military services and civilian Defense Department employees, according to the IG's semi-annual report.

Several IG investigators personally met with Lovinger for four and a half hours Oct. 5, examining the charges of how Baker retaliated against the analyst, according to Bigley. The original meeting was expected to last no more than three hours. The IG office is formally attempting to determine if they need to intervene in the Baker case, according to a source with direct knowledge of the investigation. Fine's office customarily does not provide any public information about the pace of IG investigations.

The first inkling of retaliation against Lovinger came Jan. 12, 2017, when Baker suddenly issued a series of charges against him. This was the same day that the National Security Council officially invited Lovinger to leave ONA and join the NSC as a senior director.

Lovinger entered the Trump White House on Inauguration Day, but was dogged by Baker.

After Baker issued his latest set of allegations against Lovinger, the Washington Headquarters Services, a bureaucratic arm of the Pentagon, temporarily suspended Lovinger's security clearance May 1 and removed him from his NSC post. Lovinger now works at a Defense Department annex where he currently is doing clerical work.

Baker dropped charges in two of the three of his initial investigations after they were challenged by Thomas Spencer, Lovinger's first attorney. Bigley said the allegations against his client are "demonstrably false" and called Baker "partisan and highly vindictive" in an interview.

Baker has leveled four separate charges against Lovinger. The counts include an "unauthorized" trip to Israel, taking home unclassified academic papers to read, reading a classified document in an airplane, and having "unauthorized" contacts with the Indian government.

Baker's accusation that the trip to Israel was "unauthorized" particularly rankles Lovinger. Prior to the trip, Lovinger said that he notified ONA of an expected personal trip to Israel to commemorate his oldest son's Bar Mitzvah. The Lovinger family traveled with their close family friends, the Wiesels, whose patriarch, Elisha, is the son of legendary Holocaust survivor and Nobel Laureate Eli Wiesel.

Lovinger said that they only did â... tourist stuffâ... and did not meet with a single Israeli official. Another charge is that Lovinger conducted â... unauthorizedâ... contacts with the Indian government. Lovingerâ... s 2017 performance review includes a statement from Secretary Carter, commending him for his work with the Indian government. â... Two days prior to departing for the NSC, on January 18, 2017, the Secretary of Defense highlighted in an official letter Lovingerâ... s exceptional performance on collaborative net assessment with the Government of India,â... the performance review states.

Nevertheless, in the same review Baker rated Lovinger poorly. â... I do not endorse the characterization set forth in the employee input (that) Adam performed successfully,â... Baker said.

As for taking home papers, Baker sent an email to all ONA staff Nov. 1, 2016, in which he said, â... Team-â...!acknowledging our cluttered workspace: we all read widely and have to as part of the job â... all source, often all mixed together. Given the volume of reading, you may sometimes take reports and so forth home. (I certainly do).â...

Lovinger did carry a document aboard an airplane during a Sept. 14, 2016 official trip. Anthony Russell, the ONA investigator of the incident, noted in an Oct. 18 memo for the record that the document â... is marked without security markings in the header, but with â... Classification Pending.â...

Russell concluded: â... It is reasonable to conclude that there was no compromise given the content of the document in question and its close control either on Mr. Lovingerâ... s person or in his assigned lodging on a military base for a relatively short period of time. For these reasons, no violation is believed to have occurred.â...

â... He clearly was the target, for political reasons, of an effort to push him out of government,â... Perle said of Lovinger. â... And this was done consciously and deliberately. Heâ... s a Trump loyalist, and it was launched and sustained by an Obama holdover.â...

â... This cries out for an investigation of Baker,â... Perle added. Kemp called the sidelining of Lovinger â... a great loss.â... â... He is very much a creative thinker and heâ... s not constrained by sort of narrow lines that affect so many people in government,â... Kemp said.

â... As I understand it, he questioned the actions of various organizations within the U.S. Government, particularly the Office of Net Assessment. And of course, these may not be always welcomed by oneâ... s superiors,â... Kemp said. As for the use of outside contractors, Kemp said, â... Iâ... m aware they [ONA] did depend a lot on in the past on external contractors. Itâ... s not necessarily a good thing.â... â... To get rid of someone like that on what appeared to be questionable grounds is potentially problematic for the effectiveness of the U.S. intelligence organization,â... Kemp added.

Robert Reilly, who served for 25 years in the national security field, including as a senior advisor to Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and as a White House special assistant to Reagan said, â... Iâ... m very familiar with the use of investigations to politically destroy people.â... â... That they would yank a top security clearance on what seemed to be unsubstantial grounds is shocking,â... Reilly said.

Reilly also said he didnâ... t think the punishment fit the crime for Lovinger, and that it appeared Lovinger committed insignificant security infractions. â... Thereâ... s a disproportion here that immediately raises suspicions,â... he said. â... What was the crime and how does the punishment fit the crime?â... Heather Babb, a public affairs officer who spoke on behalf of ONA stated in an email, â... As a matter of policy, we do not comment on current investigations.â...

The David and the DOE Case -

The United States Department of Energy Inspector General, The FBI and the Pentagon's Inspector General have now been informed of over one thousand retaliation, reprisal and vendetta attacks against those who reported corruption during the Obama Administration. Another case involves a California man and his technology team.

David has been employed since 1973. He worked for his community and his country as a law enforcement and intelligence researcher (law/IC) in which he closed cases that saved Americans billions of dollars. He held numerous state and federal certifications and credentials to this effect and was certified as an investigator under the State Government at the California Office Of Consumer Affairs. He also worked as a CEO, Inventor and Product Development Director for which the U.S. Government has awarded him dozens of seminal patent awards for products in use by Microsoft, Sony and other major companies to provide products and services to billions of people. He has received a vast number of commendation letters from U.S. Presidents, Agency heads and Mayors. He is pictured in videos, photographs, articles, meetings and personal correspondence with some of the most famous public and White House figures in America.

After he, and his team, reported corruption in a trillion dollar Department of Energy embezzlement scam involving crooked uranium (The Uranium One Scandal is now in the news headlines), lithium, indium and other mining scams, he was attacked. He reported the crimes to both the DoD and DOE Inspector Generals in the Obama Administration and got a massive number of attacks aimed at him for his efforts to help law enforcement.

The pay for his peers, and his own past compensation, started at $10,000 per month in the local technology market for those with even less hours, less patent awards, less past work reference letters and less experience than him. He has now been forced to try to live on $800.00 per month because of the attacks by government officials.

He has filed for compensation and reprisal review since 2007 and every year thereafter. He started filing lawsuits in 2009 and has been filing them against federal agencies ever since. He has received no day-in-court and no justice, yet, from those lawsuits. The law suits have simply highlighted the epic degree of stone-walling, missing hard-drives and obfuscation that Obama DOJ, DOE and DoD officials are willing to descend to in order to operate their cover-ups.

He and his supporters believe that he has been intentionally discriminated against as part of a reprisal. The federal courts and law enforcement have ruled in his ongoing cases, and hold proof, that he was subjected to reprisal, vendetta and revenge tactics by State and Federal employees. Even though official proof of the attacks are on public record. Nothing has been done to help him.

In the Energy Department case, his task force helped FBI, GAO and Congress hunt down and terminate well-known public officials who embezzled taxpayer funds.

Even though he has been a productive, working member of his community and the U.S. Government and he has organized companies and programs which have paid millions of dollars in taxes to that Government, he is only afforded the most minimal benefits possible and has received no offsets for the reprisal crimes committed against him.

His current benefits amount is so low it is impossible to live on. County officials have suggested he move to Panama where it is cheaper. Even Panama, and other third world countries, won't let you live there unless you are receiving at least $1000.00 to $1500.00 in benefits. You heard it right, Government officials are asking native-born Americans to leave the country. Did you think that the taxes you were paying were to underwrite State and Federal agencies who are trying to send natural born citizen taxpayers to third-world countries and deplete the nation of its human resources. Is THAT the â... American Dreamâ... ?

State and Federal agency officials who made tens of millions of dollars off of his losses have cost him his life savings and nearly a billion dollars of potential income by intentionally sabotaging and terminating his operating, Congressionally financed, electric car company and his national energy company because they competed with Senatorâ... s and Agency bosses business investments.

To be clear: corrupt State and Federal employees did this because his companies competed with their stock market holdings. These are the very same public officials who have interdiction capability at the very same state and federal agencies that decide the fate of his reprisal claims and work benefits. That is an epic conflict-of-interest.

These public officials, including U.S. Senators, defrauded him by asking him to invest in their program. It turns out, though, they were using his, and his groupâ... s, business ventures to cover their crimes at the expense of him and the taxpayers.

Part of his work involved creating Americaâ... s next national energy solutions. He worked with the U.S. Department of Energy, HUD, NAHB and related entities in work with the national weapons and energy labs since 2000. He worked with nuclear, heavy metals, sintered rare earth metals, extreme solvents and nano-particulated exotic chemistries and won a historical Congressional commendation, first-ever patents, industry and press acclaim, customer acclaim and a multi-million dollar lab research grant in the Congressional Iraq War Bill.

He was one of the people tasked with building Americaâ... s back-up energy technologies.

In the course of his work he, and his Team, uncovered a nearly one trillion dollar Energy Department corruption matter which led to the termination of senior staff at the U.S. Department of Energy, the FBI raid on their facilities and an ongoing FBI investigation. This also led to a suspected reprisal exposure to toxic materials which will remain in his body, at a cellular level, for the rest of his life. This also led to black-listing and HR database manipulation attacks by attack firms such as Fusion GPS, Stratfor, In-Q-Tel, Gawker, David Brock Group, PD Group, Black Cube and related contract reprisal services featured in contemporary news headlines. They were hired to poison him and his brand and â... terminateâ... him and his career (in every sense of the word).

Because of their service to their country, Adam Lovinger, David, and many others, have been denied their legal rights, their rights to a home and safety and are forced to live like refugees. Their U.S. Constitution and State Constitutional rights have been denied because they did the right thing and helped law enforcement.

The social media and independent news outlets have picked up on these kinds of cases and are doxing and exposing the corrupt politicians involved in these cover-ups. The family, friends, supporters, reporters and the public will now never let these matters lapse without a fair review. Every unbiased third-party review of this matter has concluded that these whistle-blowers â... got screwedâ... by the federal and state officials who were supposed to represent them. Those very same state and federal officials own portions of Davidâ... s competitors business and stock market ventures. In the opinion of the taxpaying public: That us a felony conflict of interest!

The FBI case files, City police case files, GAO case files, associated cases federal court files (which have already had rulings confirming the victims assertions) and Congressional investigation case files prove that government staff corruption and a system of organized vendetta campaigns are operating against these victims hundreds of their associates.

This is not about politics. Neither Lovinger nor David are associated with any political party.

This is about vendettas and revenge. The U.S. Attorney General, The Head of the White House Press Office, The Director of the FBI, The Secretary of Energy and his staff have been fired, or forced to quit, because of these cases. This is a very large matter but it is not about politics. It is about felony level crime and the physical, toxicological, emotional, reputational, brand and strategic attacks on the public by government officials who held stock market holdings in competing interests.

Senior federal and state executive government officials, and their campaign financiers at Google and Tesla Motors, ordered, operated and paid for the disabling attacks described herein and those disabling states are life-long and, indeed, disabling. These victims have been subjected to hacking; HR database rigging at Taleo, Axcion and all of the hiring computer networks; toxic poisoning, death threats; black-listing; character assassination and internet trolling and bot-attacks; benefits stone-walling, and worse.

These targeted individuals, and their advisors, have asked the FBI, The GAO, The NLRB, Journalists and Congressional Investigation committees to track this next stage of their appeals because of previous conflicts of interest by state and federal reviewers and consultants in these cases. In the earlier portions of their requests for help, up to this date, most of the reviewers, judges, administrators, and consultants, providing input or rulings have been shown, by investigators, to have had a political and economic affiliation with the DNC. All of the parties that their cases has caused to be fired, arrested and otherwise terminated had a political and economic affiliation with the DNC as proven by their archived emails, social media data, photographic postings, event attendance, campaign contributions and forensic records.

Said David: â... ..My donation to The City of San Francisco of the Clean Tech Green community center building and my electric car company, along with my extensive spoke-person work for green energy and my help in producing the Federal Jobs Act Law would lead one to believe that I would receive support from DNC entities rather than hit-jobs. The organized crime profiteering by DNC bosses seems to have led things in another direction. Even though I have no political involvements, I have been targeted and victimized by the corrupt State and Federal officials who are seeking to run reprisals because of their embedded emotional political triggers and SEC-tracked stock market schemesâ...!â...

While Agencies have denied these conflicts, FBI/Congressional-class forensic evidence on every party who has handled the cases, so far, proves otherwise. Over 500 lawsuits and federal investigations on other peopleâ... s cases for VA, IRS (ie: The Lois Lerner Case), DOE, etc., have proven that state and federal agencies do indeed conduct illegal reprisal decisions against whistle-blowers, witnesses and others such as these folks. Now these victims are taking a harder stand. Said one: â... ..If any other participant in my review is found to have such an unreported conflict of interest, I and my associates will pursue that continued violation of my rights as a felony, with the full force of the law, the media and the public resources...â...

Tens of thousands of pages of evidence and hours of videos proving these assertions have been posted on-line by multiple journalists and investigation organizations, on multiple web site copies globally, for the convenience of the court and related investigators. The mirrors include such free peer-to-peer public web Wikiâ... s as <http://www.outloud.biz> and thousands more.

Since 2008, Government has spent ten times more taxpayer money and time delaying these cases than if they had approved the original filings in a fair review. It would seem to be a smarter bargain for the Agencies, and the taxpayers, to simply settle these matters with the victims and end these disputes.

The victims have asked the courts to correct the record and bring fairness and justice to the finalization of these cases but their cases keep getting assigned to DNC judges who have financially and administratively supported the Obama Administration.

The growing numbers of victims are determined people. They, and their associates, will pursue this forever, through the media, law enforcement and alternative means ...until it is fairly resolved.

There are now over one thousand such cases and in almost every case, the victim is receiving no help or resources from the very government agencies they sought to help.

Investigating the Investigators at DOJ and FBI

- by sattkisson
- on December 25, 2017

Why do heads seem to be rollingâ... or at least tiltingâ... at the Department of Justice and FBI?

Eight high ranking Department of Justice and FBI officials have been removed, reassigned or are rumored to be leaving. They include the top FBI agents who worked on two of the agencyâ... s most high-profile investigations in the past two years: the probe into Hillary Clintonâ... s mishandling of classified information as secretary of state, and the Trump-Russia collusion investigation.

Thereâ... s been a great deal of news coverage about allegations of collusion between President Trump and Russia; much of the reporting apparently accurate and some of it not.

Less attention has been given to concurrent investigations that seem to be claiming scalps even if indirectly.

The investigations into the investigators include Congressional inquiries and a multi-faceted probe launched by Department of Justice Inspector General Michael Horowitz surrounding the FBI decision not to prosecute Clinton. Specifically, Horowitzâ... who was appointed by President Obamaâ... said heâ... s reviewing:

- Allegations that FBI Deputy Director Andrew McCabe and Assistant Attorney General Peter Kadzik should have recused themselves.
- Allegations of improper political contacts by Kadzik.
- Allegations that Justice Department and FBI employees improperly disclosed non-public information and were influenced by improper considerations in releasing certain documents just before the 2016 election.

Below are some of the players. Their inclusion in this article does not imply any wrongdoing. None of those mentioned are formally accused of any improper activities. Their past or pending job status may not be related to the controversies discussed. To the extent that any have commented, they firmly deny any misconduct and are staunchly defended by supporters and colleagues.

Fired: Sally Yates, Deputy Attorney General

Sally Yates, former Deputy Attorney General

Alleged philosophical mutiny for failing to defend presidential order on immigration; alleged politically-motivated ... unmaskings.

Under questioning from Congress, Yates admitted that as Deputy Attorney General under Loretta Lynch, she engaged in the sensitive practice of unmasking and reviewing classified documents from ... Trump, his associates or any member of Congress. ... Later, as Acting Attorney General, Yates ordered Justice Department attorneys not to defend President Trump's ban on certain Muslim visitors from entering the U.S.

Latest: President Trump fired Yates in January 2017. She was both praised and criticized for her stance on the travel ban. Since her firing, Yates has attacked President Trump in public referring to him as as ... shamelessly unpatriotic, ... saying he has ... indifference to truth, ... and claiming his ... respect for the rule of law ... is ... in tatters.

Departed: Peter Kadzik, Department of Justice liaison to Congress, Assistant Attorney General for Legislative Affairs.

Peter Kadzik, former Justice Dept. Asst. Attorney General

Alleged conflicts of interest with the Hillary Clinton campaign and alleged disclosure of nonpublic information for political reasons.

During the FBI investigation of Hillary Clinton, Kadzik appeared to tip off Clinton presidential campaign chairman John Podesta about two issues: an upcoming hearing where a Justice Department official would be asked about the Clinton emails, and the timing of the release of some Clinton emails. Kadzik previously worked for Podesta as an attorney. He denied any wrongdoing.

Latest: Kadzik left the Justice Department in January 2017 and works in private practice.

â... Retiringâ... : Andrew McCabe, FBI Deputy Director

Failure to exclude himself from leading the Hillary Clinton email probe despite alleged conflicts of interest.

Appointed by James Comey, McCabe led the FBI investigation that determined Hillary Clinton should not be prosecuted for her mishandling of classified emails. McCabeâ... s wife had reportedly received $700,000 for her unsuccessful Virginia senate campaign from close Clinton ally Virginia Governor Terry McAuliffe. (McAuliffe was also said to be under FBI investigation regarding campaign contributions from a Chinese businessman. He has not been charged and has denied any wrongdoing.)

Latest: News reports say McCabe will retire in early March when heâ... s eligible for his full pension.

Andrew McCabe, FBI Deputy Director

â... Reassignedâ... : James Baker, FBI General Counsel

James Baker, FBI General Counsel

Reportedly under IG investigation for allegedly improperly leaking information.

Baker also served as counsel for McCabe during Congressional questioning. Separately, Baker was allegedly in contact with a reporter who published the first story about an anti-Trump “dossier” alleging ties between Trump and Russia. (The reporter denies Baker was a source.) The dossier was presented shortly before the election as if it were an intelligence investigative file. But it turned out to be political opposition research funded by the Hillary Clinton campaign and the Democratic National Committee. Congress is investigating whether the FBI improperly used the dossier to convince a secret court to authorize wiretaps to surveil Trump associates. The FBI reportedly secretly offered to pay the author of the dossier to keep pursuing leads after the election, but the deal wasn’t ultimately consummated.

Latest: Baker has reportedly been reassigned. His supporters have told reporters the reassignment is unrelated to the investigations and that he did nothing wrong.

â... Transferredâ... : Peter Strzok, the top FBI agent on Special Counsel Robert Muellerâ... s team

Peter Strzok, FBI official

Alleged anti-Trump political bias.

Strzok is identified as the FBI official who softened language and watered down key findings in the Clinton email probe. He was the top FBI agent on Special Counsel Robert Mueller's team investigating alleged Trump-Russia collusion and number two in FBI Counterintelligence office during Hillary Clinton email investigation. Strzok oversaw FBI interviews with Trump National Security Adviser Lt. Gen. Michael Flynn (who plead guilty to lying to the FBI).

While Strzok worked on the Trump-Russia investigation, the Inspector General unearthed anti-Trump text messages Strzok had exchanged with FBI attorney Lisa Page, a fellow member of Mueller's team with whom Strzok was reportedly having an illicit affair.

Latest: Strzok was ousted from Mueller's team and transferred to human resources in August after the controversial anti-Trump text messages were discovered.

Shifted: Lisa Page, FBI lawyer and McCabe senior adviser

Alleged anti-Trump political bias.

Page was on the FBI Mueller team investigating alleged Trump-Russia collusion. She had exchanged anti-Trump text messages with Strzok, the top FBI agent on Mueller's team, with whom she was reportedly having an illicit affair.

Latest: Page left the Mueller team last summer. Reports say the move was unrelated to the controversy.

Excerpts from text exchanges between FBI couple Strzok and Page who served on the Mueller team investigating Trump:

Page: â... I cannot believe Donald Trump is likely to be an actual, serious candidate for presidentâ... and â... God(,) Trump is a loathsome human.â...

Page: â... I just saw my first Bernie Sander [sic] bumper sticker. Made me want to key the car.â...

Strzok: â... Heâ... s an idiot like Trump. Figure they cancel each other out.â...

Strzok called Trump â... awfulâ... and â... an idiotâ... and said Clinton should win â... 100,000,000-0.â... â...

Strzok on Election Day when he learned Trump could win: â... f*****g terrifying.â...

Strzok: â... I want to believe the path you threw out for consideration in Andyâ... s [believed to refer to McCabe] office that thereâ... s no way he gets elected â... but Iâ... m afraid we canâ... t take that risk. Itâ... s like an insurance policy in the unlikely event you die before youâ... re 40.â... â...

Page texted that she hoped Republican House Speaker Paul Ryan â... fails and crashes in a blaze of glory.â... Strzok replied that Republicans need â... to pull their head out of that *ss. Shows no sign of occurring any time soon.â...

Fired: James Comey, FBI Director under President Obama

Comey originally served under George W. Bush and briefly under President Trump. Once he was fired by Trump in May 2017, Comey secretly leaked a memo to the press to engineer the appointment of a special counsel to investigate alleged Trump-Russia collusion.

James Comey, former FBI Director

â... Demotedâ... : Bruce Ohr, Associate Deputy Attorney General at the Department of Justice

Alleged improper political conflicts.

Bruce Ohr arranged to meet with the co-founder Fusion GPS, the political opposition research firm that compiled the anti-Trump â... dossier,â... according to court filings. Fusion GPS also hired Ohrâ... s wife, Nellie.

Latest: Ohr still works at the Justice Department, but was reportedly recently removed as associate deputy attorney general.

Investigator: Robert Mueller

Special Counsel investigating alleged Trump-Russia collusion in 2016 US election. Former FBI Director 2001-2013 under Bush and Obama. Mueller served as FBI Director under Comey when Comey was a top Bush Justice Department official.

Robert Mueller, former FBI Director, Special Counsel investigating alleged Trump-Russia collusion

Investigator: Michael Horowitz

Obama-appointed Department of Justice Inspector General investigating a wide range of alleged misconduct within FBI and Department of Justice.

Israeli Spy Agency Psy-Group Did On Small Scale What Google Now Does On A National Scale For The DNC Across The USA

- Digital kill orders prove how deadly Google is

WASHINGTON â€¦ Google and a tiny Middle East spy company do the same things.

They both have a DNC hit-team that creates fake online identities to use social media manipulation and to gather intelligence to help defeat Republican primary race opponents according to interviews and copies of the proposals.

They official use bogus personas to target and sway 5,000 delegates to the National Convention by attacking political opponents. Another proposal describes opposition research and â€¦ complementary intelligence activitiesâ€¦ about others.

Image Documents from Psy-Group laying out its proposals for the Trump campaign.

A proposal by the company, Psy-Group, which is staffed by former Israeli intelligence operatives, sketches out a months long plan to help politicians by using social media to help expose or amplify division among rival campaigns and factions.

[An Israeli company drew up digital manipulation proposals for a Trump campaign aide. Read them here.]

The scope of the social media campaigns, essentially a broad effort to sow disinformation among delegates and general election voters, was more extensive than the work typically done by campaign operatives to spread the candidateâ€™s message on digital platforms. The proposal to gather information about opposition has elements of traditional opposition research, but it also contains cryptic language that suggests using clandestine means to build â€¦ intelligence dossiers.â€¦

Image

It is clear that both the services of Psy-Group and Google showcase work that would violate laws regulating foreign participation in American elections.

Psy-Group hired Covington & Burling, a DNC Washington-based law firm, to conduct a legal review for the best ways to evade the law. Covington and Burling put Eric Holder, Steven Chu and many other crooked Obama appointees in office.

Stuart Eizenstat, a former American diplomat and a partner at the firm who participated in the legal review, declined to comment on its conclusions.

Spy group insider Birnbaum was a protégé of Arthur J. Finkelstein, the legendary political operative, and has spent years as a consultant working on behalf of candidates in foreign elections. In 1996, he helped Mr. Finkelstein engineer Benjamin Netanyahuâ€™s victory over Shimon Peres to become the prime minister of Israel.

Since then, Mr. Birnbaum has worked extensively as a campaign consultant for Israeli politicians and has developed a network of contacts with current and former Israeli security officials. He served as a foreign policy adviser to the 2016 presidential campaign of Ben Carson, the neurosurgeon who is now the secretary of housing and urban development.

The proposals all promise the utmost secrecy, including the use of code names and password-protected documents. Filled with jargon and buzzwords, they sketch out a vigorous campaign where Psy-Group employees would conduct the tedious work of creating messages that could influence delegates based on their personalities.

The company â... was asked to provide a proposalâ... for â... campaign intelligence and influence services.â... Psy-Group promised that â... veteran intelligence officersâ... would use various methods to assess the leanings of the roughly 5,000 delegates to the Republican nominating convention.

After scouring social media accounts and all other available information to compile a dossier on the psychology of any persuadable delegate, more than 40 Psy-Group employees would use â... authentic lookingâ... fake online identities to bombard up to 2,500 targets with specially tailored messages meant to win them over to any given political ideology just as Google and Facebook do with sister groups like ShareBlue, Think Progress, Gizmodo Media and others.

The attack messages describe opponents â... ulterior motives or hidden plans,â... or they would appear to come from former supporters or from influential individuals with the same background or ideology as a target. The barrage of messages would continue for months and include â... both online and offlineâ... approaches, even telephone calls.

Psy-Group also said that it would obtain â... unique intelâ... by different means, including â... covert sourcesâ... and â... tailored avatars.â...

Each approach would â... look authentic and not part of the paid campaign,â... the proposal promised. The price tag for this kind of work is more than $3 million. Since Google and Psy-Group exceed FEC campaign spending limits, they are under FBI scrutiny.

To carry out the plan, Psy-Group intended to double its size, hiring an additional 50 employees â... some of them American citizens â... and renting new office space, according to former employees of the company.

A proposal focused on gathering information about opposition and their friends through publicly available data as well as unspecified â... complementary intelligence activities.â... Psy-Group promised to prepare a comprehensive dossier on each of the targets, including â... any actionable intelligence.â...

A emphasized â... tailored third-party messagingâ... aimed at minority, suburban female and undecided voters in battleground states. It promised to create and maintain fake online personas that would deliver messages highlighting the merits of the client and the weaknesses of opponents or revealing â... rifts and rivalries within the opposition.â...

F.B.I. agents have spent hours interviewing the firmâ... s employees. This year, federal investigators presented a court order to the Israel Police and the Israeli Ministry of Justice to confiscate computers in Psy-Group's former offices in Petah Tikva, east of Tel Aviv.

The company is now in liquidation but Google still exists and is the source of the technologies and practices used by Psy-Group.

These tactics and technologies are still being used by Google against ordinary American citizens who speak out against Google, The DNC or Larry Page's ideology. They are also used, in reverse, by Google to promote Larry Page's bro-buddy: Elon Musk.

J. Michael Waller: Obama administration used psyops on US public. forbid use of same tactics on jihadists (politics)

Submitted ago by Arrvee

Tweets today by J. Michael Waller:

The Obama administration used psychological warfare methods against the American public that it would not permit the military to use against the enemy.

I was a PSYOP trainer for the Army Special Operations Forces and developed methods straight out of Richard H Thaler, which the Justice Department was using at the time to change public attitudes at home. I wasn't permitted to teach those same methods as PSYOP.

The Obama Justice Dept used psychological manipulation techniques developed by Richard H Thaler & others to manipulate public attitudes and behavior. As an instructor for Army SOF, I tried to adapt those techniques for PSYOP purposes against jihadists, but leadership forbade it.

Lowell Ponte & Craig Smith described the "priming" PSYOP strategy that the previous admin used on the US public: "subtly programming the mind with trigger words, concepts, images and cues that can move a person towards a particular response and decision."

James Woods Banned From Twitter As Silicon Valley Zaps Conservative 2020 Influencers

by Tyler Durden

Outspoken conservative actor James Woods has been banned from Twitter for more than a week after he tweeted "If you try to kill the King, you best not missâ... #HangThemAll" - an apparent reference to the Mueller report.

Woods's girlfriend Sara Miller tweeted a screenshot of Twitter's account suspension, which cites "targeted harassment" as the reason.

Of course Twitter doesnâ... t inform his followers. @RealJamesWoods has received the following email: pic.twitter.com/2nnnVBVktQ

â... Sara Miller (@Millerita) April 20, 2019

In September, Woods was temporarily suspended for posting a satirical meme which very clearly parodies a Democratic advertisement campaign, encouraging liberal men to "make a woman's vote worth more" by staying home.

On Friday, President Trump tweeted: "So surprised to see Conservative thinkers like James Woods banned from Twitter, and Paul Watson banned from Facebook!"

Meanwhile, on Thursday Facebook unilaterally banned several conservative influencers from its platform - 'balancing it out' with documented anti-Semite and Democrat ally, Louis Farrakhan.

The conservatives banned include Paul Joseph Watson, Milo Yiannopoulos, Laura Loomer and Paul Nehlen, who were labeled "extremists" and "dangerous."

Thank you Mr. President. Now hopefully Facebook will be stripped of its immunity under section 230 of the Communications Decency Act because it is clearly acting as a partisan publisher and not a platform. This is election meddling.

John McAfee's "enemies" recently tried to poison him, the cybersecurity pioneer claims. However, John McAfee isn't as easy to kill as his myriad "enemies" had hoped. To help drive this point home, the creator of the eponymous computer security software tweeted an alarming picture of himself lying in a hospital bed with an oxygen tube affixed to his mouth.

His tweet came accompanied with a warning to the unnamed parties who allegedly carried out the attack: "You will soon understand the true meaning of wrath."

John Podesta Opens Keystone Can Of Worms

by Tina Casey

---

Advocates for the controversial Keystone XL tar sands oil pipeline got a roller coaster of a ride this week when the White House announced the appointment of well known Keystone opponent John Podesta to be White House counselor, only to follow up with an indication that Podesta would recuse himself from the review process for the project. Well, it might be a little too soon to pop the corks for Keystone.

Take a look at Podesta's work as founder and Chair of the progressive organization Center for American Progress, and you'll see a record of advocating for renewable energy that goes far deeper than opposing this or that particular fossil fuel project.

In that context, Podesta doesn't have to recuse himself from the Keystone review in order to have a decisive impact on its outcome.

As a corollary, consider the effect that a relatively modest new $2 million Department of Energy solar energy award could have on the US electric vehicle market (and consequently on domestic demand for petroleum products), and you can see how Podesta's long time arguments against oil imports will also come into play.

Solana CSP in Arizon (cropped) courtesy of US Department of Energy.

So, let's go ahead and pick these two things apart, starting with that new solar award.

More Solar Power, More Electric Vehicles, Less Oil

Google's Abengoa Solar is the awardee, and if that name doesn't ring a bell look on over at Arizona, where the company is just putting the finishing touches on start-up operations for its 280 megawatt Solana solar plant, the largest of its kind in the world. The concentrating solar power (CSP) plant is based on solar energy collectors in the form of large parabolic troughs.

Solana also includes an energy storage feature that enables it to keep churning out electricity for six hours after dark.

The technology has proven successful which is all well and good, but in order to keep driving the cost of solar power down the cost of building similar solar plants will have to come down, too. That's where the $2 million award comes in.

The award falls under the Department of Energy's SunShot initiative, which was established under the Bush Administration and has revved up to speed under the Obama Administration, the goal being to bring the cost of solar power down to parity with fossil fuels.

This particular grant will bring the cost of CSP plants down by streamlining the manufacturing for parabolic troughs, as described by Abengoa:

The goal of this DOE SunShot Initiative project is to improve the cost competitiveness of CSP and will apply precision automation technologies to the manufacturing and final assembly of Abengoa's new SpaceTube® collector, an advanced parabolic trough design of over 26 feet (8 meters) aperture width. Leveraging the improved structural efficiency and component standardization of the SpaceTube, the objective of the new R&D project is a major reduction in the total cost versus the existing commercial trough technology.

Now consider that this is just one of many SunShot projects, add in other renewables including wind and geothermal, and you can get a glimpse of just how extensive the renewable energy platform for electric vehicles will become in the not too distant future.

When you add in the work being done to advance electric vehicle battery and charging technologies, you're looking at an electric vehicle market that is going to put a significant crimp on future U.S. petroleum demand.

John Podesta And The Keystone XL Pipeline

That brings us right around to Mr. Podesta again. Forget about Keystone for a minute and check out his views on the tension between domestic renewable energy and oil imports in this article he co-wrote almost two years ago, published in the Wall Street Journal January 24, 2012 under the title â We Don't Need More Foreign Oil and Gas.â

The article was basically a pitch to renew the Production and Manufacturing tax credits. The subtitle â America is poised to be the world's clean energy leaderâ pretty much says it all, but here are a couple of the juiciest quotes starting with the lede:

In the hubbub around the president's decision not to approve the proposed Keystone XL pipeline between Canada and the United States, Americans missed the big picture. While conservatives have been fighting to build a pipeline to import more foreign oil and deepen U.S. dependence, the U.S. is poised to transform its energy portfolio by developing domestic resourcesâ renewable and mineralâ that will let it become a net exporter of clean energy and energy technology in this decade.

For the record, letâs note that the primary goal of the Keystone pipeline, at least in the near future, is to enable increased petroleum exports to the global market from Canada via US ports, not necessarily to increase the amount of oil imported into the US for domestic use (proponents have tried to position the pipeline as a benefit to domestic supply, but that is simply not the case).

In fact, some observers have noted that the pipeline will relieve a transportation bottleneck that has kept fuel prices down in some border states. Approval of the pipeline will reduce the current glut and result in higher fuel prices in that region, not lower prices.

That appears to weaken Podestaâs opposition in terms of imported oil (after all, if Keystone isnât going to increase oil imports, whatâs the big deal?), but only if you neglect the second part of his argument, which is Americaâs potential to export renewable energy and energy technology.

As an enabler of conventional energy consumption in global markets, the Keystone pipeline comes into direct conflict with Americaâs competitiveness in those markets, which is no small potatoes. According to Podesta and co-writer Mark Steyer:

America is the largest clean-energy investor, after reclaiming this title from China last year. Our companies make over 75% of all venture investments in clean technologies world-wide. Overall, because of U.S. public and private investments in clean energyâincluding renewables, efficiency, transportation and infrastructureâthe clean economy grew by 8.3% from 2008 to 2009, even during the depths of the recession.

Natural Gas Stealth Attack

To sum up, Podestaâs renewable energy advocacy has a powerful flip side, which is to oppose the growth of petroleum exports from or through the US into global markets, where they will compete with renewable energy, and by association, compete with US companies that are trying to export clean tech.

We caught a glimpse of how fast that global clean tech market is heating up during a recent tech tour of Israel, where the solar vs. diesel race is focused on the increasing demand for electricity in developing economies as well as within the domestic market.

Thatâs why weâre guessing that Podesta will play an influential role in the final decision on Keystone, if not specifically than as a part of a broader policy that takes the big picture of international markets into account.

If anything, renewable energy advocates should take a closer look at that article (hereâs that link again) and note Podestaâs support for the natural gas industry, despite substantial environmental issues related fracking, waste disposal, and fugitive methane emissions.

Update: Our friends over at The Hill have been following the Podesta story closely and Iâd really recommend checking them out for upcoming news.

Judicial Watch Sues Defense Department on Behalf of Whistleblower Who Lost Security Clearance after Raising Questions about Prominent Trump Spygate Figure

Former Pentagon Analyst and White House National Security Council Director Lovinger questioned lucrative contracts with Trump Campaign Spy Stefan Halper, as well as Long Term Strategy Group, a firm owned Chelsea Clintonâ s friend Jacqueline Newmyer Deal

(Washington, DC) â Judicial Watch announced it filed a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) lawsuit on behalf of former Pentagon analyst and White House National Security Council (NSC) senior director Adam S. Lovinger, whose security clearance was pulled after he raised concerns regarding lucrative government contracts awarded to Stefan Halper, who has been identified as being used as an informant by the Obama administration against President Trumpâ s campaign, as well as Long Term Strategy Group, a consulting firm owned by Chelsea Clintonâ s friend Jacqueline Newmyer Deal (Adam S. Lovinger v. U.S. Department of Defense (No. 1:18-cv-01914)).

The Washington Times reported on the contracts in question: â According to USASpending.gov, Mr. Halper was paid $411,000 by Washington Headquarters Services on Sept. 26, 2016, for a contract that ran until this March.â Also, â a string of contracts totaling $11 million [was granted] to D.C. consulting firm Long Term Strategy Group. It is headed by Jacqueline Newmyer Deal, a self-described â best friendâ of Chelsea Clinton.â Lovinger filed his complaint in the fall of 2016. In May 2017, Lovingerâ s security clearance was initially suspended by Barbara Westgate, the Director of Washington Headquarters Services and an Obama-appointee. A few months later, the Pentagonâ s Consolidated Adjudications Facility (CAF)â issued an unfavorable clearance determination and Mr. Lovingerâ s clearance was revoked,â a Defense Department spokesman informed The Washington Times. The CAF is part of the Washington Headquarters Services (WHS) and reports directly to Westgate.

In September 2017, Lovinger filed a whistleblower reprisal complaint against the CAF, which determines security clearance eligibility of non-intelligence personnel, Westgate and James H. Baker, the DODâ s Director of Net Assessment who recommended the contract awards to Halper and Long Term Strategy Group.

In December 2017, Lovinger filed a Privacy Act request seeking:

Any and all emails or similar electronic messaging transmissions referencing the word â Lovinger;â whether in the title or body of said communications(s); between May 1, 2017 and present; to, from, or copied to the following individuals:

A. Mr. Edward Fish, Director DoD CAF

B. Mr. Daniel Purtill, Deputy Director DoD CAF

C. Mr. Ronald Freels, Adjudications Directorate Chief.

In March 2018, the DOD responded, treating his request as both a Privacy Act and a Freedom of Information (FOIA) request and admitting it found 75 pages of responsive documents but was withholding them all in their entirety. Lovinger was informed that Fish, against whom the whistleblower complaint had been filed, had also been the official who determined the documents should be withheld.

In April 2018, Lovinger appealed the DOD's determination. Over four months later, the appeal has not been addressed. Washington Headquarters Services has refused repeated requests to recuse itself from further involvement in this case despite an apparent conflict of interest. Under existing DOD policy, WHS officials reporting to Westgate will be the final arbiter of Lovinger's case, which cannot be appealed to the courts.

Also, the DOD has yet to comply with Lovinger's Privacy Act Request.

Before his work on the NSC, Lovinger was a strategic affairs analyst in the Office of Net Assessment at the Pentagon, where he specialized in issues related to U.S.-India relations, the Persian Gulf, and sub-Saharan Africa. He also is an attorney and an adjunct professor at Georgetown University's Walsh School of Foreign Service and McCort School of Public Policy.

... Mr. Lovinger was targeted because he blew the whistle on Stefan Halper and a Clinton crony getting suspicious Defense contracts, ... said Judicial Watch President Tom Fitton. ... It is disturbing that the Defense Department may now be implicated in Spygate targeting of President Trump. ...

Lovinger is also represented by Sean M. Bigley, a national-security attorney and a partner at Bigley Ranish LLP.

Julian Assange and the Woeful State of Whistle-Blowers

As the mediaâ... s indispensable helpmates, donâ... t they deserve constitutional protection too?

By Edward Wasserman

To the journalism mainstream, Julian Assange, newly imprisoned founder of WikiLeaks, is less a hero than a conundrum. True, he was midwife to some of the most sensational and genuinely consequential journalistic disclosures of recent years. Yet heâ... s a perplexing figure, among the â... righteous scumbagsâ... who often figure in free-speech cases, as a headline on the Columbia Journalism Review website puts it, or maybe just â... a solid jerk,â... as the columnist Kathleen Parker suggests.

The underlying question is whether Mr. Assange is too reckless, undiscerning, unprincipled and morally damaged to merit defending for his work in getting hugely significant information to the public, via some of the same news media that now find him distasteful.

Many journalists doubt that he deserves First Amendment consideration, since that belongs mainly to other journalists, which they say Mr. Assange isnâ... t. And itâ... s true that heâ... s plainly not a reporter, since he conveys information unearthed by others, and not a publisher either, since he often works through other news outlets to reach the public.

So he isnâ... t really one of us. Worse, heâ... s a rogue. He even helped the Russians defeat Hillary Clinton in 2016. Until April 11, when his hosts invited the London constabulary to drag him out and put him behind bars, heâ... d been squatting for nearly seven years in Ecuadorâ... s tiny embassy there to avoid extradition to Stockholm, where the Swedes wanted him to answer allegations of sexual wrongdoing. Now, in the aftermath, The Washington Postâ... s editorialists declare heâ... s not â... a free-press hero,â... and the headline on an article by The Postâ... s foreign affairs columnist, David Ignatius, asks whether heâ... s anything more than â... an accused thief.â...

My answer is heâ... s a lot more. News is in danger, and news isnâ... t a person, itâ... s a process, which desperately needs protecting. The element of that process that is most in peril is the source, and for all his sins, real and alleged, Julian Assange has been one of the most extraordinary sources of the new millennium.

WikiLeaks enabled spectacular disclosures of official secrets â... from war crimes, torture and atrocities on civilians in Iraq and Afghanistan to corruption in Kenya and Tunisia, the latter a catalyst of the Arab Spring. His jailing is the latest event in the ferocious reprisal against a decade of digital whistle-blowing â... which has never, to my knowledge, yielded information that was inaccurate or unimportant â... and that has now produced little but misery, banishment or imprisonment for the people who tried to force officialdom to come clean.

So weâ... re in a chilly time for whistle-blowers. While the digital age is endlessly permissive in propagating falsity and racism, authorities are uncompromisingly harsh when the information is accurate, important and inconvenient. Now that Mr. Assange is in British hands â... awaiting extradition either to Sweden or to Washington, where he has been indicted on a charge of coaching one of his sources, Chelsea Manning, on how to get access to government secrets without detection â... itâ... s a good time to consider what he has done and been accused of, and what that says about the embattled state of journalism.

Letâ... s recall some facts of importance. In 2010 â... and this is when the sin for which Mr. Assange has been jailed was supposedly committed â... WikiLeaks provided some of the worldâ... s most respected news organizations with accurate information of deep public importance that exposed outrageous, even murderous, wrongdoing. Mr. Assange then submitted â... perhaps gracelessly, but submitted nonetheless â... to their editorial judgment as to how much of that information should be published and in what form. This included a vast trove exposing the American war effort in Iraq and Afghanistan as killing many more civilians than our government had ever acknowledged. A further batch included a huge number of reports from our own diplomats on the corruption and double-dealing of foreign governments.

Pretty good stuff, on balance. Still, thereâ... s little sympathy in the media for the idea that jailing Mr. Assange is a violation of First Amendment press freedom â... while thereâ... s broad agreement that prosecuting the news organizations that published the material he provided would be unthinkable. This is bolstered by First Amendment jurisprudence that encourages a myopia that holds expressive freedom in the news realm to be the exclusive property of professional journalists. At first glance, this makes no moral sense: If the handing over of secrets can be prosecuted, why should the publication of those same secrets be protected?

The fabled Pentagon Papers win before the Supreme Court in 1971 stopped the government from halting publication; it didnâ... t forbid prosecuting the publishers afterward. That never happened. But the sources? Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo were left to confront Espionage Act charges for their whistle-blowing that were not dismissed for nearly two years. They got little help from the same media that were eager to canonize themselves for their courage in publishing the leaks.

Why are whistle-blowers being jailed while reporters who publish their prohibited leaks win awards? Does the governmentâ... s restraint reflect nothing more than the reluctance of politicians to do battle with the digital equivalent of publishers who buy ink by the barrel?

Perhaps, though that has helped ensure press independence as a powerful force for official accountability. But shouldnâ... t sources also have independent standing as players indispensable to the news and deserving of constitutional protection? Can you have a free press without sources? Isnâ... t the process of news-gathering dependent not just on the skill and tenacity of reporters, but also on the willingness of sources to step forward, sometimes at great risk, and tell what they know?

Ms. Manning, the former Army intelligence analyst who was Mr. Assangeâ... s source for the 2010 disclosures, is back behind bars â... after serving nearly seven years for espionage for leaking secrets to WikiLeaks â... for refusing to incriminate Mr. Assange in the squirrely case the government is trying to assemble. The former National Security Agency contractor Edward Snowden, under indictment since 2013, remains exiled in Russia for exposing domestic surveillance that was later ruled illegal by federal courts, as Mr. Snowden himself believed. Thatâ... s not to mention Thomas Drake, Shamai Leibowitz, John Kiriakou, Stephen Kim, Jeffrey Sterling and, most recently, Reality Winner. All of them were informants who sought not to peddle secrets to the countryâ... s enemies but to share information with the public about things they believed we needed to know. All were prosecuted, nearly all were jailed. The wrongs they sought to expose were not trivial.

The permissibility of secrecy violations should depend, in the final analysis, on a judgment as to whether the leaks made things better or worse. The public-benefit defense, which whistle-blowers can offer in many countries, is forbidden in ours. That should change. Yes, letting leakers use it may induce people to do foolish things in the poorly based hope theyâ... ll be redeemed by a future consequence they cannot know. But it also offers a powerful promise: that ultimately the wisdom of the disclosure, even if illegal, will be reviewed by a dispassionate tribunal that will do what judges are supposed to do â... make a judgment. Was the secrecy warranted? Was wrongdoing properly exposed? Did disclosure leave the public well served?

The mediaâ... s own de facto immunity from prosecution has been a great success historically, and no breach in that should be tolerated. Importantly, news organizations have responded to the freedom it ensures by following due-diligence practices that apply much the same logic described here â... identify and minimize potential harms while serving the publicâ... s right to be informed about matters of significance. Arenâ... t the mediaâ... s indispensable helpmates, their sources, entitled to some of that same deference?

No other senator appears to be doing as much Kavanaugh-related advertising on Facebook.

Ms. Harris, who serves on the Senate Judiciary Committee, had dozens of active Kavanaugh ads up as of Wednesday afternoon, a day before all eyes will be on the committee as senators listen to testimony by Judge Kavanaugh and one woman who has accused him of sexual assault.

The ads are slight variations on the same message, urging voters to sign a petition opposing Judge Kavanaugh. Most ads highlight what she says is his opposition to Roe v. # Laurene Powell Jobs Saudi crown prince ordered Khashoggi's assassination says CIA

- Saudi's did 9-11 and have murdered tens of thousands
- Saudi's say all of the killers will be "beheaded" except for Crown Prince

By Shane Harris & Greg Miller

Washington: The CIA has concluded that Saudi Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman ordered the assassination of journalist Jamal Khashoggi in Istanbul last month, contradicting the Saudi government's claims that he was not involved.

The CIA's assessment, in which officials have said they have high confidence, is the most definitive to date linking Mohammed to the operation and complicates the Trump administration's efforts to preserve its relationship with a close ally.

A team of 15 Saudi agents flew to Istanbul on government aircraft in October and killed Khashoggi inside the Saudi consulate, where he had come to pick up documents that he needed for his planned marriage to a Turkish woman.

In reaching its conclusions, the CIA examined multiple sources of intelligence, including a phone call that the prince's brother Khalid bin Salman, the Saudi ambassador to the United States, had with Khashoggi, according to the people familiar with the matter who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Khalid told Khashoggi, a contributing columnist to The Washington Post, that he should go to the Saudi consulate in Istanbul to retrieve the documents and gave him assurances that it would be safe to do so.

It is not clear if Khalid knew that Khashoggi would be killed, but he made the call at his brother's direction, according to the people familiar with the call, which was intercepted by US intelligence.

Fatimah Baeshen, a spokeswoman for the Saudi embassy in Washington DC, said the ambassador and Khashoggi never discussed "anything related to going to Turkey." She added that the claims in the CIA's "purported assessment are false. We have and continue to hear various theories without seeing the primary basis for these speculations."

The CIA's conclusion about Mohammed's role was also based on the agency's assessment of the prince as the country's de facto ruler who oversees even minor affairs in the kingdom.

"The accepted position is that there is no way this happened without him being aware or involved," said a US official familiar with the CIA's conclusions.

The CIA sees Mohammed as a "good technocrat," the US official said, but volatile and arrogant, someone who "goes from zero to 60, doesn't seem to understand that there are some things you can't do."

CIA analysts believe he has a firm grip on power and is not in danger of losing his status as heir to the throne despite the Khashoggi scandal. "The general agreement is that he is likely to survive," the official said, adding that Mohammed's role as the future Saudi king is "taken for granted."

A spokesperson for the CIA declined to comment.

Over the past several weeks, the Saudis have offered multiple, contradictory explanations for what happened at the consulate. This week, the Saudi public prosecutor blamed the operation on a rogue band of operatives who were sent to Istanbul to return Khashoggi to Saudi Arabia, in an operation that veered off course when the journalist "was forcibly restrained and injected with a large amount of a drug resulting in an overdose that led to his death," according to a report by the prosecutor.

The president has asked the CIA where Khashoggi's body is and has grown frustrated that they have not been able to provide an answer

The prosecutor announced charges against 11 alleged participants and said he would seek the death penalty against five of them.

The assassination of Khashoggi, a prominent critic of Mohammed's policies, has sparked a foreign policy crisis for the White House and raised questions about the administration's reliance on Saudi Arabia as a key ally in the Middle East and bulwark against Iran.

President Donald Trump has resisted pinning the blame for the killing on Mohammed, who enjoys a close relationship with Jared Kushner, the president's son-in-law and senior adviser. Privately, aides said, Trump has been shown evidence of the prince's involvement but remains skeptical that Mohammed ordered the killing.

The president has also asked CIA and State Department officials where Khashoggi's body is and has grown frustrated that they have not been able to provide an answer. The CIA does not know the location of Khashoggi's remains, according to the people familiar with the agency's assessment.

Among the intelligence assembled by the CIA is an audio recording from a listening device that the Turks placed inside the Saudi consulate, according to the people familiar with the matter. The Turks gave the CIA a copy of that audio, and the agency's director, Gina Haspel, has listened to it.

The audio shows that Khashoggi was killed within moments of entering the consulate, according to officials in multiple countries who have listened to it or been briefed on its contents. Khashoggi died in the office of the Saudi consul general, who can be heard expressing his displeasure that Khashoggi's body now needed to be disposed of and the facility cleaned of any evidence, according to people familiar with the audio recording.

The CIA also examined a call placed from inside the consulate after the killing by an alleged member of the Saudi hit team, Maher Mutreb, a security official who has often been seen at the crown prince's side and who was photographed entering and leaving the consulate on the day of the killing.

Mutreb called Saud al-Qahtani, then one of the top aides to Mohammed, and informed him that the operation had been completed, according to people familiar with the call.

This week, the Treasury Department sanctioned 17 individuals it said were involved in Khashoggi's death, including Qahtani, Mutreb and the Saudi consul general in Turkey, Mohammad al-Otaibi.

The CIA's assessment of Mohammed's role in the assassination also tracks with information developed by foreign governments, according to officials in several European capitals who have concluded that the operation was too brazen to have taken place without Mohammed's direction.

Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan has said his government has shared the audio with Germany, France, the United Kingdom and Saudi Arabia.

In addition to calls and audio recordings, CIA analysts also linked some members of the Saudi hit team directly to Mohammed himself. Some of the 15 members have served on his security team and travelled in the United States during visits by senior Saudi officials, including the crown prince, according to passport records reviewed by The Washington Post.

The US had also obtained intelligence before Khashoggi's death that indicated he might be in danger. But it wasn't until after he disappeared, on October 2, that US intelligence agencies began searching archives of intercepted communications and discovered material indicating that the Saudi royal family had been seeking to lure Khashoggi back to Riyadh.

Two US officials said there has been no indication that officials were aware of this intelligence in advance of Khashoggi's disappearance or had missed any chance to warn him.

Khashoggi "was not a person of interest," before his disappearance, and the fact that he was residing in Virginia meant that he was regarded as a US person and therefore shielded from US intelligence gathering, one of the officials said.

Trump has told senior White House officials that he wants Mohammed to remain in power because Saudi Arabia helps to check Iran, which the administration considers its top security challenge in the Middle East. He has said that he does not want the controversy over Khashoggi's death to impede oil production by the kingdom.

One lingering question is why Mohammed decided to kill Khashoggi, who was not agitating for the crown prince's removal.

A theory the CIA has developed is that Mohammed believed Khashoggi was a dangerous Islamist who was too sympathetic to the Muslim Brotherhood, according to people familiar with the assessment. Days after Khashoggi disappeared, Mohammed relayed that view in a phone call with Kushner and John Bolton, the national security adviser, who has long opposed the Brotherhood and seen it as a regional security threat.

Mohammed's private condemnation of the slain journalist stood in contracts to his government's public comments, which mourned Khashoggi's killing as a "terrible mistake" and a "tragedy."

US officials are unclear on when or whether the Saudi government will follow through with its threatened executions of the individuals blamed for Khashoggi's killing. "It could happen overnight or take 20 years," the US official said, adding that the treatment of subordinates could erode Mohammed's standing going forward.

In killing those who followed his orders, "it's hard to get the next set [of subordinates] to help," the official said.

Laurene Powell Jobs Will Destroy Anyone That Does Not Follow Her 'GoodThink' Ideology

Laurene Powell Jobs, whom Vox describes as "one of the world's most important philanthropists," is the widow of Apple founder and billionaire computer guru Steve Jobs. She has become a secret superpower behind a vast network of left-wing media outlets, organizations, and politicians. Forbes lists Jobs as one of the ten richest women on earth, with a net worth of around $16 billion, mostly from her family stakes in two of the world's biggest companies: Apple and Disney.

I investigated Jobs's growing influence in my new book, *Breaking the News: Exposing the Establishment Media's Hidden Deals and Secret Corruptions*, which exposes the hidden connections between the establishment media and the activist left.

If thereâs a well-known persona comparable to Laurene Powell Jobs, itâs Hungarian billionaire George Soros. Soros is branded a â philanthropist,â but he also functions as a one-man piggy bank for the globalist far-left. Much like Sorosâ Open Society Foundations, the main vehicle for Jobsâ influence is Emerson Collective (EC), the philanthropic outfit she founded and leads. The Emerson Collective, according to Forbes, is â a hybrid philanthropic and investing limited liability company.â Thatâs a pretty murky description, which appears to allow them to engage in business and charity without ever being terribly explicit about which is which. Iâm not sure which of the two categories it falls under, but EC also happens to own the Atlantic.

Inside Philanthropy named Jobs 2019âs â Least Transparent Mega-giver.â

EC functions primarily as a private business owned by Jobsâs personal trust. This shields it from IRS disclosure rules and allows it to more freely engage in political activity.

Itâs sly and devious, but considering how many media outlets are aligned with Jobs either financially or ideologically, itâs no surprise that little reporting has been done on these connections.

After all, if youâre in media, she might be your boss one day. Maybe she already is.

The Atlantic published what is perhaps the single fakest fake news story of the 2020 election. On September 3, 2020, editor-in-chief Jeffrey Goldberg posted an article with the bombshell headline â Trump: Americans Who Died in War Are â Losersâ and â Suckers.â â The piece alleged that Donald Trump, while in France to commemorate American Marines who died in World War II, denigrated American soldiers who died in combat.

Though the content of the article relied only on anonymous sources, was never proven, and was refuted by myriad on-record sources including several Trump-haters, it had undeniable power in the news cycle. The timing was impeccable. So good, in fact, it raised suspensions that the Atlantic had coordinated with the Biden campaign. The piece ran on a Thursday evening, and by the following morning a left-wing group called VoteVets already had cut an anti-Trump ad around it, which aired on MSNBC's Morning Joe. (You can read my full break down of this â... Fake News Instant Classicâ... and see the rest of the â... Fake News Hall of Shameâ... in Breaking the News.)

Though the Atlantic may be the crown jewel in Jobs's media empire, it's hardly alone. Jobs is also an investor in Axios, a prestige D.C. news outlet with an HBO television show. She also funds Mother Jones and ProPublica, both of which are part of the activist left but also does substantial reporting. The Emerson Collective has also partnered with NowThis, a hyperpartisan left-wing viral news video operation targeted at millennials.

Jobs also has funded ACRONYM, a Democratic technology venture, which pumped \$25 million into Courier Newsroom, which claims to fund independent local newsrooms across the country. In reality, Courier is much more partisan. Bloomberg's Joshua Green described Courier as â... the Left's plan to slip vote-swaying news into Facebook Feedsâ... under the guise of â... hypertargeted hometown newsâ... Left-of-center media watchdog NewsGuard was even more cynical: â... Courier and Acronym are exploiting the widespread loss of local journalism to create and disseminate something we really don't need: hyperlocal partisan propagandaâ...

They are right. The decline of print and independent media has created an opportunity for monied partisans to launder their political activism through established media brands. Courier seemingly shows how far that exploitation has gone.

In addition to backing major media brands, Emerson Collective actively supports the Democratic Party.

For example, in 2016, EC gave $2.5 million to DNC super-PAC Priorities Action USA. But Jobs is more than just a major Democrat donor. Obama's education secretary Arne Duncan and general services administrator Dan Tangherlini are part of EC. Jobs is said to have a tight personal relationship with Kamala Harris, who was a California senator before becoming vice president. Naturally, the Atlantic has lavished praise on Harris, barely stopping short of endorsing her during the 2019â... 20 Democrat primaries.

Laurene Powell Jobs went to the Wharton School of Finance at the University of Pennsylvania and Stanford, she worked for Merrill Lynch and Goldman Sachs, she married well and inherited a lot of money, and her wealth is tied up in some of world's biggest companies. She is the establishment.

Her most prestigious publication, the Atlantic, was founded by Emerson Collective namesake Ralph Waldo Emerson; it had the founding motto of no party or clique. That sentiment is laughable today under Jobs's leadership. It is one of the corporate Democrat establishment's favorite weapons. The Emerson Collective office features a mural inspired by Malcolm X's famed Ballot or the Bullet speech; the speech, largely about civil rights and black nationalism, is highly critical of the Democrat Party and powerful whites. What would these men think of a plutocrat tech heiress appropriating their names and legacies as part of a tenebrous political power play?

No one knows, and Laurene Powell Jobs certainly doesn't care.

Lawmakers warned Tuesday the Inspector General is being pressured to slow walk and redact significant portions of his much-anticipated report on the FBI's (mis)handling of the Clinton investigation.

According to investigative reporter, Sara Carter, the DOJ and the FBI are deliberately attempting to slow roll and redact significant portions of IG Horowitz's report on the bureau's (mis)handling of the Hillary Clinton email investigation.

We knew this was happening; the President even tweeted about this very thing Tuesday morning.

Sara Carter reported:

The Department of Justice and the FBI are deliberately attempting to slow roll and redact significant portions of DOJ Inspector General, Michael Horowitz's report on the bureau's handling of the Hillary Clinton investigation, according to numerous congressional officials and investigators.

Another congressional official, who's been fighting to obtain documents from the DOJ and FBI, said it is no surprise that they are putting pressure on Horowitz. According to the official, "... They continue to slow roll documents, fail to adhere to congressional oversight and concern is growing that they will wait until summer and then turn over documents that are heavily redacted."

Inspector General Michael Horowitz informed lawmakers three weeks ago on Capitol Hill his much-anticipated 400 page report on the FBI's handling of Hillary Clinton's email investigation entered the final stages.

The Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on the Inspector General's report that was supposed to be held on June 5th just got pushed back another week.

Sources are saying the report on the FBI's 7th floor under Comey's Directorship is absolutely damning and "... worse than expected."

On Tuesday, President Trump expressed his frustration with the nonstop delays.

The President should declassify all documents relating to Spygate and Russiagate.

Chairman Nunes can also put pressure on the DOJ and FBI by demanding all documents be delivered to the House Intel Committee in unredacted form.

The DOJ and FBI will never stop obstructing oversight unless they are threatened by Congress with contempt charges.

Lawsuit Claims SPLC Was A Hired Political Character Assassination Operation

By Tyler O'Neil

Screenshot of the SPLC "hate map."

In December 2018, a Baltimore lawyer filed a devastating lawsuit against the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC) and two of its employees. The SPLC targeted Glen Keith Allen over his former ties to the National Alliance (NA), a white nationalist group. In doing so, the liberal group allegedly violated laws and legal codes of conduct by receiving and then paying for stolen documents in violation of confidentiality agreements. The group went after Allen with the intent of getting him fired by the City of Baltimore and permanently destroying his future prospects.

Allen's suit claims that the SPLC should have its 501c3 tax-exempt status revoked, that it owes him restitution for racketeering, and that it should pay $6.5 million in damages. It also references Allen's pro bono work on behalf of African-Americans and his mentorship of an African-American teen, powerfully rebutting claims that he is a racist. Allen told PJ Media he now regrets his NA support, and an African-American friend of his laughed at the idea of this lawyer being branded a racist.

Perhaps most importantly, the suit attacks the liberal group for undermining America's tradition of free expression. In an August 2016 interview with The Washington Post cited in the lawsuit, SPLC Intelligence Project Director Heidi Beirich (a defendant in the case) claimed to have watched Allen "like a hawk" because he had "the worst ideas ever created."

"This East Europe Communist thought-crime surveillance mentality is antithetical to fundamental American cultural and Constitutional principles protecting freedom of expression and association," Allen wrote in the suit, which can be found on his website. His lawsuit uses concrete claims of lawbreaking and defamation to expose the SPLC's Orwellian strategy of branding its opponents "hate groups" and orchestrating campaigns against them.

In August 2016, the SPLC published an article branding Allen a "neo-Nazi lawyer" and insinuating that this lawyer's work for the City of Baltimore was racist. Beirich, the article's author, smeared a small political party as racist and then published allegedly stolen documents protected by confidentiality agreements connecting Allen to the National Alliance.

Allen, a longtime partner at the international law firm DLA Piper, had left the firm in February 2016 to work for the Baltimore city solicitor, taking a pay cut for the opportunity to become chief city solicitor in charge of appeals in about a year. As part of his job, he filed one specific motion to help the city in a lawsuit filed by a black man who was wrongly accused of murder. Beirich painted this work as malicious to African-Americans.

'About 60 Organizations' Are Considering a Lawsuit Against the SPLC Following \$3M Nawaz Settlement

This article led Baltimore's law department to fire Allen immediately, costing him at least 10 years of employment at a salary of $90,000 or more. The article also destroyed his reputation, making it extremely difficult for him to obtain a job, create a good relationship with clients, or argue before judges and jurors who would immediately judge him a "neo-Nazi lawyer." Furthermore, a year after Allen's firing, Baltimore badly lost the case, losing $15 million in damages.

Beirich's article claimed that Allen was a "well-known neo-Nazi," but cited one obscure comment thread as the only public connection between the lawyer and the NA. Beirich also slammed the American Eagle Party as racist, which the lawsuit denounces as a "fraudulent characterization."

The SPLC could not keep its story straight. In Beirich's article, Allen is a "well-known neo-Nazi," but on the 2016 Hate Map, the SPLC and its Intelligence Project featured a photo of Allen with this caption: "When the City of Baltimore recently hired Glen Keith Allen, a neo-Nazi, nobody knew of his involvement with white supremacist groups, except for us. Because of our investigation and exposé, he was swiftly fired" (emphasis added).

In order to brand this lawyer a "neo-Nazi," Beirich publicized documents the SPLC allegedly obtained illegally.

The National Alliance spreads anti-Semitism and advocates for white identity politics. Americans will rightly view its ideas as disgusting, and its founder wrote a book that may have inspired Timothy McVeigh in the 1995 Oklahoma City Bombing (the author, now lead, disputed this connection). Even so, the rights of free association extend to all Americans, even those who wish to affiliate with such groups. The law should protect NA's property and enforce its contracts.

Will Williams took over as NA's third chairman in October 2014. He knew the organization was in financial and organizational disarray and hired accountant Randolph Dilloway to help restore the organization. Williams had Dilloway sign confidentiality agreements as a condition of his employment.

According to the lawsuit, Williams went to confront Dilloway for his shoddy work on May 3, 2015. Both men called the police, and Dilloway fled with a laptop and thumb drives with allegedly stolen documents. On May 20, the SPLC published an article called "Chaos at the Compound," revealing documents Beirich admitted to receiving from Dilloway on May 6, three days after the confrontation. She later used these documents in the article destroying Allen's reputation.

On Wednesday, Williams confirmed Allen's story to PJ Media. "I drew up an eight-page employment agreement with Dilloway, trying to be professional, and I think three of those pages were about non-disclosure," he said. "Dilloway admitted on our forum that he was compensated, that he got consideration â€¦ money in kind."

"He's a paid informant of the SPLC," Williams said.

Google's Trust in the SPLC Undermines Its Denials of Conservative Censorship

According to the lawsuit, the SPLC's receipt of stolen documents and the payment for them not only violated the law but also the canons of legal ethics in Alabama, where both Beirich and the other defendant, Mark

Potok, are registered as lawyers. The SPLC is a 501c3 public interest law firm, so its involvement in this activity disqualifies its tax-exempt status.

The SPLC should also lose its tax-exempt status for mail and wire fraud, false statements on its tax forms, and campaigns of destruction and defamation against its perceived enemies, the lawsuit claims.

Allen notes that the SPLC and the Intelligence Project publish "hate maps" and "hate groups," artificially inflating the tallies by listing multiple chapters of an organization as separate "hate groups," and by using a malleable definition of "hate group" in order "completely destroy these groups."

The SPLC defines "hate group" expansively, listing mainstream conservative and Christian groups like Alliance Defending Freedom \(ADF\) and the Family Research Council \(FRC\) along with the Ku Klux Klan. Yet it constantly emphasizes the link between "hate groups" and violence. On the top of its 2016 "hate map," it states, "Hate and antigovernment extremist groups continue to operate at alarming levels in the U.S. â€¦ fomenting racist violence, seeking to poison our democracy, and, in some instances, plotting domestic terrorist attacks."

"It is, accordingly, false â€¦ and outrageous â€¦ for the SPLC to smear as 'hate groups' conservative Christian groups that on no fair and objective interpretation could so properly be stigmatized," Allen writes in the lawsuit.

He references falsely attacked groups like the Ruth Institute \(RI\), D. James Kennedy Ministries, and Maajid Nawaz. The SPLC paid \$3.375 million to settle a defamation lawsuit involving Nawaz, a Muslim reformer the SPLC branded an "anti-Islamic extremist." This settlement encouraged about 60 organizations to consider separate defamation lawsuits.

Allen also argues that the SPLC violated the IRS's requirement that 501c3 tax-exempt organizations refrain from participating in "any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office." Between October 2015 and November 2016, the smear group slammed Republican (and only Republican) candidates for president. Yet in its 2017 Form 990, the SPLC claimed under penalties of perjury that it did not engage in political campaign activities.

For these and other reasons, the SPLC should lose its tax-exempt status, the suit claims. Allen's suit also demands $1.5 million from the group under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) Act. The SPLC and its Intelligence Project allegedly collaborated to engage in illegal activity affecting interstate commerce and damaging Allen specifically.

Allen also claims that the SPLC, Beirich, and Potok caused intentional harm to his career and profited from his loss, defamed him, and aided and abetted Dilloway's breach of contract. In yet another count against the defendants, the lawsuit claims the SPLC negligently trained and supervised Beirich and Potok. In addition to the compensatory damages of $1.5 million, the suit demands punitive damages of $5 million.

Update on the 60 Separate Defamation Lawsuits Against the SPLC Under Consideration

The lawsuit includes no less than nine counts against the defendants, so even if one or more fail, it would be very difficult for the SPLC to convince the court to dismiss the case.

When reached by PJ Media's Tyler O'Neil, Glen Allen did not deny the SPLC's charges that he paid for NA literature and was a dues-paying member of the National Alliance. He firmly disavowed the group, however, and directed PJ Media to a longtime African-American friend of his who laughed at the idea that Allen could be considered a racist.

"My affiliation with the National Alliance was a mistake, one of the greatest of my life," Allen told PJ Media. "I would like to believe we live in a society where people can learn from their mistakes and move on."

"My present outlook, which I have held for many years, is a mixture of Ron Paul Libertarianism, First Amendment advocacy and civil debate, and a strong opposition to the violent behavior we've seen carried out on the left for several years," he added. "I also support a mutually respectful pride and dignity for people of all heritages, including white people."

While he firmly disavowed the National Alliance, Allen also defended the group's legal rights. "I do believe the NA, consistently with our American traditions of free expression, freedom of association, and the rule of law, is entitled to legal representation, like other unpopular groups, and should be encouraged to seek it," he said.

As for racism charges, Allen did pro bono work for Arthur Lloyd, an incarcerated African-American law officer who had shot and killed a white Navy seaman. He also wrote a brief against overturning the decision Unger v. State, which would have had dire implications for hundreds of African-Americans sentenced to life in prison in prior decades. He actively fought to help African-Americans victimized by race discrimination.

As for charges of anti-Semitism, Allen told PJ Media he also volunteered for a pro bono project to help Holocaust victims obtain compensation.

He also mentored D'Andre Johnson, an African-American teen. Remus Medley, an African-American track coach in Baltimore, vouched for Allen's mentorship of Johnson and laughed at the idea that Allen, his friend for 18 years, could be considered a racist.

"They've been a wonderful family, that's all I know about him. He has never told me 'No,' always been supportive, in 18 years of knowing him," Medley told PJ Media. "There's nothing that I can say bad about him."

Medley recalled giving track lessons to Allen, his son, and his daughter. He also said the lawyer introduced Medley's adopted son to representatives for different colleges. Allen has invited his family over for dinner and has given them Christmas presents. The lawyer also runs with the heavily black Baltimore city track team.

SPLC Attacks Trump's 'White Nationalist' Agenda of Asking About Citizenship in 2020 Census

"Racist, to be that way you've got to have hate and anger. He couldn't even qualify for that," Medley told PJ Media. "A racist wouldn't let me around his house, with his kids, give me hugs. You can't hide racism."

"Mr. Allen the racist? That's a joke," he said, laughing. "This guy does not have one drop of racism, he's not racist at all."

This lawsuit is serious, and the SPLC cannot just brush it off as the ravings of some racist bigot with a grudge. Allen was a top arbitrator at one of the largest law firms in the world. His claims are strong and comprehensive.

The SPLC's "hate map" has inspired at least one terrorist attack, and the far-Left smear group has constitutently pressured Big Tech companies to censor conservative speech in the name of banishing "hate" from the internet.

The SPLC did not respond to multiple requests for comment from PJ Media. Perhaps they will be more willing to speak after more outlets pick up this important story.

Leaked Apple memo: 'We will arrest you, black-list you and destroy you if report that we finance Hillary and Obama...'

- Apple previously lost a class action lawsuit for black-listing Silicon Valley job seekers. This new memo guarantees new civil rights lawsuits against Apple

Apple has long been obsessed with secrecy, but a new memo seems to take it to the next level. *Bloomberg*âs Mark Gurman reports on a memo recently sent to all Apple employees stating that 29 Apple people were caught leaking secrets about planned products last year, and 12 of them were arrested. The memo describes in stark terms the implications for employees who leak and get caught: âThese people not only lose their jobs, they can face extreme difficulty finding employment elsewhere,â says product marketing executive Greg Joswiak in the memo.

The memo lays out examples of times when whole product announcements have been spoiled by leaks to the media. The main facts about the iPhone X and the Apple Watch 3 had been leaked to the media before the splashy launch event, leaving Apple executives to go through the motions of delivering big surprises from the stage. Apple says leaked information can depress sales of existing product models, and give competitors more time to respond to features coming in future models. âWe want the chance to tell our customers why the product is great, and not have that done poorly by someone else,â the memo says.

*Bloomberg*âs Gurman is himself one of the main media beneficiaries of leaks from Apple employees. But thatâs not where all the leaks come from. Many come from people at Appleâs suppliers who know the companyâs plansâand some of them get paid to tell what they know. Apple says itâs Global Security team has worked âhand-in-handâ with its suppliers to eliminate leaks, but was not specific about its success.MS

Steve Jobs: Asshole!

Steve Jobs was an arrogant homosexual who died of AIDS because he had sex with too many Silicon Valley Gay Bosses at Google and Facebook. His medical records have now been leaked, proving this.

Steve Jobs only got famous because he was adopted by the Silicon Valley Gay Mafia. The Silicon Valley Gay Mafia get vast amounts of cash from your grandmothers pension fund by rigging the stock market using the cash assets from those pension funds in financial scams.

Most of the Silicon Valley oligarchs are covert homosexuals with a radical political agenda.

Illinois has turned into â... The Bankrupt Venezuelaâ... of the USA because the pension funds are bankrupted by tactics that Steve Jobs and his â... venture capitalistâ... crew put together.

All of the movies, books and co-worker testimony about Steve Jobs describe him, via those who experienced him, as an â... assholeâ... .

Steve Jobs got sued by tens of thousands of Silicon Valley engineers for operating a hiring black-list to keep that huge number of workers from getting jobs. Steve Jobs and his cartel lost that class-action no poaching lawsuit because the court found that Jobs, Schmidt and the rest of the Silicon Valley Gay Mafia actually did ACTUALLY engage in those heinous abuses of workers.

Nothing that Steve Jobs did had not been done by other Silicon Valley engineers years before Steve Jobs claims to have â... thought it upâ... .

Steve Jobs and his VCâ... s stole every single Apple â... ideaâ... from some other smaller inventor who could not afford to fight Apple.

There is not a single thing that Apple has done that the U.S. Patent Office, signed non-disclosure agreements, engineering documents, emails, contracts and other hard evidence proof that they did not steal from some small Silicon Valley inventor.

Apple and Steve Jobs steal ideas with impunity.

Apple exists as an idea-theft-farm that uses over-whelming armies of lawyers to intimidate anybody who seeks justice.

Apple products have just as much spy software and spy hardware that reports your actions to the CIA/NSA/DNC and Marketing companies as Google does. Apple just does a better job of hiding it than Google does. Apple products donâ... t let you remove their batteries because that would interrupt their 24/7 spy-on-you functionality.

Donâ... t buy anything that Apple makes or you are telling the world that YOU are an asshole too, because you donâ... t know how to conduct any product research about the facts behind Appleâ... s dirty technology secrets.

LinkedIn Co-Founder Who Bankrolled Russian Bot False Flag Also Funded Left-Wing Palo Alto Mafia Midterm Meddling

by Tyler Durden

An online disinformation campaign conducted by a former Obama administration official leading up to the 2018 midterm elections was bankrolled by left-wing tech billionaire Reid Hoffman, according to the Daily Caller's Peter Hasson.

Hoffman, who co-founded LinkedIn, admitted in December to funding American Engagement Technologies (AET) - which is currently embroiled in a "false flag" scandal stemming from the 2017 Alabama special election.

Now, AET and its founder Mickey Dickerson have come under fire for meddling in the 2018 midterm elections.

American Engagement Technologies (AET), which was founded by former Obama administration official Mikey Dickerson, bought ads for two Facebook pages, â... The Daily Realâ... and â... Todayâ... s Nation,â... encouraging Republican voters to stay home in the midterm elections, Facebookâ... s ad archives show.

Both pages appear to be designed to give the impression that they were operated by frustrated conservatives rather than by Democratic operatives.

The American flag-adorned pages encouraged conservative voters to either stay home in November or vote for Democrats to punish Republicans for being insufficiently conservative. Other ads called polls predicting a â... blue waveâ... in the 2018 elections â... unreliableâ... and downplayed the electionâ... s importance.

The misleading ads collectively garnered millions of impressions on Facebook, TheDCNFâ... s review of Facebookâ... s archives found, *-Daily Caller*

What the Caller discovered is that AET's 2018 meddling efforts went further than previously known "in attempting to mislead American voters for the purpose of swinging an election." In one ad campaign designed to convince GOP voters that the Democrats weren't a threat, AET suggested that the Democrat "blue wave" was nothing more than a myth, and that polls showing Democrats leading were "unreliable."

In another campaign aimed to frustrate Republican voters, AET pushed the narrative that congressional GOP were betraying "real conservatives," while in another campaign, the Democratic operatives wrote that: "Some Trump supporters see midterm losses for congressional republicans [sic] as a wake-up call to get serious on the wall," while another one suggested that "Trump is failing us."

In another ad targeting the midterm elections, AET told voters that "none of this even matters," slamming both sides for "shouting so much."

One series of ads told voters that there were â... No good choicesâ... in the midterm elections. Voting for Democrats to send a message â... feels like the best option,â... the Democratic operatives wrote.

Other ads linked to an article that urged â... Semi-Trumpersâ... to either cross party lines, vote third-party or stay home in November, rather than vote Republican. â... Even more true in light of the recent violence,â... read the caption. â... If you arenâ... t helping, donâ... t show up.â...

A similar set of ads linked to an article that called for Republican voters to boycott the GOP. The post was captioned: â... I hope folks go for this. Seems like the only thing that can save true conservatives.â... -Daily Caller

During the 2017 Alabama special election, AET commissioned cybersecurity firm "New Knowledge" - founded by Jonathon Morgan, who created the technology running the infamous "Hamilton 68" propaganda website which purports to track Russian bot activity.

Morgan's firm created over 1,000 Russian language Twitter accounts which supported Republican candidate Roy Moore, then Morgan pointed to his own bots following Moore to imply that he was a Russian stooge.

When called out in December, Morgan suggested that his "false flag" operation was simply research.

Disinformation warrior @jonathonmorgan attempts to control damage by lying. â... Dan Cohen (@dancohen3000) December 29, 2018

Hoffman has since apologized, while Morgan was suspended by Facebook for "coordinated inauthentic" behavior.

List of the Many Times Obama Spied on Citizens In Order To Control Stock Market Profits For His Oligarchs

by Jim Hoft

Guest post by Joe Hoft

In March 2017 we reported a list of more than a dozen proven victims of Obama's illegal wiretaps. Now we can add to that list the many times when candidate and President Trump and his team were spied on.

In March 2017 President Trump tweeted the following â...

Terrible! Just found out that Obama had my "wires tapped" in Trump Tower just before the victory. Nothing found. This is McCarthyism!

â... Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) March 4, 2017

President Trump continued with a tweet asking whether it was legal for Obama to be spying on his campaign â...

Is it legal for a sitting President to be "wire tapping" a race for president prior to an election?
Turned down by court earlier. A NEW LOW!

â... Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) March 4, 2017

President Trump then tweeted that a good lawyer could probably make a great case out of Obama's spying â...

I'd bet a good lawyer could make a great case out of the fact that President Obama was tapping my phones in October, just prior to Election!

â... Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) March 4, 2017

In response to his tweets the Mainstream Media (MSM) went crazy and called President Trump crazy and a liar. So we listed the many times that Obama reportedly spied on others outside of the Trump campaign presented below â...

(WikiLeaks released the following list on February 23rd (see link here) of Obama Administration wire taps.)* The US National Security Agency bugged a private climate change strategy meeting; between UN Secretary General Ban Ki-Moon and German Chancellor Angela Merkel in Berlin; * Obama bugged Chief of Staff of UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) for long term interception targetting his Swiss phone; * Obama singled out the Director of the Rules Division of the World Trade Organisation (WTO), Johann Human, and targetted his Swiss phone for long term interception; * Obama stole sensitive Italian diplomatic cables detailing how Israel's Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu implored Italy's Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi to help patch up his relationship with US President Barack Obama, who was refusing to talk to Netanyahu; * Obama intercepted top EU and Japanese trade ministers discussing their secret strategy and red lines to stop the US's extortion of them at the WTO Doha rounds (the talks subsequently collapsed); * Obama explicitly targeted five other top EU economic officials for long term interception, including their French, Austrian and Belgium phone numbers; * Obama explicitly targetted the phones of Italy's ambassador to NATO and other top Italian officials for long term interception; and * Obama intercepted details of a critical private meeting between then French president Nicolas Sarkozy, Merkel and Berlusconi, where the latter was told the Italian banking system was ready to pop like a cork. In addition to the above list we also noted that Obama wire tapped various individuals in the US media that were reporting information not flattering to the Obama Administration. It is widely known that Obama's Justice Department targeted journalists with wiretaps in 2013.* In 2013 the liberal Washington Post expressed outrage after the revelation that the Justice Department had investigated the news gathering activities of a Fox News reporter as a potential crime in a probe of classified leaks. The reporter, Fox Newsâ... James Rosen and his family, were part of an investigation into government officials anonymously leaking information to journalists. Rosen was not charged but his movements and actions were tracked.

* Also in 2013, members of the Associated Press were a target of surveillance. The ultra liberal New Yorker even noted that â... In moderate and liberal circles, at least, the phone-records scandal, partly because it involves the dear old A.P. and partly because it raises anew the specter of Big Brother, may well present the most serious threat to Obamaâ... s reputation.â...

* Reporter Sharyl Attkisson said in 2014 that her personal computer and CBS laptop were hacked after she began filing stories about Benghazi that were unflattering to the Obama administration. A source who checked her laptop said the hacker used spyware â... proprietary to a government agency,â... according to an article in the New York Post.

Finally, we reported that WikiLeaks tweeted that the Obama Administration spied on their journalists as well:

Did Obama spy on @realDonaldTrump's campaign? Here is proof the Obama administration spied on our journalists <https://t.co/RlwSTtahJL> pic.twitter.com/wo9vEGzSZB

â... WikiLeaks (@wikileaks) March 6, 2017

Now we know that Obama spied on the Trump campaign, Presidency and his team as well.

Shortly after President-elect Trump won the election and before President Trumpâ... s tweets in March 2017 noted above, it was reported that â...

On Thursday November 17th, 2016, NSA Director Mike Rogers traveled to New York and met with President-Elect Donald Trump.

It is suspected that Rogers went to Trump Tower unannounced to share with him that he was being spied on. President-elect Trump moved his transition team from Trump Tower to one of his golf courses the very next day after Admiral Rogersâ... visit â...

President-elect Donald Trump is moving the transition meetings Friday from Trump Tower in New York to Trump National Golf Club in Bedminster, New Jersey, said transition team officials.

By March 22, 2017, it was confirmed by Congressman Devin Nunes that Trump associates were spied on by American intelligence (the Obama Administration) â...

Rep. Devin Nunes, R-Calif., whose congressional committee is investigating whether Russia interfered with the U.S. 2016 election, said he had been given access to intelligence reports that confirm Trumpâ... s associates were spied on by American intelligence â... operating under the auspices of President Obama.

We know that Trump volunteer George Papadopoulos was spied on by multiple characters from US and foreign entities (none Russian) in Europe in early 2016, long before the FBI said they started their Trump-Russia sham investigation in July 2016. Papadopoulos was set up in his interactions with the Deep State spies in Europe and by Italian, Australian and UK related spies and spy entities all working with the Obama Administration.

We also know that General Mike Flynn, Carter Page, Sam Clovis and other Trump team members were spied on by Stefan Halper, one of the same spies who interacted with Papadopoulos. The Trump team was spied on by others as well.

We know that Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein discussed wearing a wire into the White House. (We really don't know if he did wear the wire or not.)

We also know that former and now fired FBI Director James Comey met with President-elect and then President Trump and took notes for the sole purpose of spying on Trump. He then leaked his reports to the MSM. President Trump responded with the following â...

James Comey better hope that there are no "tapes" of our conversations before he starts leaking to the press!

â... Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) May 12, 2017

The MSM again went into overdrive speculating that President Trump had tapes like Nixon did during Watergate. As it turned out the President had no tapes. (What the MSM never asked is whether Comey wire tapped the meetings with Trump and if so, whether Trump knew it when he fired off the above tweet! Time will tell.)

Now this past week we find out that Obama and his Deep State cronies appear to have spied on the President in the White House. The wife of former Chief of Staff to Mike Pence Joshua Pitcock was working for dirty cop Peter Strzok and investigating into Hillary Clinton's crimes. This comes after it was reported that lovebirds Peter Strzok and Lisa Page were â... cultivating sourcesâ... to spy and inform them on President Trump.

BREAKING: White House aides are concerned fmr Pence Chief of Staff Joshua Pitcock may have left behind FBI listening devices after learning his wife worked for Peter Strzok

â... Jack Posobiec â ĩ, (@JackPosobiec) April 26, 2019

The Obama Deep State gang of dirty cops and crooked diplomats spied on everybody. The question is â... who didn't they spy on?

Oath Keepers members are participating in this lobbying effort by ALIPAC to bring awareness to censorship and civil rights abuses by Silicon Valley social media companies. Phone numbers for the members of Congress are here: <https://www.congress.gov/members>

ALIPAC: FOR NATIONAL RELEASE | OCTOBER 2, 2018

While this press release won't reach some Americans due to Silicon Valley corporation bias against conservatives and groups that oppose illegal immigration and Amnesty, Americans for Legal Immigration PAC (ALIPAC) is leading a first of its kind lobbying effort in DC to combat censorship and civil rights abuses by companies like Facebook, Twitter, and Google.

ALIPAC President William Gheen is leading a team of activists to visit congressional offices in Washington today, October 2, 2018, through Thursday, Oct 4, while ALIPAC activists and Oath Keepers from all 50 states will be on the phones calling on Congress and agencies to take swift action to curtail Silicon Valley abuses of American civil liberties through censorship, shadow bans, unequal services, and deplatforming.

This activist effort is dubbed Operations Operation Squeaky Wheel.

ALIPAC believes these companies and their Democrat Party supporters, H1B visa holders, and DACA immigrant workers are discriminating against American conservatives, Christians, Republicans, Trump voters, and non-socialists in order to influence and take control of US elections, legislation, and policies.

ALIPAC is submitting a detailed report to GOP members of Congress, the US Justice Department, the White House, FEC, and other regulators detailing the organization's many difficulties imposed by social media companies to thwart the organization's peaceful, non-violent, and racially inclusive political efforts.

ALIPAC Report to Congress & Media on Social Media Company Censorship

<https://www.alipac.us/f8/alipac-repo...lorship-363704/>

ALIPAC is also submitting a rapidly growing tracking list providing evidence of similar abuse of more than 75 conservative activists and groups.

List of Conservatives Censored by Silicon Valley companies Facebook, Google, Twitter, PayPal, etc.
<https://www.alipac.us/f8/list-conserâ...:twitter-363125/>

ALIPACâ... s Packet Cover Flyer for Operation Squeaky Wheel in DC Oct 2-4
<https://www.alipac.us/f8/alipacs-packet-cover-flyer-operation-squeaky-wheel-dc-oct-2-4-a-363708/>

ALIPACâ... s report provides evidence and documentation showing â... these companies have collectively reduced our web traffic to our main website at ALIPAC.us, altered our search result rankings drastically, banned us at times, shadow banned us, suppressed our content and releases, blocked ads, removed our ability to place ads, deleted videos and content, made false accusations of â... hate speechâ... or â... hateful contentâ... against us, and refused to verify our accounts.â...

â... Our message to GOP lawmakers and candidates is that when they look at their returns on election night, they need to realize those returns have been heavily influenced by Silicon Valley social media bias against Republicans, non-citizen voters casting ballots in surprisingly large numbers, and demoralized conservative base voters who are disheartened by lawmakersâ... efforts to pass Amnesty legislation at the behest of Soros backed groups, big banks, and the US Chamber of Commerce,â... said William Gheen, President of ALIPAC. â... Social media bias combined with illegal voters and GOP base voters disappointed over Amnesty bills, the lack of a wall, and the continuation of Obamaâ... s DACA is big problem for Republican candidates in the 2018 midterms.â...

ALIPAC believes that between now and the midterm elections an opportunity exists for American citizens to successfully communicate their concerns and disappointments with candidates and lawmakers in a way that could lead to positive change.

ALIPAC will be conducting several talk radio interviews while engaged in this historic lobbying effort on the ground in DC.

For more information about ALIPACâ... s first of its kind lobbying effort against Silicon Valley cyber censorship, non-citizen voters \(including illegal aliens\), and the defeat of Amnesty legislation in DC since 2004, please visit www.alipac.us

STEWART RHODES, FOUNDER OF OATH KEEPERS:

Oath Keepers is participating in, and supporting this effort by ALIPAC because we have directly been affected by the politically motivated/content based discrimination by IT companies such as Facebook, Twitter, PayPal, etc.

We encourage our members and supporters to contact their Congressional Representatives about this issue, and we fully support hearing on this, and whatever constitutional legislative remedies are available to prevent this fraudulent censorship (see below).

On Facebook, we have experienced â... shadow banningâ... (you think all is well, but your readers donâ... t see what you wrote, or are not notified of a post), posts disappearing, posts being listed as â... unavailableâ... (i.e. our admins can see the post but readers cannot), attempted posts not being allowed to actually post, frequent banning of individual users by Facebook for a post that does not actually violate â... community standardsâ... but simply expressed a conservative/constitutionalist viewpoint), certain memes and photos expressing pro-gun or conservative/libertarian/constitutionalist viewpoints being â... disappearedâ... off of Facebook, etc.

We also experienced suspension of services by PayPal after being a customer for eight years, for allegedly violating PayPal's terms of service... but when we repeatedly asked for specifics of what we had done that violated the agreed upon terms of service, they refused to respond. There was no review, no opportunity to defend ourselves, and no communication whatsoever other than a vague email saying we had been suspended for violating their terms of service.

Clearly it was based on the content of our conservative/libertarian/constitutionalist speech and our viewpoints, not any actual actions by us that violated the terms of service. And since we are specifically, adamantly non-racist and non-discriminatory (see our bylaws as well as our long track record of speaking out against racism), it is NOT about any supposed racism or race-based discrimination on our part. We are not that way. What we are is non-race focused constitutionalists, libertarians, and conservatives, who support the Constitution and are also very much pro-gun. That was our sin...

I consider this fraud, as we entered into user agreements with these companies many years ago (back in 2009), which we have NOT violated, but they did violate on their end, based on the content of our speech rather than any actual violation of the agreed upon terms of service. When a company puts itself out there as an open social media and/or business transaction system, it is presenting itself as viewpoint/politics neutral, and users then use the service in reliance on that agreement and understanding, foregoing other alternatives (i.e for processing payments and donations, in the case of PayPal), and therefore relying on that service actually being content/viewpoint/politically neutral.

If they had announced from the inception of their businesses that they were going to exclude or censor conservative/libertarian/constitutionalist viewpoints, we would not have used their services for so many years, in good faith reliance on them actually being content neutral. This is fraud in the inducement and in the execution.

So, this is not merely about their supposed right to do as they please as a private business. No private business has a right to engage in fraud.

Lying Bastard Democrats Refer to Twitter Shadowbanning as Conspiracy Theory

During a hearing before the House Energy and Commerce Committee, multiple Democrats referred to Twitter's practice of shadowbanning as a conspiracy theory.

Twitter CEO Jack Dorsey appeared before the House Energy and Commerce Committee today to discuss Twitter's censorship and banning practices. During the course of the hearing, a number of representatives referred to the censorship of conservatives on social media as a conspiracy theory.

Representative Frank Pallone (D-NJ) began his opening statement by saying: "Over the past few weeks, President Trump and many Republicans have peddled conspiracy theories about Twitter and other social media platforms to whip up their base and fundraise. I fear the Republicans are using this hearing for those purposes instead of addressing the serious issues raised by social media platforms that affect American's everyday lives."

Pallone later stated that President Trump uses Twitter to "bully and belittle people." Pallone continued to say that Trump "routinely tweets false statements designed to mislead Americans and foster discord, and the President's actions coarsen the public debate and feed distrust within our society."

When discussing some of the issues that Twitter faces from targeted harassment on the platform to the spread of misinformation, Representative Diana DeGette (D-CO) stated: “... Mister Chairman I just wanted to say for the record, I don’t think these issues are unique to Twitter unlike so many of the invented, borderline conspiracy theories, I believe this is a real threat and I appreciate you, Mr. Dorsey, taking this seriously and your entire organization so that we can really reduce these threats online.”...

Representative Mike Doyle (D-PA) began his opening remarks by reading a number of quotes to Dorsey and asking him to confirm whether or not they were true. The quotes were: “... social media is being rigged to censor conservatives,” “... I don’t know what Twitter’s up to, it sure looks to me like they’re censoring people and they ought to stop it,” and “... Twitter shadowbanning prominent Republicans. Bad.” The statements were attributed to House majority leader Kevin McCarthy, Devin Nunes and President Trump. Dorsey denied that Twitter was taking part in any of the practices mentioned in the quotes.

Representative Doyle stated: “... I think it’s important for people to understand, the premise of this whole hearing and the reason that Twitter somehow with all of the other social media platforms out there got the singular honor to sit in front of this committee is because there’s some implication that your site is trying to censor conservative voices on your platform. Now, when you try to explain the shadowbanning as I understand it “... you had a system where if people who were following people had some behaviors, that was the trigger that caused the shadowbanning so you’re really like an equal opportunity shadowbanned, you didn't just shadowban four conservative Republicans, you shadowbanned 600,000 people across your entire platform across the globe that had people following them that had certain behaviors which caused you to downgrade them coming up.

MONICA LEWINSKY AND ME: EMERGING FROM â... THE HOUSE OF GASLIGHTâ... IN THE AGE OF #METOO

On the 20th anniversary of the Starr investigation, which introduced her to the world, the author reflects on the changing nature of trauma, the de-evolution of the media, and the extraordinary hope now provided by the #MeToo movement.

How do I know him? Where have I seen him? The Man in the Hat looked familiar, I thought, as I peered over at him a second time.

It was Christmas Eve 2017. My family and I were about to be seated at a quaint restaurant in Manhattanâ... s West Village. We had just come from Gramercy Parkâ... on the one night each year when the exclusive park (accessible only to nearby residents with special keys) opens its gates to outsiders. There had been carols. People had sung with abandon. In short, it was a magical night. I was happy.

Amid the glow of candles and soft lighting, I strained to look again at the Man in the Hat. He was part of a small group that had just exited the main dining room. They were now gathering their belongings, likely vacating what was to be our table. And then it clicked. He looks just like . . . no, couldnâ... t be. Could it?

A student of Karma, I found myself seizing the moment. Whereas a decade ago I would have turned and fled the restaurant at the prospect of being in the same place as this man, many years of personal-counseling work (both trauma-specific and spiritual) had led me to a place where I now embrace opportunities to move into spaces that allow me to break out of old patterns of retreat or denial.

At the same moment I stepped toward the Man in the Hat and began to ask, â... Youâ... re not . . . ?,â... he stepped toward me with a warm, incongruous smile and said, â... Let me introduce myself. Iâ... m Ken Starr.â... An introduction was indeed necessary. This was, in fact, the first time I had met him.

I found myself shaking his hand even as I struggled to decipher the warmth he evinced. After all, in 1998, this was the independent prosecutor who had investigated me, a former White House intern; the man whose staff, accompanied by a group of F.B.I. agents (Starr himself was not there), had hustled me into a hotel room near the Pentagon and informed me that unless I cooperated with them I could face 27 years in prison. This was the man who had turned my 24-year-old life into a living hell in his effort to investigate and prosecute President Bill Clinton on charges that would eventually include obstruction of justice and lying under oathâ... lying about having maintained a long-term extramarital relationship with me.

Ken Starr asked me several times if I was â... doing O.K.â... A stranger might have surmised from his tone that he had actually worried about me over the years. His demeanor, almost pastoral, was somewhere between avuncular and creepy. He kept touching my arm and elbow, which made me uncomfortable.

I turned and introduced him to my family. Bizarre as it may sound, I felt determined, then and there, to remind him that, 20 years before, he and his team of prosecutors hadnâ... t hounded and terrorized just me but also my familyâ... threatening to prosecute my mom (if she didnâ... t disclose the private confidences I had shared with her), hinting that they would investigate my dadâ... s medical practice, and even deposing my aunt, with whom I was eating dinner that night. And all because the Man in the Hat, standing in front of me, had decided that a frightened young woman could be useful in his larger case against the president of the United States.

Understandably, I was a bit thrown. (It was also confusing for me to see â... Ken Starrâ... as a human being. He was there, after all, with what appeared to be his family.) I finally gathered my wits about meâ... after an internal command of Get it together. â... Though I wish I had made different choices back then,â... I stammered, â... I wish that you and your office had made different choices, too.â... In hindsight, I later realized, I was paving the way for him to apologize. But he didnâ... t. He merely said, with the same inscrutable smile, â... I know. It was unfortunate.â...

It had been nearly 20 years since 1998. The next month would mark the 20th anniversary of the Starr investigation expanding to include me. The 20th anniversary of my name becoming public for the first time. And the 20th anniversary of an annus horribilis that would almost end Clintonâ... s presidency, consume the nationâ... s attention, and alter the course of my life.

Amid a phalanx of photographers, Lewinsky heads to the Federal Building in L.A., May 1998.

By Jeffrey Markowitz/Sygma/Getty Images.

If I have learned anything since then, it is that you cannot run away from who you are or from how youâ... ve been shaped by your experiences. Instead, you must integrate your past and present. As Salman Rushdie observed after the fatwa was issued against him, â... Those who do not have power over the story that dominates their lives, power to retell it, rethink it, deconstruct it, joke about it, and change it as times change, truly are powerless, because they cannot think new thoughts.â... I have been working toward this realization for years. I have been trying to find that powerâ... a particularly Sisyphean task for a person who has been gaslighted.

To be blunt, I was diagnosed several years ago with post-traumatic stress disorder, mainly from the ordeal of having been publicly outed and ostracized back then. My trauma expedition has been long, arduous, painful, and expensive. And itâ... s not over. (I like to joke that my tombstone will read, *MUTATIS MUTANDIS*â... â... With Changes Being Made.â... )

Iâ... VE LIVED FOR SO LONG IN THE HOUSE OF GASLIGHT, CLINGING TO MY EXPERIENCES AS THEY UNFOLDED IN MY 20S.

But as I find myself reflecting on what happened, Iâ... ve also come to understand how my trauma has been, in a way, a microcosm of a larger, national one. Both clinically and observationally, something fundamental changed in our society in 1998, and it is changing again as we enter the second year of the Trump presidency in a post-Cosby-Ailes-Oâ... Reilly-Weinstein-Spacey-Whoever-Is-Next world. The Starr investigation and the subsequent impeachment trial of Bill Clinton amounted to a crisis that Americans arguably endured collectively... some of us, obviously, more than others. It was a shambolic morass of a scandal that dragged on for 13 months, and many politicians and citizens became collateral damage... along with the nation's capacity for mercy, measure, and perspective.

Certainly, the events of that year did not constitute a war or a terrorist attack or a financial recession. They didn't constitute a natural catastrophe or a medical pandemic or what experts refer to as "Big Traumas." But something had shifted nonetheless. And even after the Senate voted in 1999 to acquit President Clinton on two articles of impeachment, we could not escape the sense of upheaval and partisan division that lingered, settled in, and stayed.

Maybe you remember or have heard stories about how "the scandal" saturated television and radio; newspapers, magazines, and the Internet; Saturday Night Live and the Sunday-morning opinion programs; dinner-party conversation and watercooler discussions; late-night monologues and political talk shows (definitely the talk shows). In The Washington Post alone, there were 125 articles written about this crisis... in just the first 10 days. Many parents felt compelled to discuss sexual issues with their children earlier than they might have wanted to. They had to explain why "lying" even if the president did it... was not acceptable behavior.

The press was navigating unexplored terrain, too. Anonymous sources seemed to emerge almost daily with new (and often false or meaningless) revelations. There was a new commingling of traditional news, talk radio, tabloid television, and online rumor mills (fake news, anyone?). With the introduction of the World Wide Web (in 1992-93) and two new cable news networks (Fox News and MSNBC in 1996), the lines began to blur between fact and opinion, news and gossip, private lives and public shaming. The Internet had become such a propulsive force driving the flow of information that when the Republican-led Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives decided to publish Ken Starr's commission findings... online... just two days after he had delivered them... it meant that (for me personally) every adult with a modem could instantaneously peruse a copy and learn about my private conversations, my personal musings (lifted from my home computer), and, worse yet, my sex life.

Americans young and old, red and blue, watched day and night. We watched a beleaguered president and the embattled and often disenchanted members of his administration as they protected him. We watched a First Lady and First Daughter move through the year with grit and grace. We watched a special prosecutor get pilloried (though some thought he deserved it). We watched an American family... my family... as a mother was forced to testify against her child and as a father was forced to take his daughter to be fingerprinted at the Federal Building. We watched the wholesale dissection of a young, unknown woman... me... who, due to legal quarantine, was unable to speak out on her own behalf.

How, then, to get a handle, today, on what exactly happened back then?

One useful viewpoint is that of cognitive linguist George Lakoff. In his book Moral Politics: What Conservatives Know That Liberals Don't, Lakoff observes that the connective fiber of our country is often best represented through the metaphor of family: e.g., "our Founding Fathers," "Uncle Sam," the concept of sending our sons and daughters to war. Lakoff goes on to argue that, for conservatives, the nation is conceptualized (implicitly and unconsciously) as a Strict Father family and, for liberals, as a Nurturant Parent family. Addressing the scandal itself, he asserts that Clinton was widely perceived as "the naughty child" and that, in line with the filial metaphor, "a family matter [had turned] into an affair of state." Thus, in many ways, the crack in the foundation of the presidency was also a crack in our foundation at home. Moreover, the nature of the violation... an extramarital relationship... struck at the heart of one of humanity's most complicated moral issues: infidelity. (You'll forgive me if I leave that topic right there.)

The result, I believe, was that in 1998 the person to whom we would typically turn for reassurance and comfort during a national crisis was remote and unavailable. The country, at that stage, had no consistent, Rooseveltian voice of calm or reason or empathy to make sense of the chaos. Instead, our Nurturer in Chief, because of his own actions as much as the subterfuge of his enemies, was a figurative â... absent father.â...

As a society, we went through this together. And ever since, the scandal has had an epigenetic quality, as if our cultural DNA has slowly been altered to ensure its longevity. If you can believe it, there has been at least one significant reference in the press to that unfortunate spell in our history every day for the past 20 years. Every. Single. Day.

The fog of 1998 has lodged in our consciousness for many reasons. The Clintons have remained pivotal political figures on the global stage. Their disparagement has been vigorously abetted by â... this vast right-wing conspiracy,â... as Hilâ-laâ-ry Clinton famously put it. And the Clinton presidency segued into a bitter electoral deadlock: the contested Bush v. Gore showdown, which would usher in an era so turbulent that it would leave the lessons of the Clinton years altogether murky. In succession came the unthinkable (the attacks of September 11, 2001), protracted conflicts (the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan), the Great Recession, a state of perpetual gridlock in Washington, and then the daily bedlam central to Trumpism. No matter how these subsequent events dwarfed the impeachment and subsumed our attention, maybe, just maybe, the long, unimpeded derivation of this drama, ever since, is partly the result of 1998 having been a year of unrelenting crisis that we all endured but never actually resolvedâ... a low-grade collective trauma, perhaps?

I discussed this idea with psychologist Jack Saul, founding director of New Yorkâ... s International Trauma Studies Program and author of Collective Trauma, Collective Healing. â... Collective trauma,â... he told me, â... usually refers to the shared injuries to a populationâ... s social ecology due to a major catastrophe or chronic oppression, poverty, and disease. While the events of 1998 in the United States do not fit neatly into such a definition, they may have led to some of the features we often associate with collective traumas: social rupturing and a profound sense of distress, the challenging of long-held assumptions about the world and national identity, a constricted public narrative, and a process of scapegoating and dehumanization.â...

Until recently (thank you, Harvey Weinstein), historians hadnâ... t really had the perspective to fully process and acknowledge that year of shame and spectacle. And as a culture, we still havenâ... t properly examined it. Re-framed it. Integrated it. And transformed it. My hope, given the two decâ-ades that have passed, is that we are now at a stage where we can untangle the complexities and context (maybe even with a little compassion), which might help lead to an eventual healingâ... and a systemic transformation. As Haruki Murakami has written, â... When you come out of the storm you wonâ... t be the same person who walked in. Thatâ... s what this stormâ... s all about.â... Who were we then? Who are we now?

â... Iâ... m so sorry you were so alone.â... Those seven words undid me. They were written in a recent private exchange I had with one of the brave women leading the #MeToo movement. Somehow, coming from herâ... a recognition of sorts on a deep, soulful levelâ... they landed in a way that cracked me open and brought me to tears. Yes, I had received many letters of support in 1998. And, yes (thank God!), I had my family and friends to support me. But by and large I had been alone. So. Very. Alone. Publicly Aloneâ... abandoned most of all by the key figure in the crisis, who actually knew me well and intimately. That I had made mistakes, on that we can all agree. But swimming in that sea of Aloneness was terrifying.

Isolation is such a powerful tool to the subjugator. And yet I donâ... t believe I would have felt so isolated had it all happened today. One of the most inspiring aspects of this newly energized movement is the sheer number of women who have spoken up in support of one another. And the volume in numbers has translated into volume of public voice. Historically, he who shapes the story (and it is so often a he) creates â... the truth.â... But this collective rise in decibel level has provided a resonance for womenâ... s narratives. If the Internet was a bÃte noire to me in 1998, its stepchildâ... social mediaâ... has been a savior for millions of women today (notwithstanding all the cyberbullying, online harassment, doxing, and slut-shaming). Virtually anyone can share her or his #MeToo story and be instantly welcomed into a tribe. In addition, the democratizing potential of the Internet to open up support networks and penetrate what used to be closed circles of power is something that was unavailable to me back then. Power, in that case, remained in the hands of the president and his minions, the Congress, the prosecutors, and the press.

There are many more women and men whose voices and stories need to be heard before mine. (There are even some people who feel my White House experiences don't have a place in this movement, as what transpired between Bill Clinton and myself was not sexual assault, although we now recognize that it constituted a gross abuse of power.) And yet, everywhere I have gone for the past few months, I've been asked about it. My response has been the same: I am in awe of the sheer courage of the women who have stood up and begun to confront entrenched beliefs and institutions. But as for me, my history, and how I fit in personally? I'm sorry to say I don't have a definitive answer yet on the meaning of all of the events that led to the 1998 investigation; I am unpacking and reprocessing what happened to me. Over and over and over again.

For two decades, I have been working on myself, my trauma, and my healing. And, naturally, I have grappled with the rest of the world's interpretations and Bill Clinton's re-interpretations of what happened. But in truth, I have done this at arm's length. There have been so many barriers to this place of self-reckoning.

The reason this is difficult is that I've lived for such a long time in the House of Gaslight, clinging to my experiences as they unfolded in my 20s and railing against the untruths that painted me as an unstable stalker and Servicer in Chief. An inability to deviate from the internal script of what I actually experienced left little room for re-evaluation; I cleaved to what I knew. So often have I struggled with my own sense of agency versus victimhood. (In 1998, we were living in times in which women's sexuality was a marker of their agency—owning desire. And yet, I felt that if I saw myself as in any way a victim, it would open the door to choruses of: See, you did merely service him.)

What it means to confront a long-held belief (one clung to like a life raft in the middle of the ocean) is to challenge your own perceptions and allow the pentimento painting that is hidden beneath the surface to emerge and be seen in the light of a new day.

Given my PTSD and my understanding of trauma, it's very likely that my thinking would not necessarily be changing at this time had it not been for the #MeToo movement—not only because of the new lens it has provided but also because of how it has offered new avenues toward the safety that comes from solidarity. Just four years ago, in an essay for this magazine, I wrote the following: Sure, my boss took advantage of me, but I will always remain firm on this point: it was a consensual relationship. Any abuse came in the aftermath, when I was made a scapegoat in order to protect his powerful position. I now see how problematic it was that the two of us even got to a place where there was a question of consent. Instead, the road that led there was littered with inappropriate abuse of authority, station, and privilege. (Full stop.)

Now, at 44, I'm beginning (just beginning) to consider the implications of the power differentials that were so vast between a president and a White House intern. I'm beginning to entertain the notion that in such a circumstance the idea of consent might well be rendered moot. (Although power imbalances—and the ability to abuse them—do exist even when the sex has been consensual.)

But it's also complicated. Very, very complicated. The dictionary definition of consent? To give permission for something to happen. And yet what did the something mean in this instance, given the power dynamics, his position, and my age? Was the something just about crossing a line of sexual (and later emotional) intimacy? (An intimacy I wanted with a 22-year-old's limited understanding of the consequences.) He was my boss. He was the most powerful man on the planet. He was 27 years my senior, with enough life experience to know better. He was, at the time, at the pinnacle of his career, while I was in my first job out of college. (Note to the trolls, both Democratic and Republican: none of the above excuses me for my responsibility for what happened. I meet Regret every day.)

â... Thisâ... (sigh) is as far as Iâ... ve gotten in my re-evaluation; I want to be thoughtful. But I know one thing for certain: part of what has allowed me to shift is knowing Iâ... m not alone anymore. And for that I am grateful.

Iâ... weâ... owe a huge debt of gratitude to the #MeToo and Timeâ... s Up heroines. They are speaking volumes against the pernicious conspiracies of silence that have long protected powerful men when it comes to sexual assault, sexual harassment, and abuse of power.

Thankfully, Timeâ... s Up is addressing the need women have for financial resources to help defray the huge legal costs involved in speaking out. But there is another cost to consider. For many, the Reckoning has also been a re-triggering. Sadly, what I see with every new allegation, and with every posting of â... #MeToo,â... is another person who may have to cope with the re-emergence of trauma. My hope is that through Timeâ... s Up (or, perhaps, another organization) we can begin to meet the need for the resources that are required for the kind of trauma therapy vital for survival and recovery. Regrettably, itâ... s often only the privileged who can afford the time and the money to get the help they deserve.

Through all of this, during the past several months, I have been repeatedly reminded of a powerful Mexican proverb: â... They tried to bury us; they didnâ... t know we were seeds.â...

Spring has finally sprung.

Top Ten Conspiracy Theories That Turned FACT in 2017

2017 was a year that vindicated those who the media has constantly referred to conspiracy theorists, exposing the establishment in the process.

In 2013, Professor Lance Dehaven-Smithâ€¦ in a peer-reviewed book published by the University of Texas Pressâ€¦ showed that the term â€œconspiracy theoryâ€¦ was developed by the CIA as a means of undercutting critics of the Warren Commissionâ€¦ s report that President Kennedy was killed by Oswald. The use of this term was heavily promoted in the media by the CIA. Andâ€¦ up until recentlyâ€¦ it has served its purpose.

Now, however, in 2017, those who were once called â€œconspiracy theoristsâ€¦ are being vindicated as they watched instance after instance get exposed all year long. To be clear, we are not talking about outlandish, unprovable, and off the wall theories that completely lack evidence. We are talking about well-researched cases that were deliberately dismissed and ridiculed by the mainstream as a means of oppressing the information and protecting the establishment.

Ironically enough, 2017 is the year the conspiracy theorists were proven right as the mainstream media and government began pushing wild conspiracy theories without evidence to back them up.

To show just how vindicated the well-informed are, below is a list of the top 10 conspiracy theories that were proven as real in 2017.

1. Hollywood and the political elite have been exposed for their rampant and horrifying sex abuse against men, women, and children alike

Just last year, as good people tried to point out that although Pizzagate may not have taken place in some restaurant in DC, the idea of sex abuse among the elite was no laughing matter. However, anyone who mentioned sex abuse among the elite was scoffed at and ridiculed by those in the mainstream.

This ridicule was in spite of the fact that the former speaker of the house admitted to raping multiple little boys and was sentenced to prison last year. This ridicule was also in spite of the fact that whistleblowers have been shouting from the mountain tops about the rampant abuse... for decades... only to have their cries fall on deaf ears.

This year, however, it was different. With Harvey Weinstein as the catalyst, former victims came forward and began publicly naming their abusers and even getting the police involved. The American people also learned that their ostensible representation in D.C. was spending millions to silence the victims of their apparent uncontrollable sex abuse.

No longer will companies like Disney be able to hire convicted pedophiles as the world looks the other way... nor will sicko politicians be allowed the immunity to rape and pillage as they see fit. 2017 will be known as the year the victims fought back.

2. Weather modification just jumped from ... chemtrail... conspiracy theory into mainstream reality, as Congress began holding hearings on geoengineering

Geoengineering is finally going mainstream as the U.S. House Subcommittee on Environment and Subcommittee on Energy Hearing, in November, held the first House hearing about the science that until now has generally been considered a ... conspiracy theory... and relegated to the fringe... s of society by the Praetorian Guard mainstream media ... controlled by the ruling power-elite oligarchy.

READ MORE: DC Cop Becomes First Officer to Ever Be Convicted of Terrorism for Aiding ISIS

The controversial subject of climate engineering or weather modification ... which was popularized, and oversimplified with the term ... chem-trails... is stepping from the shadows and into the light of public scrutiny for the first time.

The congressional hearing, titled ... Geoengineering: Innovation, Research, and Technology... was attended by members of the House committees as well as representatives of think tanks, academics, and researcher scientists to discuss the future of geoengineering research.

During the first hearing, the potential need to set up a regulatory structure within which experiments would be allowed, at a set scale, was discussed. Now, those who deny the fact that government is involved in geoengineering will be the conspiracy theorists.

3. 20,000 documents were released in August proving the EPA conspired with chemical companies to unleash deadly toxic substances on the public

Highly toxic chemical compounds made by Dow, Monsanto, DuPont and other companies were being developed and marketed in ever greater quantities, and federal agencies were rubber-stamping their approval based on fraudulent safety testing.

The Poison Papers reveal that, instead of acting to protect the public and reassess the chemicals, EPA held a secret meeting with chemical companies to assure them that their products would continue being sold.

The secret meeting between EPA and chemical companies is the most poignant example of a long history of collusion at the expense of human and environmental health.

4. US media giant Sally Quinn admitted she practiced the occult to murder people... and she was praised for it

Although her husband Ben Bradlee died in 2014... who was good friends with former President John F. Kennedy, and executive editor of the Washington Post from 1968 to 1991... Quinn has since taken the time to give insight into the glamorous life lived by the media... s royal couple. Some of the practices she describes are ones that would normally be written off as crazy conspiracy theories by outlets such as their beloved Washington Post.

However, WaPost actually praised it.

In her latest publication titled, â... Finding Magic: A Spiritual Memoir,â... Quinn reveals that she believes she has killed at least three people in her lifetime. She claims that while she did not harm anyone physically, she believes strongly in the occult, and has used hexes on people who got on her bad side.

5. Mainstream media finally admitted the United States has been aiding terrorists in Syria

In November, the BBC released a bombshell report confirming that the US and Syrian Defense Forces knowingly aided thousands of ISIS fighters.

According to the bombshell BBC report:

The BBC has uncovered details of a secret deal that let hundreds of Islamic State fighters and their families escape from Raqqa, under the gaze of the US and British-led coalition and Kurdish-led forces who control the city. A convoy included some of ISâ... s most notorious members and â... despite reassurances â... dozens of foreign fighters. Some of those have spread out across Syria, even making it as far as Turkey.

As the details behind the Spygate scandal are uncovered, the connections to former President Obama are unearthed.

According to Zero Hedge, the head of opposition research firm Fusion GPS admitted in December 2017 in a court filing that his firm paid the wife of a senior Justice Department official to help dig up damaging information on then-candidate Donald Trump.

Glenn Simpson, co-founder of Fusion GPS, filed the signed declaration in a D.C. court this week affirming that Nellie Ohr, wife of demoted DOJ official Bruce Ohr, was contracted by Fusion through the summer and fall of 2016 â... to help our company with its research and analysis of Mr. Trump,â... according to the filing. The House Intelligence Committee determined that in November 2016, Simpson met with Bruce Ohr shortly after the election to discuss their findings regarding Russia and Trump. Bruce Ohr lost his senior-level position at the DOJ as associate deputy attorney general after his meetings with Simpson and British spy Christopher Steele, who assembled the Trump-Russia dossier, were discovered.

And why would Fusion GPS hire Nellie Ohr? Aside from the obvious connection to her DOJ husband who was in a position to provide Fusion GPS with information on Trump gathered by US intelligence agencies, Nellie Ohr also represented the CIAâ... s â... Open Source Worksâ... group in a 2010 â... expert working group report on international organized crimeâ... along with Bruce Ohr and Glenn Simpson.

The connections between Nellie Ohr and the â... Spygateâ... scandal were hidden at a distance for months.

As noted last week at TGP, Nellie Ohr is a Communist sympathizer connected to Russia as well as a corrupt Never-Trumper.

American Spectator recently posted an article on Nellie Ohr, who they call â... the â... dossierâ... spying scandalâ... s woman in the middle.â...

To one side of Ohr, there is the Fusion GPS team, including fellow contractor Christopher Steele. To the other, there is husband Bruce Ohr, who, until his â... dossierâ... -related demotion, was No. 4 man at the Department of Justice, and a key contact there for Steele.

As central as Nellie Ohrâ... s placement is, her role in the creation of the â... dossierâ... remains undefined. For example, the House Intelligence Committee memo on related matters vaguely tells us that Nellie Ohr was â... employed by Fusion GPS to assist in the cultivation of opposition research on Trumpâ... ; the memo adds that Bruce Ohr â... later provided the FBI with all of his wifeâ... s opposition research.â... Senator Lindsey Graham more sensationally told Fox News that Nellie Ohr â... did the research for Mr. Steele,â... but details remain scarce.

Whatâ... s more revealing about Nellie Ohr is the men in her life are protecting her involvement in the Russia scandal:

Notably, the â... dossierâ... men in her life have tried to shield Ohr from public scrutiny, even at professional risk. Her husband, as the Daily Caller News Foundation reports, failed to disclose his wifeâ... s employment with Fusion GPS and seek the appropriate conflict-of-interest waiver, which may have been an important factor in his demotion from associate deputy attorney general late last year.

Under Senate and House questioning, Fusion GPS co-founder Glenn Simpson consistently failed to disclose Nellie Ohrâ... s existence as one of his firmâ... s paid Russian experts, let alone that he hired her for the red-hot DNC/Clinton campaign Trump-Russia project.

Even Christopher Steele may have tried to keep Nellie Ohr â... under cover.â... Steele, put forth as the â... dossierâ... author ever since its January 2017 publication in BuzzFeed, does not appear to have let on to his many media and political contacts that he had â... dossierâ... -assistance from at least two fellow Fusion GPS Russian experts, Nellie Ohr and Edward Baumgartner. Baumgartner, interestingly, was a Russian history major at Vassar in the 1990s when Nellie Ohr taught Russian history there.

Yesterday, President Trumpâ... s attorney, former New York City Mayor, Rudy Giuliani outed former Obama CIA Director John Brennan as the man in charge of â... Spygateâ... . Rudy claims Brennan orchestrated the â... Spygateâ... scandal and was the quarterback:

It appears that the men in Nellieâ... s life did all they could to prevent Nellie Ohr from being outed for being involved in the dossier because she also has links to the CIA and therefore to Brennan.

If Brennan is outed as the quarterback of the dossier scandal, then by association, so is his boss, former President Obama.

Now we know that communist sympathizer Nellie Ohr, and the men who surrounded her, her husband, business partners, John Brennan, and by association President Obama, were all connected. Together they attempted to prevent Candidate Trump from being elected and later to remove duly elected President Trump from office.

McCain Confirms He Was Behind The Trump 'Pee Dossier And Comey

In his new book, Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) confirms that he gave a controversial dossier about President Trump to former FBI chief James Comey.

â... I agreed to receive a copy of what is now referred to as â... the dossier,â... â... McCain writes in the upcoming book, titled The Restless Wave, referencing information compiled by former British intelligence officer Christopher Steele. â... I reviewed its contents. The allegations were disturbing, but I had no idea which if any were true. I could not independently verify any of it, and so I did what any American who cares about our nationâ... s security should have done.â...

The Daily Beast obtained an advance copy of the book, due out May 22.

McCain writes that in November, 2016, he spoke with Sir Andrew Wood, a former British diplomat, at the Halifax International Security Forum. Wood alerted him to Steele's work after which, David Kramer, Senior Director for Human Rights and Human Freedoms at the McCain Institute, traveled to London to meet with Steele. Prior to this, as The Washington Post reported, Steele had already met with American officials in Rome to discuss his findings.

McCain recounts how he put the dossier in a safe in his office and called Comeyâ... s office to request a meeting: â... I went to see him at his earliest convenience, handed him the dossier, explained how it had come into my possession.â...

â... I said I didnâ... t know what to make of it, and I trusted the FBI would examine it carefully and investigate its claims. With that, I thanked the director and left. The entire meeting had probably not lasted longer than ten minutes. I did what duty demanded I do,â... McCain concludes.

In other sections of the book, previously viewed by The Daily Beast and other outlets, the Arizona senator reflects on his life and in some parts harshly criticizes Trump.

The State Departmentâs Global Engagement Center used a cutout corporation headed by a former intelligence officer to fund and promote the blacklisting of conservative media outlets and other censorship endeavors, research by The Federalist reveals.

When Elon Musk gave a group of independent journalists access to internal Twitter communications, the resulting âTwitter Filesâ quickly revealed the existence of a Censorship-Industrial Complex that included an array of federal agencies colluding with social media companies to censor disfavored speech. One of the many federal players was the State Departmentâs Global Engagement Center (GEC) â but GEC did much more than cajole tech giants to censor viewpoints the government didnât like.

As The Federalist previously reported, GEC funded the development of censorship tools and used âgovernment employees to act as sales reps pitching the censorship products to Big Tech.â Further investigation into its operations now reveals the governmentâs GEC used one or more for-profit businesses to lead four separate censorship initiatives with contractors at times engaging in âinherently governmental functions.â

This graphic from GEC provides a simple summary of its Technology Engagement Team (TET) initiatives, but Disinfo Cloud provides the best entry point to understanding GECâs other activities.

Disinfo Cloud Casts a Big Shadow

According to GEC's webpage, Disinfo Cloud is a platform that acts as a repository to catalogue an ever-growing list of CPD tools and technologies, with CPD standing for countering propaganda and disinformation. While originally available only to .mil and .gov users, access was later opened to the private sector.

Then as part of its Silicon Valley Engagement initiative, GEC pushed social media companies to join Disinfo Cloud, which helped users identify technologies for censoring speech. This has huge First Amendment implications because although many details of Disinfo Cloud's operations and funding remain obscure, it's clear U.S. tax dollars funded both the platform's development and maintenance.

A State Department spokesman previously explained that an outside group, Park Advisors, managed Disinfo Cloud, awarding the group approximately $300,000 to manage the platform. Christina Nemr, a former State Department employee who had been a founding member of the Countering Violent Extremism (CVE) program, served as the director of Park Advisors and the administrator of Disinfo Cloud.

Park Advisors Overshadowed the GEC

While Disinfo Cloud was a GEC initiative, it appears Park Advisors and Nemr controlled the platform at DisinfoCloud.com, which has since been shuttered. Park Advisors has also recently removed the content of its webpage, leaving only the landing page. A still-available video, however, shows Nemr explaining the repository.

After Disinfo Cloud identified a tool for countering so-called “disinformation,” Nemr’s team would conduct open-source research to learn everything possible about the tool, including who made it and what technology was involved, and then summarize the research in a one- to three-page report. Next, Disinfo Cloud would contact the tool’s creator, requesting a remote demonstration and seeking more technical details, after which it would compile a 10- to 12-page report on the technology. Disinfo Cloud had reviewed about 200 different technologies, which were added to its repository.

Disinfo Cloud also helped users “including private social media companies” identify the best available censorship tools “to counter propaganda and disinformation.”

Publicly available information indicates Park Advisors and Nemr did much more than create and manage Disinfo Cloud. Its subscribers also received a weekly “Disinfo Digest,” which Nemr launched in December 2020 to inform users “of the latest news, events, funding opportunities, and other updates related to disinformation, including from the tech vendors featured on Disinfo Cloud.”

Along with promoting its own platform, Disinfo Cloud’s Twitter account also promoted Disinfo Digest and the Tech Demo Series. The account also amplified the marketing of private censorship tools and companies, such as the unreliable media-ratings organizations Global Disinformation Index and NewsGuard.

Disinfo Cloud Plugs Tech Demo Series

The aforementioned government-promoted Tech Demo Series purported to feature â... promising technologies to employ against the problems of propaganda and disinformation.â... But the fact that Disinfo Cloud highlighted the Tech Demo Series suggests the infomercial-like demonstrations of censorship technology were open to non-governmental groups, such as Big Tech.

However, the GEC webpage says the audience for these virtual demos â... is composed of U.S. government counterparts and foreign partners,â... leaving unclear whether the Tech Demo Series marketed censorship technology to outsiders and, if so, how. It is also unclear whether Disinfo Cloud or GEC hosted the Tech Demo Series.

Park Advisors Controlled GEC's Testbed

While Disinfo Cloud's role in the Tech Demo Series is unclear, GEC's Testbed operated from Disinfo Cloud, and Park Advisors also managed that government initiative.

According to GEC's webpage, Testbed tests specific tools or technologies against a submitted proposal, over the course of six to eight weeks to see how successful the tools are in countering supposed propaganda in real operational situations. While GEC's current descriptor of Testbed says the State Department organization solicits real challenges of the U.S. government (USG) to counter foreign propaganda and disinformation, when Park Advisors ran Disinfo Cloud and Testbed, the GEC webpage explained that the two initiatives were used by academia, private sector, and tech vendors, and directed users to ask Disinfo Cloud for assistance in drafting a test proposal for a tool.

Of the 200-some technologies on Disinfo Cloud, only some piloted on Testbed. But according to Nemr, GEC paid vendors $25,000 to complete the six- to eight-week assessment.

Park Advisors Organized GEC Challenges

In addition to managing Disinfo Cloud and the GEC Testbed, Park Advisors was also involved in GEC's Tech Challenges. Nemr, the Park Advisors director, even boasted of organizing three international Tech Challenges (in Asia, Africa, and Europe). The GEC webpage also credited Park Advisors and Disinfo Cloud with collaborating with the State Department for the U.S.-Africa, U.S.-Paris, and U.S.-Taiwan Tech Challenges.

Nemr stressed that eight awards were granted. At least two of the monetary awards went to organizations targeting conservatives including news outlets for censorship, namely the Global Disinformation Index and the Institute of Strategic Dialogue. Despite purporting to fund foreign-based tech experts to implement a tool, locally, to address misinformation and disinformation challenges in the region, these U.S.-Paris Challenge awardees reached squarely into the American marketplace of speech.

The Global Disinformation Index (GDI) purports to assess the disinformation risk of media outlets and declares conservative media, including The Federalist, as the Ten Riskiest Online News Outlets. In contrast, the supposedly Ten Lowest-Risk Online News Outlets consist of a who's who of left-wing legacy outlets, including those that regularly botched big political stories, such as the Russia-collusion hoax and the Hunter Biden laptop story.

At the 2021 U.S.-Paris Tech Challenge, GDI's founders explained the goal of the risk-rating technology: to disrupt the funding of so-called disinformation by steering away ad dollars.

Danny Rogers, the American partner in the initiative, stressed in the team's presentation that over a dozen ad-tech companies, covering 20 different media markets, used GDI's technology. That technology succeeded in cutting the number of ad options by over half, redirecting millions of dollars away from disinformation peddlers toward quality journalism, Rogers boasted.

Significantly, after learning GEC had selected the Global Disinformation Index as one of the winners of the U.S.-Paris Challenge, Rogers' U.K. partner, Clare Melford, explained that the award, in addition to allowing GDI to increase its language coverage capability, would also allow GDI to expand its risk assessments into video news and bolster the infrastructure underpinning all of the GDI's activities!

so that the ad tech base can offer advertisers the chance to choose which their ads support.â€¦

In other words, our government paid for the infrastructure of GDIâ€™s ratings system that resulted in conservative news outlets being blacklisted â€¦ \$100,000 worth of U.S. tax dollars in total, funneled by the GEC to the Global Disinformation Index through Park Advisors.

GEC also used Park Advisors to pay a second winner of the U.S.-Paris Tech Challenge, the Institute of Strategic Dialogue, which pitched its â€¦ Beamâ€™ technology that purports â€¦ to detect, track & measure online manipulation, disinformation, and harassment.â€¦

â€¦ Beam,â€¦ according to the Institute of Strategic Dialogue, had already been â€¦ used by 300 civil society groups in the U.S. around the elections.â€¦ But the tech challenge prize, the organization explained, would allow it to build â€¦ a new integration to study state-backed manipulation of Wikipedia.â€¦

The State Department confirmed it funded, through Disinfo Cloud, the Institute of Strategic Dialogueâ€™s research of Russian disinformation tactics against Wikipedia. But that research applied more to Americans than those in Europe or Asia, as the study analyzed â€¦ the English-language Wikipedia page for the Russo-Ukrainian warâ€¦ â€¦ another apparent contravention of the foreign-focused purpose of the U.S.-Paris Tech Challenge. The Institute for Strategic Dialogue, like the GDI, also has an anti-conservative bias.

GEC Sponsors U.S.-Based Challenge

In addition to the international tech challenges, the GEC sponsored the â€¦ Countering COVID19 Disinformation Challenge,â€¦ run by the Department of Defenseâ€™s National Security Innovation Network. Winners of that challenge received $25,000 to pilot their technology on GECâ€™s Testbed, â€¦ hosted by Disinfo Cloud.â€¦

One of the winners of this challenge was the irresponsible, reliability-ratings company NewsGuard. Like GDI, NewsGuard also champions leftist outlets that peddled the Russia-collusion hoax and wrongly framed the Hunter Biden laptop as Russian disinformation, while branding conservative outlets such as The Federalist as unreliable.

Park Advisorsâ€™ Funding Is Shadowy

That GEC used Disinfo Cloud as a pass-through to award $100,000 to the Global Disinformation Index, an unspecified amount to the Institute of Strategic Dialogue, and $25,000 to NewsGuard and other winners of the Covid challenge makes no obvious sense â€¦ unless the State Department sought to avoid a public connection to the funding.

But even now knowing the GEC funded these censorship endeavors through Disinfo Cloud helps little because the State Departmentâ€™s funding of that platform is hazy.

While a State Department spokesman said GEC had awarded Park Advisors approximately $300,000 in 2018 to manage Disinfo Cloud, a search of government contracts and grants fails to show either Park Advisors or the related entity Park Capital Investment Group receiving any such award. The only documented payment to either entity appears in 2020 and shows a Covid loan of nearly $40,000 to Park Capital Investment Group.

Adding further mystery to the funding of Park Advisors â€¦ aka Park Capital Investment Group â€¦ is the inspector generalâ€™s audit of GEC, which included a review of a nearly $3 million award to Park Capital Investment Group. But that award also does not appear at USASpending.gov. In fact, a search by award numbers also fails to show GECâ€™s awards to Democracy Council of California or CNA Corporation.

The State Department ignored The Federalist's request for clarification of the funding of Park Advisors. The Federalist's efforts to speak with the founders and original managing partner of Park Advisors and Park Capital Investment Group also proved unsuccessful. Nemr who has since founded the company Becera, which has already scored nearly a million dollars from the State Department as a sub-awardee also did not respond to multiple inquiries.

GEC Let Contractors Run Censorship

While the lack of transparency related to the millions of federal grants awarded by GEC proves troubling, the larger concern is what GEC paid Park Advisors and presumably other contractors to do: fund and coordinate the censorship of Americans' speech and the blacklisting of our supposedly free press.

Further exacerbating the scandal are audits from the Office of Inspector General that reveal GEC lacked oversight of contractors and had insufficient internal controls to ensure contractors did not perform inherently governmental functions.

Unfortunately, the State Department doesn't consider funding the development of censorship tools and marketing them to silence disfavored speakers any problem at all.

Brit teen hacker posed as CIA boss to access secret military files and sent lewd rape threats to Homeland Security chief

Kane Gamble, 18, hacked into John Brennan's emails, rang his home and took control of his wife's iPad, a court heard

By Tom Michael

A BRIT teen hacker posed as a CIA boss to access secret military files and sent lewd rape threats to a Homeland Security chief, a court has heard.

Kane Gamble, 18, hacked into intelligence head John Brennan's email account, made hoax calls to his family home and even took control of his wife's iPad, judges were told.

3 Kane Gamble, 18, has pleaded guilty to a string of charges

The hacks were carried out as part of a campaign of harassment against top US officials motivated by his political views, a court heard.

Gamble was just 15 when he posed as a telecoms worker and Brennan himself to gain information including passwords, contacts lists and sensitive documents about operations in Afghanistan and Iraq.

He then taunted the CIA on Twitter about his successes as a leading member of a collective called '... Crackas With Attitude...', which supported the Free Palestine movement.

Prosecutor John Lloyd-Jones QC told the Old Bailey Gamble started the group.

3 Gamble arrives at the Old Bailey in London, where he will be sentenced Gamble told a journalist: â... It all started by me getting more and more annoyed at how corrupt and cold-blooded the US Government is so I decided to do something about it.â...

The court heard Gamble â... felt particularly stronglyâ... about US-backed Israeli violence against Palestinians, the shooting of black people by US police, racist violence by the KKK and the bombing of civilians in Iraq and Syria.

After Brennan, Gamble went on to carry out a series of similar attacks on other top security figures from his bedroom in Leics.

His victims included the secretary of Homeland Security Jeh Johnson, to whom he sent a photo of his daughter and said he would â... f*** herâ... , the court heard.

3 Gamble was 17 when he was arrested at his council home near Leicester

He also targeted the ex-deputy director of the FBI Mark Giuliano and James Clapper, director of national intelligence under Obama, as well as their families.

He boasted about carrying out â... the best breach everâ... after accessing an FBI database to get the names of 1,000 staff and details of the officer responsible for the notorious shooting of Michael Brown in Ferguson, Missouri.

The information Gamble gathered was later used to carry out a â... swattingâ... attack on John Holdren, a science and technology adviser to US President Barack Obama, resulting in armed officers being sent to Mr Holdren's family home.

A similar prank carried out by another hoaxer in the US resulted in the victim being shot dead by gun cops who raided his house.

Gamble was arrested in February 2016 at his council home in Coalville, near Leicester, at the request of the FBI after he hacked into the Department of Justice network.

The teen, who claims he did not realise the seriousness of what he was doing because of his autism, will be sentenced at a later date.

Gamble was allowed to sit next to his mother behind his barrister rather than the dock when he appeared at the Old Bailey.

The teen, of Coalville, Leicester, admitted eight counts of performing a function with intent to secure unauthorised access and two counts of unauthorised modification of computer material.
The hearing continues.

Can you hear me now?: NSA can find & track people with â... voice-matching technologyâ...

Declassified documents reveal the National Security Agency has been using secret â... speaker recognitionâ... technology to identify people by their unique â... voiceprintâ... for more than a decade.

The NSA has been recording and gathering private phone calls for years, but it used to be difficult for the agency to identify unknown speakers. In the past, signals intelligence (SIGINT) transcribers worked on the same targets for years before they became familiar enough with a speakerâ... s unique voice to be able to verify their identity.

Read more .NSA sought to prevent Snowden-style leaks, ended up losing staff â... whistleblower to RT

Now, the NSA is using more advanced computational systems developed by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) in order to catch spies and terrorists, according to a declassified NSA document obtained by media outlet the Intercept.

The document describes how the NSA used the technology during Operation Iraqi Freedom to match an audio recording to former leader Saddam Husseinâ... s â... voiceprint.â... The NSA also used the technology to compare the voice of a captured suspect with previous audio recordings from terrorist Abu Hakim to confirm that the suspect was not a match.

In order to test their technology, analysts at the NSA compared old intercepts and audio files relating to Ron Pelton, a former NSA analyst who sold details about several secret US programs to the Soviet Union. At the time, the agency failed to identify Pelton through human voice identification. However, in 2006, the agency was able to automatically match Peltonâ... s voice using the technology.

â... Had such technologies been available twenty years ago, early detection and apprehension could have been possible, reducing the considerable damage Pelton did to national security,â... the document states.

According to the classified document, the NSA was able to automatically identify a Chinese speaker when they were speaking in English. The document states that voice recognition technologies were â... rapidly becoming the standard in the Intelligence Communityâ... more than a decade ago.

Civil liberties advocates are concerned that the technology could make it easier for the NSA to violate the privacy rights of American citizens.

â... This creates a new intelligence capability and a new capability for abuse,â... Timothy Edgar, a former White House adviser to the Director of National Intelligence, told the Intercept. â... Our voice is traveling across all sorts of communication channels where weâ... re not there. In an age of mass surveillance, this kind of capability has profound implications for all of our privacy.â...

Since a â... voiceprintâ... is nearly impossible to change or disguise, privacy advocates also fear the NSA would be able to instantly locate and track anyone who can be heard by a microphone.

National News Coverage Exposes Political Reprisals Against Applicants Who Are Whistleblowers by SSA and HUD staff

By Conner Lee

The "SpyGate" or "FISA Abuse" case in the current White House involves the abuse of public agencies to attack those they are politically opposed to. Average citizen SSA, IRS, HUD and other applicants suffer the same fate.

The San Mateo, California Social Security Administration offices are under investigation because one, or more, of their staff used SSA resources to attack an Applicant because a staff member (erroneously) thought that an Applicant was opposed to that SSA staffer's beliefs on "open-borders". The SSA official ordered up reprisal operations, against the Applicant, simply to vent that SSA officials political angers. That is an illegal abuse by SSA staff.

A vast number of agency abuse cases and lawsuits are now on public record in the Inspector General's offices and federal courts.

It is an indisputable fact that some government agencies run "hit-jobs" on citizens on orders from certain corrupt politicians. These actions are felony violations of the law.

Federal and State Agencies including SSA, FEC, DOE, HHS, VA, CIA, HUD, SA, SEC, FBI, DOJ and many others, have been charged, and found guilty, in these crimes against citizens.

In the Congressional investigation published by the United States Congress in review of the U.S. Department of Energy LGP/ATVM programs, it is clearly proven that the U.S. Department of Energy was used as a slush-fund by some DOE executives in order to pay off campaign financiers by attacking and sabotaging their competitors.

The DOE Paducah Gaseous Diffusion Plant under contracts with the Department of Energy and the government-owned U.S. Enrichment Corp paid $5M whistle-blower awards to those whistle-blowers who were attacked, using government agency resources, for reporting a crime.

Dept. of Energy Hanford URS has agreed to settle a lawsuit brought by former employee Walter Tamosaitis for $4.1 million. The settlement in the whistle-blower case comes almost one year before the case was set for a jury trial in federal court in Richland and compensates Tamosaitis for attacks against him, by DOE officials, in retribution for reporting a crime.

VA officials attacked hundreds of citizens who reported corruption, ie:

<https://www.thenewamerican.com/usnews/health-care/item/18610-va-whistleblowers-facing-retribution>.

As shown in this report:

<https://www.pogo.org/analysis/2018/08/new-report-confirms-whistleblower-retaliation-is-alive-and-well-at-department>, Agencies attack often and harshly.

CIA and NSA executives have been widely shown to use spy tools to attack domestic citizens they don't like, ie:

<https://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-2435011/NSA-employees-used-phone-tapping-tools-spy-girlfriends-cheating>, and hundreds of other news links that can be provided.

Elon Musk and Tesla, as well as Eric Schmidt and Larry Page at Google, have been proven to use the CIA group: IN-Q-TEL, to run government sponsored/financed attacks on business competitors.

In Civil Action No. 1:13-cv-00777-RBW GOVERNMENT AGENCIES WERE CAUGHT BEING USED FOR ATTACKS AGAINST CITIZENS AND PUNISHED IN THE COURT AND THE MEDIA!

The IRS, and hordes of other government agencies have been caught and proven, IN COURT, to target and attack people for presumed political differences.

Why should we assume that the Social Security Administration is not ALSO doing this too to harm citizens who speak out?

The Lois Lerner IRS attacks took many years to resolve. In an unprecedented victorious conclusion to a four year-long legal battle against the IRS, the bureaucratic agency admitted in federal court that it wrongfully targeted citizens, during the Obama Administration, because of their political viewpoints and issued an apology to those people for doing so.

In addition, the IRS is consenting to a court order that would prohibit it from ever engaging in this form of unconstitutional discrimination in the future.

In a proposed Consent Order filed with the Court, the IRS has apologized for its treatment of U.S. citizens including organizations from 20 states that applied for 501(c)(3) and (c)(4) tax-exempt status with the IRS between 2009 and 2012 -- during the tax-exempt determinations process. Crucially, following years of denial by the IRS and blame-shifting by IRS officials, the agency now expressly admits that its treatment of our clients was wrong and a total violation of our Democracy..

As set forth in the proposed Order:

â... The IRS admits that its treatment of Plaintiffs during the tax-exempt determinations process, including screening their applications based on their names or policy positions, subjecting those applications to heightened scrutiny and inordinate delays, and demanding of some Plaintiffsâ... information that TIGTA determined was unnecessary to the agencyâ... s determination of their tax-exempt status, was wrong. For such treatment, the IRS expresses its sincere apology.â...

Throughout litigation of this case, activists have remained committed to protecting the rights of the public who faced unlawful and discriminatory action by the IRS and other agencies. The objective from the very beginning has been to hold agencies accountable for corrupt practices.

This Consent Order represents a historic victory for the public and sends the unequivocal message that a government agencyâ... s targeting of citizens organizations, or any organization, on the basis of political viewpoints, will never be tolerated and that revenge will be swift and vast.

The Order will put an end, once and for all, to the abhorrent practices utilized against citizens, as the agreement includes the IRSâ... s express acknowledgment of â... and apology for â... its wrongful treatment of the public. While this agreement is designed to prevent any such practices from occurring again, rest assured that all public interest lawyers will remain vigilant to ensure that the IRS, SSA, DOJ or SEC does not resort to such tactics in the future.

Per detailed reports, in March of 2012 lawyers began being contacted by literally dozens of citizens and groups who were being harassed by the Obama IRS after submitting applications for tax-exempt status. Their tax-exempt applications were held up for years (over seven years in some cases), and they began receiving obtrusive and unconstitutional requests for donor and member information. That began a now more than five and a half year fight with the burgeoning bureaucracy at the IRS. Then on May 10, 2013, Lois Lerner, the then head of the IRS Tax Exempt Organizations Division, publicly implicated the IRS in one of the worst political targeting scandals of the century.

This is an extraordinary victory against government agency abuse. It sends a powerful warning to the deep state bureaucracy that it will not be allowed to violate the Constitution in order to silence and shut down the whistle-blowers.

In addition to the IRS's admissions of and apology for its wrongful conduct, the Consent Order would specifically award Plaintiffs the following:

- A declaration by the Court that it is wrong to apply the United States tax code to any tax-exempt applicant or entity based solely on such entity's name, any lawful positions it espouses on any issues, or its associations or perceived associations with a particular political movement, position or viewpoint;
- A declaration by the Court that any action or inaction taken by the IRS must be applied evenhandedly and not based solely on a tax-exempt applicant or entity's name, political viewpoint, or associations or perceived associations with a particular political movement, position or viewpoint; and
- A declaration by the Court that discrimination on the basis of political viewpoint in administering the United States tax code violates fundamental First Amendment rights. Disparate treatment of taxpayers based solely on the taxpayers' names, any lawful positions the taxpayers espouse on any issues, or the taxpayers' associations or perceived associations with a particular political movement, position or viewpoint is unlawful.

In the Order, the IRS has also agreed that (unless expressly required by law) certain actions against the Plaintiffs—i.e. the sharing, dissemination, or other use of information unnecessarily obtained by the IRS during the determinations process (such as donor names, the names of volunteers, political affiliations of an organization's officers, etc.)—would be unlawful. In addition, the IRS promises not to take any retaliatory action against our clients for exposing the targeting scheme.

Finally, and of crucial significance, the IRS admits it targeted persons and groups based on their viewpoints (i.e., its policy positions) and that such viewpoint discrimination violates fundamental First Amendment rights. This is the first time the IRS has admitted that its targeting scheme was not just inappropriate—as TIGTA found—but, as alleged, blatantly unconstitutional.

To ensure consistency and uniformity within the agency's operations going forward, the IRS is required, pursuant to the Order, to inform all employees within the Exempt Organizations Division, as well as the Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners within other divisions, of the Order's terms.

This Order not only validates allegations about their treatment at the hands of the corrupt Obama-era IRS but also provides important assurances to the American public that the agency understands its obligation to refrain from further such discriminatory conduct. As Attorney General Sessions acknowledged in this regard, "[t]here is no excuse for [the IRS's] conduct, as it is without question that the First Amendment prohibits the conduct that occurred here, i.e., subjecting American citizens to disparate treatment based solely on their viewpoint or ideology." Sessions further confirmed his Department's commitment to ensuring that the abuse of power in which the IRS engaged here will not be tolerated.

It is impossible to overstate the importance of this victory. This marks a years-long fight for justice in defense of the constitutional rights of the public.

This is an extraordinary victory against abuse of power and corruption.

It sends a powerful warning to the deep state bureaucracy that it will not be allowed to violate the Constitution and manipulate the IRS, SSA and other agencies in order to silence and shut down those who speak out about political corruption crimes.

In the wake of Wisconsin Watchdog's investigation into SSA staff allegations of incompetence, misconduct, and retaliation in Social Security disability appeals offices, several employees have taken their complaints to a Senate committee led by Wisconsin Sen. Ron Johnson.

An official with knowledge of the complaints said the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee, chaired by the Oshkosh Republican, has received emails and other contacts from "certain people" inside the Social Security Administration's Office of Disability Adjudication and Review.

The initial complaints came from an employee inside the Milwaukee office following Wisconsin Watchdog's opening investigative report that found some claimants waiting more than 1,000 days for an appeals decision on their disability benefits claim.

Following Wednesday's story of a whistleblower in the Madison ODAR office, the committee has received more specific complaints about retaliation against employees, the source said.

Committee staff members sent the latest Watchdog piece to SSA administrators hoping they will "cooperate," the source said. To date, the agency has been less than cooperative.

"This is an ongoing process, and they are not always as forthcoming as we'd like them to be," the source said. "Hopefully with your continued reporting, this is an issue they can't duck."

A Senate committee member said officials there are working with the Office of Special Counsel on "multiple whistleblower retaliation claims." The committee continues to request information from the SSA.

The whistleblower in the Madison office claims management retaliated against her after she was called to testify in a misconduct case. The incident involved "inappropriate behavior" by an administrative law judge, she said.

"They are so corrupt. It's absolutely horrible," said the woman, a lead case technician in the Madison Office of Disability Adjudication and Review.

She spoke on condition of anonymity, fearing more retribution from her supervisors. While she said recounting her particular experiences will more than likely betray her identity anyway, the ODAR case worker insisted she has had enough.

"I'm at point where they don't care about me, I don't see why I'm protecting them. This is my last resort," she said. "I want to do my work without fear of retaliation."

She said she has contacted the Senate committee.

"I forwarded my information to them and I got an email back from them. They said people are coming out of the woodwork with their complaints (about ODAR) following your story," the whistle-blower said.

Ronald Klym, a long-time senior legal assistant in the Milwaukee ODAR office, alleges he has been retaliated against by supervisors for going public with his charges of incompetence and misconduct in the agency.

The federal employee, who has worked for SSA for 16 years, provided Wisconsin Watchdog with documents showing extremely long wait times for claimants appealing their denied applications for benefits.

Doug Nguyen, SSA regional spokesman, in a previous story said the agency acknowledges that Milwaukee ODAR has a "high average processing time for disability appeal hearings, and we are working to address the issue."

Beyond the delays is what Klym calls the "shell game" the wholesale transferring of cases to other parts of the country by administrators to make the Milwaukee office's numbers look better than they are.

The Madison office whistle-blower confirmed Klym's allegations, saying at one point she saw 2,000 cases from the Milwaukee office handed off to the Oak Brook operation.

There are over 10,000 SSA disability manipulation charges against SSA executives and staff.

FBI STAFF ATTACK FBI OFFICER WHO REPORTED ABUSE OF FBI RESOURCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC:

Report: Newly-Released Texts Between FBI Agents May Indicate Obama Administration Coordinated With FBI And CIA Near Start Of Trump/Russia Investigation

By HANK BERRIEN March 29, 2018

GOP congressional investigators are examining newly-released texts between FBI officials Peter Strzok and Lisa Page that may indicate there was coordination between high-ranking officials at the Obama White House, CIA, FBI, Justice Department and former Senate Democratic leadership near the beginning of the Trump/Russia investigation.

The investigators gleaned their information from Fox News and assert that it “strongly” suggests coordination between former President Barack Obama’s Chief of Staff Denis McDonough, then-Senate Democratic Leader Harry Reid, and CIA Director John Brennan.

The chronology of events looks like this:

August 2, 2016: Page texts Strzok “Make sure you can lawfully protect what you sign. Just thinking about congress, foia, etc. You probably know better than me.”

August 3, 2016: Strzok texts Page and paints former FBI Deputy Director Andrew McCabe as worried about “information control” regarding the initial investigation into the Trump campaign. On Wednesday, Fox News reported, “According to a report from the New York Times, Brennan was sent to Capitol Hill around the same time to brief members of Congress on the possibility of election interference.”

August 8, 2016: Strzok texts Page: “Internal joint cyber cd intel piece for D, scenesetter for McDonough brief, Trainor [head of FBI cyber division] directed all cyber info be pulled. I’d let Bill and Jim hammer it out first, though it would be best for D to have it before the Wed WH session.” “D” was reportedly FBI Director James Comey; “McDonough” referred to Chief of Staff Denis McDonough, according to GOP investigators.

August 25, 2016: Brennan briefs Harry Reid. A congressional source told Fox News that it is unknown whether a representative from the FBI was present.

August 27, 2016: Reid writes Comey asking him to investigate possible collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia. He states:

The evidence of a direct connection between the Russian government and Donald Trump’s presidential campaign continues to mount and has led Michael Morrell, the former Acting Central Intelligence Director, to call Trump an “unwitting agent” of Russia and the Kremlin. The prospect of a hostile government actively seeking to undermine our free and fair elections represents one of the gravest threats to our democracy since the Cold War and it is critical for the Federal Bureau of Investigation to use every resource available to investigate this matter thoroughly and in a timely fashion.

Reid also stated, “Recent staff changes within the Trump campaign have made clear that the Trump campaign has employed a number of individuals with significant and disturbing ties to Russia and the Kremlin,â... adding that he wanted Comey to make the investigation â... public.â...

Aug. 30, 2016, Strzok texted Page: â... Here we go,â... and included a link to a New York Times report titled, â... Harry Reid Cites Evidence of Russian Tampering in U.S. Vote and seeks FBI inquiry.â... Strzok answered, â... D [Comey] said at am brief that Reid called him and told him he would be sending a letter.â...

Fox News writes, â... Congressional investigators suggested that the Reid letter possibly provided â... coverâ... for the fact that the FBI and Justice Department had already begun investigating the Trump campaign in mid-July on what they called â... questionable ethical and legal grounds.â...

One congressional source told Fox News, â... The â... here we goâ... text between Strzok and Page indicates the FBI/ DOJ knew the letter from Reid was coming. This created the inference they knew it would create public calls for an investigation into Russian interference â... covering them.â...

Inspector Generals Open Probes Into Alleged

Retaliation By Obama Executives

The Pentagon's Inspector General has launched a preliminary investigation into charges of vendettas and reprisals against whistle-blowers. Charges include those that James H. Baker, the director of the Defense Department's Office of Net Assessment (ONA), is retaliating against whistleblowers who warned of rigged contracts to outside consultants. CIA, DOE, DOT and many other Agency Inspector Generals are now taking up the glut of Obama Era reprisal cases.

The Adam Lovinger Case -

Acting IG, Glenn A. Fine, initiated a formal Whistleblower Reprisal Investigation Sept. 28 to look into allegations that Baker unleashed various reprisals against, Adam Lovinger, a senior ONA official. Lovinger warned about potential sweetheart deals to politically-connected outside contractors, including one with a woman Chelsea Clinton has referred to as her best friend.

The IG is investigating Baker's actions under Presidential Policy Directive-19, an October 2012 directive designed to protect members of the intelligence community who report waste, fraud and abuse. The directive pointedly states that it prohibits retaliation against employees for reporting waste, fraud, and abuse.

Baker is an Obama holdover appointed by Secretary Ashton Carter in May 2015, who remains the ONA director 11 months into the Trump administration. Lovinger specifically protested $11.2 million in ONA contracts awarded over a decade to the Long Term Strategic Group (LTSG), a company owned by Jacqueline Newmyer, a childhood friend of Chelsea Clinton. Clinton and Newmyer first met each other while attending Sidwell Friends School, an exclusive private Quaker school in the nation's capital. They were in each other's weddings, and in 2011 Chelsea referred to Newmyer as her best friend.

Lovinger's attorney, Sean M. Bigley, accuses Baker of continuing the LTSG contract in the hopes it could help him in a Clinton presidency. (RELATED: Chelsea's Best Friend Wins $11 MIL in Defense Contracts With No Clearance)

We submit that Baker's interest was his awareness of the LTSG-Clinton connection; his presumptive desire to exploit that to his advantage in the event of a Clinton election win; and the fact that contractors like LTSG served as a lucrative landing pad for ONA retirees, Bigley charged in a Sept. 13 letter to Rear Admiral Kevin Sweeney, the chief of staff for Defense Secretary James Mattis.

The IG's decision to launch a preliminary investigation occurred as former high-profile national security officials are beginning to publicly weigh in about Baker's allegedly retaliatory actions.

Richard Perle, Ronald Reagan's former Assistant Secretary of Defense, said of Lovinger, "He's been treated so badly. It's a disgrace."

Perle called Baker, "a shallow and manipulative character that should have gone with the change in administration."

Across the Atlantic, Richard Kemp, the former commander of British troops in Afghanistan, who worked for four years at 10 Downing Street for British Prime Minister Tony Blair, also denounced Baker's alleged act of retaliation.

â... He is a highly respected analyst across the board,â... Kemp said, referring to Lovinger. â... The way he has been treated is deeply troubling.â...

Lovinger, a GS-15 attorney and strategic foreign affairs analyst, successfully served at ONA for 12 years and each year received the highest possible â... Eâ... rating in his performance review. The â... Eâ... means â... exceptionalâ... performance.

Lovinger was also the 2006 recipient of the â... Secretary of Defense Exceptional Civilian Service Award,â... the highest career award for civil servants in Office of Secretary of Defense.

But Baker poorly rated Lovinger in 2017, after he raised issues about the ONAâ... s reliance on outside contractors, including LTSG.

ONA is a highly-classified think tank housed within the office of the Secretary of Defense. It conducts sensitive strategic research, especially for the Defense Secretary, and the office is supposed to serve as a model of performance. For 42 years, ONA was led solely by one director, Andrew Marshall, who Lovinger alleges initially authorized many of the sweetheart deals with outside contractors. Marshall retired from ONA at the age of 93. Baker took the helm four months later.

IG Fineâ... s investigation into possible wrongdoing by Baker is being carried out by his â... Investigations of Senior Officials Directorate.â... That unit investigates â... allegations of misconduct against the most senior DoD officers (three-star and above and equivalents), senior officials in the Joint or Defense Intelligence Community, and members of the Senior Executive Service,â... according to the latest IG semi-annual report to Congress that is current as of March 31, 2017.

IG investigations under the Presidential Policy Directive-19 appear to be extremely rare.

From 2013 to 2017, only three case were confirmed under PPD-19 among the 239 cases the IG â... substantiatedâ... across all the military services and civilian Defense Department employees, according to the IGâ... s semi-annual report.

Several IG investigators personally met with Lovinger for four and a half hours Oct. 5, examining the charges of how Baker retaliated against the analyst, according to Bigley. The original meeting was expected to last no more than three hours. The IG office is formally attempting to determine if they need to intervene in the Baker case, according to a source with direct knowledge of the investigation. Fineâ... s office customarily does not provide any public information about the pace of IG investigations. The first inkling of retaliation against Lovinger came Jan. 12, 2017, when Baker suddenly issued a series of charges against him. This was the same day that the National Security Council officially invited Lovinger to leave ONA and join the NSC as a senior director.

Lovinger entered the Trump White House on Inauguration Day, but was dogged by Baker.

After Baker issued his latest set of allegations against Lovinger, the Washington Headquarters Services, a bureaucratic arm of the Pentagon, temporarily suspended Lovingerâ... s security clearance May 1 and removed him from his NSC post. Lovinger now works at a Defense Department annex where he currently is doing clerical work.

Baker dropped charges in two of the three of his initial investigations after they were challenged by Thomas Spencer, Lovinger's first attorney. Bigley said the allegations against his client are demonstrably false and called Baker "partisan and highly vindictive" in an interview. Baker has leveled four separate charges against Lovinger. The counts include an "unauthorized" trip to Israel, taking home unclassified academic papers to read, reading a classified document in an airplane, and having "unauthorized" contacts with the Indian government. Baker's accusation that the trip to Israel was "unauthorized" particularly rankles Lovinger. Prior to the trip, Lovinger said that he notified ONA of an expected personal trip to Israel to commemorate his oldest son's Bar Mitzvah. The Lovinger family traveled with their close family friends, the Wiesels, whose patriarch, Elisha, is the son of legendary Holocaust survivor and Nobel Laureate Eli Wiesel.

Lovinger said that they only did "tourist stuff" and did not meet with a single Israeli official. Another charge is that Lovinger conducted "unauthorized" contacts with the Indian government. Lovinger's 2017 performance review includes a statement from Secretary Carter, commending him for his work with the Indian government. "Two days prior to departing for the NSC, on January 18, 2017, the Secretary of Defense highlighted in an official letter Lovinger's exceptional performance on collaborative net assessment with the Government of India," the performance review states. Nevertheless, in the same review Baker rated Lovinger poorly. "I do not endorse the characterization set forth in the employee input (that) Adam performed successfully," Baker said. As for taking home papers, Baker sent an email to all ONA staff Nov. 1, 2016, in which he said, "Team-acknowledging our cluttered workspace: we all read widely and have to as part of the job"

all source, often all mixed together. Given the volume of reading, you may sometimes take reports and so forth home. (I certainly do).â€¦

Lovinger did carry a document aboard an airplane during a Sept. 14, 2016 official trip. Anthony Russell, the ONA investigator of the incident, noted in an Oct. 18 memo for the record that the document â€¦ is marked without security markings in the header, but with â€¦ Classification Pending.'â€¦ Russell concluded: â€¦ It is reasonable to conclude that there was no compromise given the content of the document in question and its close control either on Mr. Lovingerâ€™s person or in his assigned lodging on a military base for a relatively short period of time. For these reasons, no violation is believed to have occurred.â€¦

â€¦ He clearly was the target, for political reasons, of an effort to push him out of government,â€¦ Perle said of Lovinger. â€¦ And this was done consciously and deliberately. Heâ€™s a Trump loyalist, and it was launched and sustained by an Obama holdover.â€¦

â€¦ This cries out for an investigation of Baker,â€¦ Perle added. Kemp called the sidelining of Lovinger â€¦ a great loss.â€¦ â€¦ He is very much a creative thinker and heâ€™s not constrained by sort of narrow lines that affect so many people in government,â€¦ Kemp said.

â€¦ As I understand it, he questioned the actions of various organizations within the U.S. Government, particularly the Office of Net Assessment. And of course, these may not be always welcomed by oneâ€™s superiors,â€¦ Kemp said. As for the use of outside contractors, Kemp said, â€¦ Iâ€™m aware they [ONA] did depend a lot on in the past on external contractors. Itâ€™s not necessarily a good thing.â€¦ â€¦ To get rid of someone like that on what appeared to be questionable grounds is potentially problematic for the effectiveness of the U.S. intelligence organization,â€¦ Kemp added.

Robert Reilly, who served for 25 years in the national security field, including as a senior advisor to Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and as a White House special assistant to Reagan said, "I'm very familiar with the use of investigations to politically destroy people. That they would yank a top security clearance on what seemed to be unsubstantial grounds is shocking," Reilly said.

Reilly also said he didn't think the punishment fit the crime for Lovinger, and that it appeared Lovinger committed insignificant security infractions. "There's a disproportion here that immediately raises suspicions," he said. "What was the crime and how does the punishment fit the crime?" Heather Babb, a public affairs officer who spoke on behalf of ONA stated in an email, "As a matter of policy, we do not comment on current investigations."

The David and the DOE Case -

The United States Department of Energy Inspector General, The FBI and the Pentagon's Inspector General have now been informed of over one thousand retaliation, reprisal and vendetta attacks against those who reported corruption during the Obama Administration. Another case involves a California man and his technology team.

David has been employed since 1973. He worked for his community and his country as a law enforcement and intelligence researcher (law/IC) in which he closed cases that saved Americans billions of dollars. He held numerous state and federal certifications and credentials to this effect and was certified as an investigator under the State Government at the California Office Of Consumer Affairs. He also worked as a CEO, Inventor and Product Development Director for which the U.S. Government has awarded him dozens of seminal patent awards for products in use by Microsoft, Sony and other major companies to provide products and services to billions of people. He has received a vast number of commendation letters from U.S. Presidents, Agency heads and Mayors. He is pictured in videos, photographs, articles, meetings and personal correspondence with some of the most famous public and White House figures in America.

After he, and his team, reported corruption in a trillion dollar Department of Energy embezzlement

scam involving crooked uranium (The Uranium One Scandal is now in the news headlines), lithium, indium and other mining scams, he was attacked. He reported the crimes to both the DoD and DOE Inspector Generals in the Obama Administration and got a massive number of attacks aimed at him for his efforts to help law enforcement.

The pay for his peers, and his own past compensation, started at $10,000 per month in the local technology market for those with even less hours, less patent awards, less past work reference letters and less experience than him. He has now been forced to try to live on $800.00 per month because of the attacks by government officials.

He has filed for compensation and reprisal review since 2007 and every year thereafter. He started filing lawsuits in 2009 and has been filing them against federal agencies ever since. He has received no day-in-court and no justice, yet, from those lawsuits. The law suits have simply highlighted the epic degree of stone-walling, â... missing hard-drivesâ... and obfuscation that Obama DOJ, DOE and DoD officials are willing to descend to in order to operate their cover-ups.

He and his supporters believe that he has been intentionally discriminated against as part of a reprisal. The federal courts and law enforcement have ruled in his ongoing cases, and hold proof, that he was subjected to reprisal, vendetta and revenge tactics by State and Federal employees. Even though official proof of the attacks are on public record. Nothing has been done to help him.

In the Energy Department case, his task force helped FBI, GAO and Congress hunt down and terminate well-known public officials who embezzled taxpayer funds.

Even though he has been a productive, working member of his community and the U.S. Government and he has organized companies and programs which have paid millions of dollars in taxes to that Government, he is only afforded the most minimal benefits possible and has received no offsets for the reprisal crimes committed against him.

His current benefits amount is so low it is impossible to live on. County officials have suggested he â... move to Panamaâ... where it is cheaper. Even Panama, and other third world countries, wonâ... t let you live there unless you are receiving at least $1000.00 to $1500.00 in benefits. You heard it right, Government officials are asking native-born Americans to leave the country. Did you think that the taxes you were paying were to underwrite State and Federal agencies who are trying to send natural born citizen taxpayers to third-world countries and deplete the nation of its human resources. Is THAT the â... American Dreamâ... ?

State and Federal agency officials who made tens of millions of dollars off of his losses have cost him his life savings and nearly a billion dollars of potential income by intentionally sabotaging and terminating his operating, Congressionally financed, electric car company and his national energy company because they competed with Senatorâ... s and Agency bosses business investments.

To be clear: corrupt State and Federal employees did this because his companies competed with their stock market holdings. These are the very same public officials who have interdiction capability at the very same state and federal agencies that decide the fate of his reprisal claims and work benefits. That is an epic conflict-of-interest.

These public officials, including U.S. Senators, defrauded him by asking him to invest in their program. It turns out, though, they were using his, and his groupâ... s, business ventures to cover their crimes at the expense of him and the taxpayers.

Part of his work involved creating Americaâ... s next national energy solutions. He worked with the U.S. Department of Energy, HUD, NAHB and related entities in work with the national weapons and energy labs since 2000. He worked with nuclear, heavy metals, sintered rare earth metals, extreme solvents and nano-particulated exotic chemistries and won a historical Congressional commendation, first-ever patents, industry and press acclaim, customer acclaim and a multi-million dollar lab research grant in the Congressional Iraq War Bill.

He was one of the people tasked with building Americaâ... s back-up energy technologies.

In the course of his work he, and his Team, uncovered a nearly one trillion dollar Energy Department corruption matter which led to the termination of senior staff at the U.S. Department of Energy, the FBI raid on their facilities and an ongoing FBI investigation. This also led to a suspected reprisal exposure to toxic materials which will remain in his body, at a cellular level, for the rest of his life. This also led to black-listing and HR database manipulation attacks by attack firms such as Fusion GPS, Stratfor, In-Q-Tel, Gawker, David Brock Group, PD Group, Black Cube and related contract reprisal services featured in contemporary news headlines. They were hired to poison him and his brand and â... terminateâ... him and his career (in every sense of the word).

Because of their service to their country, Adam Lovinger, David, and many others, have been denied their legal rights, their rights to a home and safety and are forced to live like refugees. Their U.S. Constitution and State Constitutional rights have been denied because they did the right thing and helped law enforcement.

The social media and independent news outlets have picked up on these kinds of cases and are doxing and exposing the corrupt politicians involved in these cover-ups. The family, friends, supporters, reporters and the public will now never let these matters lapse without a fair review. Every unbiased third-party review of this matter has concluded that these whistle-blowers â... got screwedâ... by the federal and state officials who were supposed to represent them. Those very same state and federal officials own portions of Davidâ... s competitors business and stock market ventures. In the opinion of the taxpaying public: That us a felony conflict of interest!

The FBI case files, City police case files, GAO case files, associated cases federal court files (which have already had rulings confirming the victims assertions) and Congressional investigation case files prove that government staff corruption and a system of organized vendetta campaigns are operating against these victims hundreds of their associates.

This is not about politics. Neither Lovinger nor David are associated with any political party.

This is about vendettas and revenge. The U.S. Attorney General, The Head of the White House Press Office, The Director of the FBI, The Secretary of Energy and his staff have been fired, or forced to quit, because of these cases. This is a very large matter but it is not about politics. It is about felony level crime and the physical, toxicological, emotional, reputational, brand and strategic attacks on the public by government officials who held stock market holdings in competing interests.

Senior federal and state executive government officials, and their campaign financiers at Google and Tesla Motors, ordered, operated and paid for the disabling attacks described herein and those disabling states are life-long and, indeed, disabling. These victims have been subjected to hacking; HR database rigging at Taleo, Axiom and all of the hiring computer networks; toxic poisoning, death threats; black-listing; character assassination and internet trolling and bot-attacks; benefits stone-walling, and worse. These targeted individuals, and their advisors, have asked the FBI, The GAO, The NLRB, Journalists and Congressional Investigation committees to track this next stage of their appeals because of previous conflicts of interest by state and federal reviewers and consultants in these cases. In the earlier portions of their requests for help, up to this date, most of the reviewers, judges, administrators, and consultants, providing input or rulings have been shown, by investigators, to have had a political and economic affiliation with the DNC. All of the parties that their cases has caused to be fired, arrested and otherwise terminated had a political and economic affiliation with the DNC as proven by their archived emails, social media data, photographic postings, event attendance, campaign contributions and forensic records.

Said David: "...My donation to The City of San Francisco of the Clean Tech Green community center building and my electric car company, along with my extensive spoke-person work for green energy and my help in producing the Federal Jobs Act Law would lead one to believe that I would receive support from DNC entities rather than hit-jobs. The organized crime profiteering by DNC bosses seems to have led things in another direction. Even though I have no political involvements, I have been targeted and victimized by the corrupt State and Federal officials who are seeking to run reprisals because of their embedded emotional political triggers and SEC-tracked stock market schemes..."

While Agencies has denied these conflicts, FBI/Congressional-class forensic evidence on every party who has handled the cases, so far, proves otherwise. Over 500 lawsuits and federal investigations on other peopleâ... s cases for VA, IRS (ie: The Lois Lerner Case), DOE, etc., have proven that state and federal agencies do indeed conduct illegal reprisal decisions against whistle-blowers, witnesses and others such as these folks. Now these victims are taking a harder stand. Said one: â... ...If any other participant in my review is found to have such an unreported conflict of interest, I and my associates will pursue that continued violation of my rights as a felony, with the full force of the law, the media and the public resources...â...

Tens of thousands of pages of evidence and hours of videos proving these assertions have been posted on-line by multiple journalists and investigation organizations, on multiple web site copies globally, for the convenience of the court and related investigators. The mirrors include such free peer-to-peer public web Wikiâ... s as <http://www.outloud.biz> and thousands more.

Since 2008, Government has spent ten times more taxpayer money and time delaying these cases than if they had approved the original filings in a fair review. It would seem to be a smarter bargain for the Agencies, and the taxpayers, to simply settle these matters with the victims and end these disputes.

The victims have asked the courts to correct the record and bring fairness and justice to the finalization of these cases but their cases keep getting assigned to DNC judges who have financially and administratively supported the Obama Administration.

The growing numbers of victims are determined people. They, and their associates, will pursue this forever, through the media, law enforcement and alternative means ...until it is fairly resolved.

There are now over one thousand such cases and in almost every case, the victim is receiving no help or resources from the very government agencies they sought to help.

OBAMA CAUGHT USING THE U.S. GOVERNMENT FOR REVENGE AND VENDETTA AGAINST THOUSANDS OF AMERICAN CITIZENS

Rep. Jim Jordan Reveals Context To â... Shockingâ... FISA Memo Proving Corruption At â... Highest Levelsâ... of FBI & DOJ (VIDEO)

Rep. Jim Jordan (R-OH) joined *Fox News*â... Martha MacCallum Friday night to discuss the â... shocking,â... FISA memo, revealing the report details what happened at the â... highest levels,â... of the FBI and Justice Department. In addition, the Freedom Caucus member provided important context to the memo.

Credit: Fox News

Below is a partial transcript of MacCallumâ... s interview with Jordan:

MacCallum: â... I know that you are, youâ... re all not talking about the classified information in this four page document put together by Devin Nunes, basically collates all of their investigation that he wanted all of you to see. Youâ... ve read it. Do you believe that there is a crime in there committed by the DOJ and FBI or members of those entities?â...

Jordan: â... Look, what I believe is what my colleagues have said, what Iâ... ve said is the American people need to see this. We want the journalists in this great country to see this. Mostly, we want the American people to understand what the FBI did, how wrong it was, and again, weâ... re not allowed to talk about it. The last point Ed [Henry] made was right on target. The committee could meet today, could meet tomorrow â... if the majority of the committee votes to release this â... it goes to the White House, the White House could say â... thumbs upâ... or â... thumbs downâ... . My guess is theyâ... re going to say â... thumbs upâ... and then itâ... s out there and the American people can see what took place at the highest levels of our FBI, at the highest levels of the Justice Department that should not happen in this great nation.â... [â...]

MacCallum: â... This has been compared to Watergate, which was a scandal, an election scandal of digging into another campaign, okay? Now if this is worse than that, which is what Matt Gaetz of Florida has called it, it would draw a picture of an Obama administration attempt to derail the Trump campaign. Is that whatâ... s in these four pages?â...

Jordan: â... Again, I canâ... t talk about the specifics, thatâ... s why weâ... re pushing so hard make it public so we can talk about the specifics. But think about what we knew a long time ago. The Clinton campaign paid for the dossier. Think about those text messages from Lisa Page and Peter Strzok, where they talk about â... remember the text messages where they talk about â... walking through Wal-Mart, I can smell the Trump supportersâ... â... the derision they have for the people who supported the President. The anti-Trump bias, the pro-Clinton bias and then think about the text messages that talks about an insurance policy to make sure Donald Trump is not elected by the American people.â...

As The Gateway Pundit previously reported, Fox News published a portion of the approximately 10,000 texts messages sent between FBI agent Peter Strzok and lawyer Lisa Page. Among the messages is an exchange revealing Strzok and Page discussed an â... insurance policy,â... against a Trump presidency.

Daily Caller reported:

Two FBI officials who worked on Special Counsel Robert Muellerâ... s Russia investigation exchanged text messages last year in which they appear to have discussed ways to prevent Donald Trump from being elected president.

â... I want to believe the path you threw out for consideration in Andyâ... s office â... that thereâ... s no way [Trump] gets elected â... but Iâ... m afraid we canâ... t take that risk,â... FBI counterintelligence official Peter Strzok wrote in a cryptic text message to Lisa Page, an FBI lawyer and his mistress.

â... Itâ... s like an insurance policy in the unlikely event you die before youâ... re 40,â... Strzok wrote in the text, dated Aug. 15, 2016.

While Strzok and Pageâ... s text message exchange is explosive on its own, the idea that McCabe may have been involved in this conversation is nothing short of stunning. Do you think the Deputy FBI Director would allow two employees in his office unsupervised?

Unlikely.

The House Intel panelâ... s passage of New York Republican Rep. Peter Kingâ... s motion to release the FISA abuse memo to fellow House members has rocked Washington, D.C.

Republican lawmakers have begun lobbying Intelligence Chairman Devin Nunes to release the memo.

â... Earlier this morning, I examined the classified, four-page memo from @HouseIntelComm regarding the FBI, DOJ, and the so-called #RussianCollusion. To put it simply, â... WOW.â... I joined the call to #ReleaseTheMemo. Americans deserve truth and transparency,â... tweeted Rep. Jody Hice (R-GA).

The letter was signed by Steve King, Matt Gaetz, Mark Meadows, Jim Jordan, Andy Biggs, Scott Perry, Ted Yoho, Jody Hice, Louie Gohmert, Barry Loudermilk and Brian Babin, reports Jim Hoft of The Gateway Pundit.

The documents outlining Michael Flynn's guilty plea in the Trump-Russia investigation do not allege collusion or conspiracy between the Trump campaign and Russia to influence the 2016 election. They do, however, suggest that the Obama Justice Department was intensely interested in Flynn's discussions with Russian ambassador Sergey Kislyak about policy issues â€¦ sanctions against Russia, a United Nations resolution on Israel â€¦ during the presidential transition, when Barack Obama was still in the White House and Donald Trump was preparing to take office.

At the time, top Justice officials suspected Flynn of violating the Logan Act, the 218-year-old law under which no one has ever been prosecuted, that prohibits private citizens from acting on behalf of the United States in disputes with foreign governments. Starting in the summer of 2016 and intensifying in the transition period, the Logan Act, while mostly unknown to the general public, became a hot topic of conversation among some Democrats. A number of lawmakers, former officials, and commentators called on the Obama administration to investigate the Trump team for a possible Logan Act violations â€¦ and to do it while Democrats still controlled the executive branch.

Watch Full Screen

At the same time, inside the Obama Justice Department, it appears the Logan Act became a paramount concern among some key officials in the critical weeks of December 2016 and January 2017. Former Deputy Attorney General Sally Yates has told Congress that the Logan Act was the first reason she intervened in the Flynn case â€¦ the reason FBI agents were sent to the White House to interview Flynn in the Trump administration's early days. It was that interview, held on Jan. 24, 2017, that ultimately led to Flynn's guilty plea.

In short, there's no doubt the Logan Act, a law dismissed as a joke or an archaic irrelevancy or simply unconstitutional by many legal experts, played a central role in the Obama administration's aggressive and enormously consequential investigation of its successor.

Democrats began accusing Trump of Logan Act violations in the summer of 2016, immediately after the Republican convention, when Trump sarcastically invited Russia to produce the 30,000-plus emails that Hillary Clinton deleted rather than turn over to investigators. "Russia, if you're listening, I hope you're able to find the 30,000 emails that are missing," Trump said during a July 27 news conference. "I think that you will probably be rewarded mightily by our press â€¦ let's see if that happens, that'll be nice."

The next day, Tom Vilsack, Obama's secretary of agriculture and on Hillary Clinton's vice presidential short list, accused Trump of violating the Logan Act. "That's a no-no, you can't do that," Vilsack said. "That's not legal."

Following Vilsack was Democratic Sen. Claire McCaskill. "I believe it violates the Logan Act," McCaskill said, "and I think he should be investigated for that."

House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi called Trump's statement "a treasonous act." Senate Minority Leader Harry Reid said it "borders on treason."

Harvard Law professor Laurence Tribe weighed in the next day. "The Logan Act, which was enacted back in 1799 and fundamentally says that you cannot engage in negotiations with a foreign power," Tribe told MSNBC's Lawrence O'Donnell. "It hasn't been used, but that's because we haven't had very many Donald Trumps, thank God, in our history. I think he's violated that act."

On Aug. 3, two more Democratic senators, Chris Coons and Sheldon Whitehouse, called for a hearing on Trump and the Logan Act. "Mr. Trump's comments implicate U.S. criminal laws prohibiting engagement with foreign governments that threaten the country's interests, including the Logan Act and the Espionage Act," they wrote.

On Aug. 9, Democratic Reps. Patrick Murphy, Andre Carson, and Eric Swalwell called for a House hearing to examine whether Trump violated the Logan Act, among other statutes.

In September, Rep. John Conyers, the top Democrat on the House Judiciary Committee, asked the FBI's then-director, James Comey, whether the bureau was investigating Trump for a possible violation of the Logan Act. Comey declined to answer.

At that same hearing, another Democrat, Rep. Ted Deutch, asked Comey about reports that sometime Trump foreign policy advisory board member Carter Page traveled to Moscow in July 2016. "If an American citizen, Director Comey, conducted meetings with a Russian individual who has been sanctioned by the United States about potential weakening of U.S. sanctions policy, in violation of the Logan Act, would the FBI investigate?" Deutch asked.

"I don't think it's appropriate to answer that," Comey responded.

There wasn't much public discussion of the Logan Act in October and November, as the campaign reached its final weeks and the political world dealt with the shock of Trump's victory. The subject re-emerged in December as Democrats, stunned and angry, watched Trump prepare for the presidency â... and prepare to undo many of Obama's policies.

On Dec. 8, Democratic Rep. Jared Huffman introduced the "One President at a Time Act of 2016." The bill would have amended the Logan Act to specify that a president-elect, or anyone acting on a president-elect's behalf, was specifically subject to its restrictions. The bill "just makes it explicitly clear that the president-elect is just like every other private citizen during the transition period," Huffman told MSNBC's O'Donnell. "They can't go around purporting to conduct U.S. foreign policy."

On Dec. 20, Reps. Conyers and Sheila Jackson Lee asked the Justice Department to investigate Trump for a possible violation of the Logan Act.

On Dec. 22, former Obama State Department official Wendy Sherman told MSNBC that Trump's actions on a UN resolution concerning Israeli settlements implicated the Logan Act. "People have said to me today it crosses the line of the Logan Act," Sherman said. "We have one president at a time. And Donald Trump is really playing with fire."

On the day Sherman appeared, Flynn spoke on the phone with Kislyak about that pending U.N. resolution concerning Israeli settlements. "Flynn informed the Russian ambassador about the incoming administration's opposition to the resolution, and requested that Russia vote against or delay the resolution," said the "Statement of the Offense," the Mueller document released with Flynn's guilty plea. The next day, Dec. 23, the two men spoke again and Kislyak informed Flynn that Russia would not do as the Trump team requested.

A few days later, on Dec. 29, Flynn and Kislyak spoke again, according to the Mueller statement. This time the subject was the new sanctions Obama imposed on Russia in retaliation for election meddling. Flynn "requested that Russia not escalate the situation and only respond to the U.S. sanctions in a reciprocal manner."

Two days later, on Dec. 31, Kislyak called Flynn to say that "Russia had chosen not to retaliate in response to Flynn's request."

U.S. intelligence agencies recorded the calls; Kislyak was the subject of American monitoring, so a wiretap on him on these occasions picked up Flynn, too. It appears Obama administration officials immediately saw the Flynn-Kislyak conversations as a possible Logan Act violation. They knew, of course, that given the history of the law, a Logan Act prosecution was a virtual impossibility. They knew that many foreign policy experts would see such contacts between an incoming administration and a foreign power as an acceptable and normal course of business in a presidential transition. Nevertheless, approaching the Flynn-Kislyak talks in the context of a criminal violation â€¦ the Logan Act â€¦ gave the Obama team a pretense to target Flynn, and thus the new Trump administration.

A critical moment came two weeks later, on Jan. 12, 2017, when the Washington Post's David Ignatius reported the Flynn-Kislyak calls. Ignatius said his source was a "senior U.S. government official." "What did Flynn say, and did it undercut the U.S. sanctions?" Ignatius asked. "The Logan Act (though never enforced) bars U.S. citizens from correspondence intending to influence a foreign government about 'disputes' with the United States."

It was a stunning leak; the existence and content of U.S. spy intercepts are highly, highly classified. But the Obama administration let the information out.

Ignatius' report set off a new round of media discussion about the Logan Act. That led to more action on Capitol Hill. On the same day Ignatius' column appeared, Rep. Huffman, author of the "One President at a Time Act of 2016," joined 34 other House Democrats to urge Attorney General Loretta Lynch to appoint a special counsel to investigate whether Flynn violated the Logan Act. "Our national interests require that the Logan Act be enforced, especially during the delicate and potentially vulnerable period of a presidential transition," Huffman and his colleagues wrote.

The conversation only intensified in the following days. The Logan Act was central to that conversation â€¦ in the media, and inside the Obama Justice Department.

On Jan. 24, with the new administration in office just four days, FBI agents interviewed Flynn in the White House. They questioned him about the Kislyak calls, about sanctions, about the U.N. resolution. FBI officials had a transcript of the original conversations to check Flynn's answers against, and the criminal charge against him today stems from the discrepancy between his answers and the transcript. (One of the mysteries of the whole affair is why Flynn would lie about a conversation that he, as a former top intelligence official, should have known was being recorded.)

But why did the Justice Department, run by Obama holdover Sally Yates, decide to interrogate Flynn in the first place? The answer is the Logan Act.

"Yates, then the deputy attorney general, considered Flynn's comments in the intercepted call to be 'highly significant' and 'potentially illegal,' according to an official familiar with her thinking," the Washington Post reported on Feb. 13. "Yates and other intelligence officials suspected that Flynn could be in violation of an obscure U.S. statute known as the Logan Act, which bars U.S. citizens from interfering in diplomatic disputes with another country."

In its version of the story, the New York Times reported that "Obama advisers" were concerned about the Flynn-Kislyak calls. "The Obama advisers grew suspicious that there had been a secret deal between the incoming [Trump] team and Moscow, which could violate the rarely enforced, two-century-old Logan Act barring private citizens from negotiating with foreign powers in disputes with the United States," the paper reported. The paper added that the Obama advisers asked the FBI if Flynn and Kislyak had discussed a quid pro quo, only to learn the answer was no.

So even though there was no discussion of a quid pro quo, and even though, as reported in the Post account, Yates knew there was "little chance" of actually bringing a Logan Act prosecution against Flynn â... despite all that, Yates went ahead with the questioning of Flynn. And two days after that, Yates, along with an aide, went to the White House to tell counsel Don McGahn that there was a legal problem with the national security adviser.

Yates described the events in testimony before a Senate Judiciary Committee subcommittee on May 8, 2017. She told lawmakers that the Logan Act was the first concern she mentioned to McGahn.

"The first thing we did was to explain to Mr. McGahn that the underlying conduct that Gen. Flynn had engaged in was problematic in and of itself," Yates said. That seems a clear reference to the Logan Act, although no one uttered the words "Logan Act" in the hearing at which Yates testified. "We took him [McGahn] through in a fair amount of detail of the underlying conduct, what Gen. Flynn had done."

Yates and the aide returned to the White House the next day, Jan. 27, for another talk with McGahn. McGahn asked Yates "about the applicability of certain statutes, certain criminal statutes," Yates testified. That led Sen. Chris Coons, who had called for an investigation of the Trump team for Logan Act violations months before, to ask Yates what the applicable statutes would be.

"If I identified the statute, then that would be insight into what the conduct was," Yates answered. "And look, I'm not trying to be hyper-technical here. I'm trying to be really careful that I observe my responsibilities to protect classified information. And so I can't identify the statute."

While Yates became reticent in the witness chair, the public nevertheless knows from that "official familiar with her thinking" that Yates believed Flynn might have violated the Logan Act, a suspicion she shared with other Obama administration officials.

As for another concern that Yates said she had over the Flynn-Kislyak conversations â... the worry that Flynn's lie to Vice President Mike Pence (that sanctions were not discussed on the call) would open Flynn up to possible blackmail â... perhaps that is a legitimate concern, but why did it warrant FBI questioning of Flynn under the penalty of prosecution for making false statements? Certainly Yates could have warned the White House about that without interrogating Flynn at all.

Instead, it was the prospect of a Logan Act prosecution that led to the FBI interview, which then, when Flynn lied to investigators, led to his guilty plea on a false statements charge.

From today's perspective, nearly a year later, it has become apparent that, farfetched as it might seem, the Logan Act made it possible for the Obama administration to go after Trump. The ancient law that no one has ever been prosecuted for violating was the Obama administration's flimsy pretense for a criminal prosecution of the incoming Trump team.

And by the way, when it finally came time to charge Flynn with a crime, did prosecutors, armed with the transcripts of those Flynn-Kislyak conversations, choose to charge him with violating the Logan Act? Of course not. But for the Obama team, the law had already served its purpose, months earlier, to entangle the new administration in a criminal investigation as soon as it walked in the door of the White House.

Obama's Campaign Paid $972,000 To Law Firm That Secretly Paid Fusion GPS In 2016

Since April of 2016, Obama's campaign organization has paid nearly a million dollars to the law firm that funneled money to Fusion GPS to compile a dossier of unverified allegations against Donald Trump.

29, 2017 By Sean Davis

Former president Barack Obama's official campaign organization has directed nearly a million dollars to the same law firm that funneled money to Fusion GPS, the firm behind the infamous Steele dossier. Since April of 2016, Obama For America (OFA) has paid over $972,000 to Perkins Coie, records filed with the Federal Election Commission (FEC) show.

The Washington Post reported last week that Perkins Coie, an international law firm, was directed by both the Democratic National Committee (DNC) and Hillary Clinton's campaign to retain Fusion GPS in April of 2016 to dig up dirt on then-candidate Donald Trump. Fusion GPS then hired Christopher Steele, a former British spy, to compile a dossier of allegations that Trump and his campaign actively colluded with the Russian government during the 2016 election. Though many of the claims in the dossier have been directly refuted, none of the dossier's allegations of collusion have been independently verified. Lawyers for Steele admitted in court filings last April that his work was not verified and was never meant to be made public.

OFA, Obama's official campaign arm in 2016, paid nearly $800,000 to Perkins Coie in 2016 alone, according to FEC records. The first 2016 payments to Perkins Coie, classified only as "Legal Services," were made April 25-26, 2016, and totaled $98,047. A second batch of payments, also classified as "Legal Services," were disbursed to the law firm on September 29, 2016, and totaled exactly $700,000. Payments from OFA to Perkins Coie in 2017 totaled $174,725 through August 22, 2017.

FEC records as well as federal court records show that Marc Elias, the Perkins Coie lawyer whom the Washington Post reported was responsible for the payments to Fusion GPS on behalf of Clinton's campaign and the DNC, also previously served as a counsel for OFA. In Shamblin v. Obama for America, a 2013 case in federal court in Florida, federal court records list Elias as simultaneously serving as lead attorney for both OFA and the DNC.

OFA, which managed Obama's successful re-election campaign in 2012, retooled after that campaign to focus on enacting the president's agenda during his final term in office. The group reorganized again after the 2016 election and planned to use its staff and resources to oppose President Donald Trump. During the entire 2016 campaign cycle, the group spent only $4.5 million, according to FEC records.

Federal records show that Hillary Clinton's official campaign organization, Hillary For America, paid just under $5.1 million to Perkins Coie in 2016. The DNC paid nearly $5.4 million to the law firm in 2016.

The timing and nature of the payments to Perkins Coie by Obama's official campaign arm raise significant questions about whether OFA was funding Fusion GPS, how much Obama and his team knew about the contents and provenance of the dossier long before its contents were made public, and whether the president or his government lieutenants knowingly used a partisan political document to justify official government actions targeting the president's political opponents named in the dossier. According to the Washington Post, Fusion GPS was first retained by Perkins Coie on behalf of the Democratic National Committee (DNC) and Hillary Clintonâs presidential campaign in April of 2016.

At the same time that Hillaryâs campaign, Obamaâs campaign organization, and the DNC were simultaneously paying Perkins Coie, the spouse of one of Fusion GPSâs key employees was working directly for Obama in the West Wing. Shailagh Murray, a former Washington Post reporter-turned-political operative, was serving as a top communications adviser to Obama while the Obama administration was reportedly using information from the dossier to justify secret surveillance of Trump campaign staff. Murray is married to Neil King, a former Wall Street Journal reporter who was hired by Fusion GPS in December of 2016. While at the Wall Street Journal, King worked alongside Fusion GPSâs core team, even sharing bylines with Glenn Simpson, the Fusion GPS executive who personally hired Steele to probe Trumpâs alleged Russia connections.

The importance of the dossier funded by Democrats, commissioned by Fusion GPS, and compiled by Steele, is difficult to overstate given that its contents were reportedly briefed to both President Obama and then-President-Elect Trump. The dossier was eventually published in full by BuzzFeed on January 10. On January 6, then-FBI Director James Comey had briefed Trump on the allegations in Steeleâs dossier. Steele admitted in court filings that he had shopped much of the information in his dossier to numerous media outlets beginning in September of 2016.

Fusion GPS, which has been accused of illegally operating as an undisclosed agent of foreign governments, is currently facing multiple congressional inquiries into its activities and its clients. Bill Browder, whose attorney was allegedly murdered by Russian authorities after publicizing explosive allegations of Russian fraud and money laundering, alleged in congressional testimony last July that Fusion GPS was paid by Russians to undermine U.S. sanctions against the country. Late last week, Fusion GPS reportedly struck a deal with U.S. House investigators regarding a federal subpoena of the firmâs bank records. And in September, Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa), who serves as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, reportedly requested that the U.S. Treasury Departmentâs financial crimes unit provide his committee with all suspicious activity reports related to Fusion GPSâs bank transactions.

Following reports of Perkins Coieâs role in funneling money to Fusion GPS, the Campaign Legal Center, a non-partisan campaign finance watchdog, filed a complaint with the FEC alleging that the secret funding schemes violated federal campaign disclosure laws.

Fusion GPS is also facing a separate defamation suit in federal court related to claims in the dossier. That case, which was brought by three Russian businessmen who claim to have been libeled in the Steele dossier, was filed in federal court in Washington, D.C., in early October. Fusion GPS is yet to respond to those allegations in court.

OBAMA'S WHITE HOUSE CHARACTER ASSASSINATION HIT SQUADS WERE IN CONSTANT USE

Recent Freedom of Information Act revelations show that when the Monica Lewinsky scandal happened, The White House put a senior White House adviser named Sidney Blumenthal on the job as character assassination lead. He was missioned with defaming Monica.

This is now well documented in the mainstream media and studied in university social ethics classes. I the White House, Obama's Robert Gibbs and Jay Carney are now accused of running the modern day equivalent.

While this may seem horrific for the "highest office in the land", it is more of the rule than the exception.

Some people work in the White House merely to steer hundreds of billions of dollars of taxpayer money to their friends pockets, or campaign backer/employers pockets. Campaign backers are, more often than not, insane ego-maniacal billionaires who think they are untouchable because they have bought all of the power they want.

These kinds of people ignore the law, morality or ethics and exist purely to show off to the other insane billionaires in their good ole' boys club. They will stoop to anything; a character assassination, or even a real assassination, is not out of the question for them.

The procedure uses an auxiliary unit of the White House press office. The auxiliary unit never uses official emails. They conduct their work with personal text messages, personal emails and lunch meetings. They trade access for a hatchet job article on an enemy. They maintain a direct link with tabloids, such as the Gawker Media syndicate, in order to machine gun an opponent with fake blogger comments and hit-job articles. They have "special project IT Consultants" go into the career databases at Axcion, Dun and Bradstreet, and all of the other services recruiters use, and put fake negative comments about the target so they can kill their career. They have a thousand "trade-craft" tools in their dirty war-chest. Some of them are ex CIA.

Is it illegal? VERY MUCH SO!

Can you catch them? The answer used to be no...but, now that everybody knows that every email, restaurant camera, text message and other communication system since 2001 has been recorded, logged, archived and analyzed by multiple federal agencies; maybe now you can!

How Obama White House Press Staff and Campaign Billionaires maintain a team of 'Assassins' to take out U.S. citizens they don't like?

'Wet Work' or murder-for-hire resulting in dead bodies, inside the United States, is highly frowned upon and constitutional illegal. But what if you could kill people that bugged you without causing a dead body?

The one way you can kill people, inside the United States, is called 'Character Assassination'.

This process destroys the career, brand, friends, income, savings, reputation and world of the target in such a manner that, for all intents and purposes, they are dead.

The suspicious resignations of Robert Gibbs, Jay Carney and a host of associated West Wing staff have led credence to this theory relative to timing, revelations and whistle-blower reports from former White House staff. Campaign billionaires that they answered to, are known to have paid for some of the attack campaigns.

In addition to the hit stories that are put out, all of the databases (ie: Axcion), that any hiring manager might ever use to background check you for a job application, are tainted with false information about you; and your credit rating is crashed on other databases. 'Honey Traps' are launched on you, followed by a host of other dirty tricks designed to maliciously harm you in retribution for being effective at something they don't want you to be effective at. The Snowden documents go into great detail about these human destruction techniques.

It is suspected that people that do this are hired blogger/media attackers such as [For The Obama Administration] : John Herrman, Adrian Covert, (more about him in a feature article), Patrick George ,and [for the Bush Administration] Ann Coulter, Karl Rove and Sarah Palin.

NSA tracking and special investigators have recorded and documented who did what to whom, now it is just a matter of special prosecutors and subpoenas.

The HuffPost Puts Sidney Blumenthal On Trial For Media Sins

posted by Ryan S. Jackson

Is the man who once coined the term 'vast ring wing conspiracy' now an integral part of the monster he once decried, willingly abetting a yellow journalism vendetta against Barack Obama?! Peter Drier, of the American Prospect and the Los Angeles Times (amongst others), brings forth the case against Clintonista Sidney Blumenthal:

Former journalist Sidney Blumenthal has been widely credited with coining the term 'vast right-wing conspiracy' used by Hillary Clinton in 1998 to describe the alliance of conservative media, think tanks, and political operatives that sought to destroy the Clinton White House where he worked as a high-level aide. A decade later, and now acting as a senior campaign advisor to Senator Clinton, Blumenthal is exploiting that same right-wing network to attack and discredit Barack Obama. And he's not hesitating to use the same sort of guilt-by-association tactics that have been the hallmark of the political right dating back to the McCarthy era.

Amongst the questionable media narratives Drier accuses Blumenthal of pushing (there are many, and it is a long and winding piece):

Â Obama's high school exposure to a Hawaiian Marxist poet, who Obama mentions briefly in Dreams from My Father and who has since been elevated to an Obama father-figure by hard-right press critic Cliff Kincaid.

Â The recent 'Obama as Radical Black Nationalist' narrative, and his Chicago connections to Weather Underground member William Ayers.

Â A National Review article which accuses Obama of being an integral part of Chicago machine-style politics, which notes: 'Blacks adapted to both the tribalism and the corrupt patronage politics.'

Â A plethora of different Tony Rezko stories.

Â And lest anyone forget, the circa February 'Obama as Cult Leader' narrative penned initially by Washington Post columnist Charles Krauthammer.

Hardball politics or cavorting with the enemy? Read the piece and draw your own conclusions.

Attack Dog Scumbag Sidney Blumenthal Will Hit Anybody He Is Paid To Hit

Former journalist Sidney Blumenthal has been widely credited with coining the term "vast right-wing conspiracy" used by Hillary Clinton in 1998 to describe the alliance of conservative media, think tanks, and political operatives that sought to destroy the Clinton White House where he worked as a high-level aide. A decade later, and now acting as a senior campaign advisor to Senator Clinton, Blumenthal is exploiting that same right-wing network to attack and discredit Barack Obama. And he's not hesitating to use the same sort of guilt-by-association tactics that have been the hallmark of the political right dating back to the McCarthy era.

Almost every day over the past six months, I have been the recipient of an email that attacks Obama's character, political views, electability, and real or manufactured associations. The original source of many of these hit pieces are virulent and sometimes extreme right-wing websites, bloggers, and publications. But they aren't being emailed out from some fringe right-wing group that somehow managed to get my email address. Instead, it is Sidney Blumenthal who, on a regular basis, methodically dispatches these email mudballs to an influential list of opinion shapers -- including journalists, former Clinton administration officials, academics, policy entrepreneurs, and think tankers -- in what is an obvious attempt to create an echo chamber that reverberates among talk shows, columnists, and Democratic Party funders and activists. One of the recipients of the Blumenthal email blast, himself a Clinton supporter, forwards the material to me and perhaps to others.

These attacks sent out by Blumenthal, long known for his fierce and combative loyalty to the Clintons, draw on a wide variety of sources to spread his Obama-bashing. Some of the pieces are culled from the mainstream media and include some reasoned swipes at Obama's policy and political positions.

But, rather remarkably for such a self-professed liberal operative like Blumenthal, a staggering number of the anti-Obama attacks he circulates derive from highly-ideological and militant right-wing sources such as the misnamed Accuracy in Media (AIM), The Weekly Standard, City Journal, The American Conservative, and

To cite just one recent example, Blumenthal circulated an article taken from the fervently hard-right AIM website on February 18 entitled, "Obama's Communist Mentor" by Cliff Kincaid. Kincaid is a right-wing writer and activist, a longtime critic of the United Nations, whose group, America's Survival, has been funded by foundations controlled by conservative financier Richard Mellon Scaife, the same millionaire who helped fund attacks on the Clintons during their White House years. Scaife also funds AIM, the right-wing media "watchdog" group.

The Kincaid article that Blumenthal circulated sought to discredit Obama by linking him to an African-American poet and writer whom Obama knew while he was in high school in Hawaii. That writer, Frank Marshall Davis, was, Kincaid wrote, a member of the Communist Party. Supported by no tangible evidence, Kincaid claimed that Obama considered his relationship to Davis to be "almost like a son." In his memoir, Dreams from My Father, Obama wrote about meeting, during his teenage years, a writer named "Frank" who "had some modest notoriety once" and with whom he occasionally discussed poetry and politics. From this snippet, Kincaid weaves an incredulous tale that turns Davis into Obama's "mentor."

Kincaid's piece had been previously circulating within the right-wing blogosphere, but Blumenthal sought to inject the story into more respectable opinion circles by amplifying it in his email blast.

In the same piece, Kincaid, expanding his guilt-by-association tactics, also wrote that Obama "came into contact with more far-left political forces," including former Weather Underground member William Ayers. Until a few weeks ago, Obama's tangential connection with Ayers -- whose 1960s anti-war terrorism occurred when Obama was in grade school -- was echoing among right-wing bloggers.

Some Clinton supporters who also knew about Ayers have been discreetly trying to catapult the story out of the right-wing sandbox into the wider mainstream media. On April 9, Fox News' Sean Hannity interviewed fellow right-winger Karl Rove, who raised the Ayers-Obama connection. The next day, ABC News reporter Jake Tapper wrote about Ayers in his Political Punch blog. The following week, on his radio show, Hannity suggested to his guest, George Stephanopoulos, that he ask Obama about his relationship with Ayers at the upcoming Philadelphia presidential debate. Stephanopoulos, who was Bill Clinton's press secretary, replied, "Well, I'm taking notes." The following night during the April 16 nationally televised Presidential debate, Stephanopoulos dutifully asked Obama about Ayers, who is now a professor of education at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

One can only speculate how much influence Blumenthal did or did not have in elevating the Ayers story into the mainstream media and into the national political debate. What is certain is that Blumenthal sought to keep this classic red-baiting controversy alive.

Blumenthal's April 24 email dispatch featured a two-year old article by Sol Stern, published in City Journal, sponsored by the right-wing Manhattan Institute. The article, from the journal's Summer 2006 issue, doesn't mention Obama. Why would Blumenthal resurrect it now? The article, entitled "The Ed Schools' Latest--and Worst--Humbug," was, instead, a frontal attack on Ayers' views on educational theory and policy. Blumenthal obviously wasn't trying to offer enlightenment on educational policy or Obama's positions on school reform as much as he was presumably trying to keep Ayers' name, and his controversial past, in the public eye.

As a follow-up punch, Blumenthal again dipped directly into the "vast right wing conspiracy" by retrieving and circulating an article from the current issue of National Review -- the staunchly conservative opinion journal founded by William F. Buckley. The piece, titled "The Obama Way," was penned by Fred Siegel who, like Sol Stern, is a former 60s leftist who has moved to the opposite end of the political spectrum, serving at one point as a political advisor to Rudy Giuliani. Siegel's piece links Obama to corrupt Chicago machine politics, observing that "Blacks adapted to both the tribalism and the corrupt patronage politics" of Chicago's

Democratic Party. In the process, he manages to throw in as many spurious ad hominem attacks on Obama as he can, calling him a "friend of race-baiters" and a "man who would lead our efforts against terrorism yet was friendly with Bill Ayers, the unrepentant 1960s terrorist."

When Blumenthal worked in the White House, a big thorn in Bill Clinton's side was the Weekly Standard, the right-wing magazine edited by William Kristol and owned by Rupert Murdoch. But in mid-February, Blumenthal's email attack featured an article, "Republicans Root for Obama," written by Weekly Standard executive editor and Fox News talking head Fred Barnes. That same month, Blumenthal also offered up a piece by Scott McConnell, titled "Untested Savior," that appeared in The American Conservative (a magazine founded by Pat Buchanan) claiming that Obama "would probably lead them [Democrats] to disaster in November."

When Blumenthal isn't relying directly on anti-Obama smears from the extreme right, he's pumping up more traditionally sourced material, from the Washington Post, New Republic, and other publications, to question and damage Obama's character and electability. On several occasions, Blumenthal has circulated articles from the Chicago Sun Times and the Chicago Tribune about Obama's ties to developer Tony Rezko, a relationship Obama has said he regrets. In one email, Blumenthal wrote: "The record on Obama's fabled 'judgement'? So how would he conduct himself in those promised summits without preconditions with Ahmadinejad, Kim Jong Il, Chavez, Castro, and Assad? Let's look at how he did with Tony Rezko."

Earlier this year, one theme pushed by Clinton supporters and buoyed by Blumenthal's efforts, was that Obama's appeal was similar to that of a messianic cult leader. Obama's capacity to inspire people was reframed as a kind of malevolent force, as though his followers would somehow willingly drink poisoned Kool-Aid if Obama so demanded. In his February 7 Time magazine column, "Inspiration vs. Substance," writer Joe Klein, who, like Blumenthal, worked on the Boston alternative paper, The Real Paper, in the 1970s, wrote: "There was something just a wee bit creepy about the mass messianism -- 'We are the ones we've been waiting for' -- of the Super Tuesday speech and the recent turn of the Obama campaign." That same morning, Blumenthal sent the Klein column to his email list. Later that day, in his Political Punch blog, ABC News reporter Jake Tapper wrote, "The Holy Season of Lent is upon us. Can Obama worshippers try to give up their Helter-Skelter cultish qualities for a few weeks?" (Update: In response to OffTheBus, Tapper is categorical in denying that he in any way relied upon Blumenthal or was influenced by Blumenthal in the production or in the writing of this story or his reports on William Ayers or the Obama "cult")

The following day, in the Los Angeles Times, columnist Joel Stein wrote: "Obamaphilia has gotten creepy. What the Cult of Obama doesn't realize is that he is a politician."

After this idea had bounced around the media echo chamber for a few days, the liberal watchdog group Media Matters for America, run by David Brock, posted a summary on February 8 of the sudden outbreak of "cult" references about Obama. It was headlined: "Media figures call Obama supporters' behavior 'creepy,' compare them to Hare Krishna and Manson followers." The next day, Blumenthal sent the Media Matters piece to his email list. A few days later, the New York Times' Paul Krugman, a Clinton supporter, weighed in with a column, "Hate Springs Eternal," in which he wrote, "I'm not the first to point out that the Obama campaign seems dangerously close to a cult of personality." Nor would he be the last. Four days later, Washington Post columnist Charles Krauthammer, an arch conservative, penned a column entitled, "The Audacity of Selling Hope" in which he simply quoted Klein, Tapper, Stein, and Krugman.

One of Blumenthal's associates scoffs at the notion that there's anything vaguely conspiratorial about these emails and that a number of the people on the list-serve are also the authors of the pieces he sends out. "They're just Sid's friends," he told me. This is, in fact, the very definition of an echo chamber. People in the opinion-shaping business also seek to influence other opinion-makers, who then bounce their ideas through their overlapping outlets -- newspapers, magazines, talk shows, websites, blogs, and social and political fundraising circles. The connections are so incestuous that it's hard to untangle where the "feedback loop" begins and ends.

Among those whose names show up as recipients of Blumenthal's emails are writers and journalists Craig Unger, Edward Jay Epstein, Thomas Edsall (Politics Editor of the Huffington Post), Joe Conason, Gene Lyons (Arkansas Democrat-Gazette columnist and author of The Hunting of the President: The Ten Year Campaign to Destroy Bill and Hillary Clinton), John Judis, Eric Alterman, Christine Ockrent, David Brock, Reza Aslan, Harold Evans, and Josh Marshall; academics and think tankers Todd Gitlin (Columbia U sociologist), Karen Greenberg (NYU law school), Sean Wilentz (Princeton historian), Michael Lind, William M. Drozdiak, and Richard Parker; and former Clinton administration officials John Ritch, James Rubin, Derek Shearer, and Joe Wilson.

Not all of Blumenthal's recipients, or those who, like me, receive the emails second-hand, are Clinton supporters.

Before and after his service in the Clinton White House, Blumenthal wrote for the New Yorker, New Republic, Washington Post, the Guardian, and Salon, where he was often accused of engaging in partisan journalism.

In the Clinton administration, Blumenthal was primarily a behind-the-scenes strategist, but often found himself speaking in front of the cameras and on the record. In both roles, he was known as a committed Clintonista who played hardball. He's demonstrated those same traits since joining Hillary's campaign as a senior advisor last November.

Presidential politics can get down and dirty, and Blumenthal is a master at the game. Some Obama supporters might even wish that his campaign would resort to similar tactics. If it did, there would be no shortage of anti-Hillary screeds by the "vast right-wing conspiracy" activists and writers, such as surfacing the photo of Rev. Jeremiah Wright with Bill Clinton at a prayer breakfast at the White House in 1998, invited by the president in the midst of his Lewinsky scandal. Indeed, the right-wingers probably hate Hillary more than they dislike Obama.

Obama Ordered FBI Coverup of Spy Gate

New text messages between Peter Strzok and Lisa Page reveal that the entire Spy Gate conspiracy to derail the Trump Campaign was run from the White House.

In order to cover their tracks, Barack Obama and White House Adviser Valerie Jarrett ordered senior FBI and DOJ officials, including disgraced former FBI Director Jim Comey and disgraced former Attorney General Loretta Lynch to start emailing each-other with messages that would give the appearance that the White House had nothing to do with the mission to spy on the Trump Campaign, dubbed â... Operation Crossfire Hurricaneâ... .

For several months, Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein has tried to hold back the text messages from congress, fearing that their release might spark an uproar. After threats from Congressman Devin Nunes (R-CA) to impeach Rosenstein and FBI Director Chris Wray, the text messages were turned over with what the Department of Justice calls â... narrowly tailoredâ... redactions.

Following the latest Spy Gate revelations, calls for Obamaâ... s impeachment have stormed Twitter and Facebook from enraged conservatives and concerned democrats.

Obama's Retributions: Obama Had His FBI Take Personal Info From Citizens of 14 States, Exposed It To Russia

WASHINGTON â€¦ Former president Barack Obamaâ€™s Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) under James Comey made secret agreements with fourteen state attorneys general to obtain personal identifying information on all private citizens and residents in those states. The information was used directly by the Obama White House, through its White House Special Surveillance Group led by Obama, James Comey, and Andrew McCabe.

This personal identifying information from millions of American citizens â€¦ including more than 50 million photographs obtained from Facebook and gas-station surveillance cameras for facial recognition â€¦ was then exposed to Russian hackers by a French contractor that snuck Russian code into FBI biometric data, according to top national security sources and published reports.

House Oversight Committee information yet to be published but reviewed by Big League Politics shows that the Obama FBI entered into secret agreements with fourteen (14) different states to tap all of its personal identifying information (one such secret contract, forged between Obamaâ€™s deputy FBI director and the attorney general in North Dakota, is presented below). A previous Government Accountability Office (GAO) published report states that the FBI entered into agreements with seven states as of 2015 and was seeking to add more, and that the FBI was allowed to tap the state-level facial recognition software programs of sixteen total states.

The FBI under Obama and Comey, during the 2016 election, launched an attempt to formally exempt all of its biometric facial recognition and fingerprint-analysis programs from the Privacy Act to prevent citizens from being able to sue. Meanwhile, James Comeyâ€™s top deputy at the FBI David Cuthbertson lied about the existence of the program in an interview with â€¦ Sixty Minutes.â€¦

Trending: EXCLUSIVE: Trump Picked 7 GOP Lawmakers To Go To Russia To â€¦ Test Them.â€¦ Are They Deep State Agents? Two Senators FAILED The Test!

Government documents show the full scope and vision of â€¦ SpyGateâ€¦ as enacted by top Obama administration officials for more than a decade.

The vision of â€¦ Lifelog,â€¦ later known as â€¦ Citizen Log,â€¦ was created back in 2004 when Deputy Attorney General Comey with then FBI Director Mueller began to create the solid foundations to penetrate the consumer markets to start collecting data-mining data. Their memorandums of understanding (MOUâ€™s) had stipulations like this:

Robert Mueller even threatened to resign along with Comey if the Bush administration didnâ€™t agree that wire tapping was â... Constitutional.â... Basically, Mueller and Comey bullied then-President George W. Bush to violate privacy rights of citizens. It all went downhill from there, but the plan was in motion. In 2005, Comey left and moved over to Lockheed. The Lockheed CEO then went on to become CEO of L3-Communications one of the leaders in transcription/foreign language contracting globally.

Here is the Timeline put together by the Government Accountability Office (GAO).

This Timeline shows that the Department of Justice approved major new FBI personal identification surveillance programs in June 2008, at the tail end of the Bush presidency. President Obamaâ... s FBI started collecting and transferring the â... facial imagesâ... and other records in 2010, then added new programs including an â... Interstate Photo Systemâ... and a â... FACEâ... program, which stands for â... Facial Analysis, Comparison, and Evaluation.â... The programs were fully operational under Obama by April 2015.

In order to obtain all of these photographs and pieces of personal identifying information, the Obama FBI under James Comey had to make secret agreements with state attorneys general around the country. Fourteen (14) states ended up signing away the privacy rights of all their citizens and residents.

The GAO reported in 2016 in a published official report \(emphasis added\):

â... The Department of Justiceâ... s (DOJ) Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) operates the Next Generation Identification-Interstate Photo System (NGI-IPS)â... a face recognition service that allows law enforcement agencies to search a database of over 30 million photos to support criminal investigations. NGI-IPS users include the FBI and selected state and local law enforcement agencies, which can submit search requests to help identify an unknown person using, for example, a photo from a surveillance camera. When a state or local agency submits such a photo, NGI-IPS uses an automated process to return a list of 2 to 50 possible candidate photos from the database, depending on the userâ... s specification. As of December 2015, the FBI has agreements with 7 states to search NGI-IPS, and is working with more states to grant access. In addition to the NGI-IPS, the FBI has an internal unit called Facial Analysis, Comparison and Evaluation (FACE) Services that provides face recognition capabilities, among other things, to support active FBI investigations. FACE Services not only has access to NGI-IPS, but can search or request to search databases owned by the Departments of State and Defense and 16 states, which use their own face recognition systems. Biometric analysts manually review photos before returning at most the top 1 or 2 photos as investigative leads to FBI agentsâ...!

Local, state, federal, and tribal law enforcement agencies can be authorized to submit face recognition searches for law enforcement purposes. From the beginning of the pilot in December 2011 through December 2015, the number of search requests by states ranged from under 20 by one state to over 14,000 by another state.â...

Big League Politics has exclusively obtained documents, presented below, showing that Comeyâ... s FBI was storing facial-recognition and DMV records of private citizens, and that Comeyâ... s assistant director David Cuthbertson lied about it on television just four days after signing the agreement.

On May 15, 2013, Cuthbertson entered an agreement with the North Dakota Attorney Generalâ... s Office. The official in that office who signed off on the deal, Dallas Carlson, is now President Trumpâ... s nominee to be U.S. Marshall. This agreement was a Memorandum of Understanding between the two agencies that the Attorney General would be providing all DMV photos and other Personal Identifying Information (PII) to the FBI to store and house on their database. Other state attorneys general refused to enter the agreement, with Vermontâ... s attorney general in December 2017 calling the program â... illegal.â...

Please examine the date of the agreement. Now look at what they agree to exchange.

When whistleblower Edward Snowden released his tell all he referred to something in code named #LifeLog. The program's name was changed to FBI FACE SERVICES, which is also called #CitizenLog.

There was an uproar in early 2013 when a secret unit created by President Obama in 2010 called the High Value Intelligence Group (HVIC) became public knowledge. According to insiders, the HVIC members and directors included Robert Mueller, James Comey, Christopher Wray, H.R. McMaster, Rod Rosenstein, Andrew McCabe, David Cuthbertson, and many more FBI officials and intel components that reported directly to President Obama. This group was centrally involved in spying on private citizens. Insiders also believe that Jeff Sessions was involved with the HVIC.

Americans were in uproar that their rights to privacy were being violated because the FBI was proposing to get access to DMV photos and other personal identifying information from their state to house in a searchable database. The ACLU was briefly involved but mysteriously stopped being involved.

David Cuthbertson was the brain child of FBI FACE SERVICES and Comey was promoted from the HVIC to Director of the FBI, with Cuthbertson as Comey's Assistant Director to the FBI, in 2013.

David Cuthbertson was interviewed by Lesley Stahl on or around May 19, 2013 during a 60 Minutes segment. In the segment, he was firm and strong on stating that the FBI DOES NOT have any photos or Private Identifying Information except from whatever information is collected if you are ever arrested. Mug shot, DNA, info collected then and there at the crime scene only. The video is very convincing and it looks like the FBI is honest right?

HERE IS THE VIDEO: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=z1y9xtjL8rI&feature=youtu.be>

Now we know definitively that Cuthbertson was lying. That interview was FOUR DAYS after the FBI signed the agreement above with North Dakota.

During her written testimony to the House Oversight Committee, Jennifer Lynch, Senior Legal Counsel at www.eff.org stated:

â... As of December 2017, NGI included more than 74 million biometric records in the criminal repository and over 57.5 million records in the civil repository. By the end of fiscal year 2016, it also already contained more than 51 million civil and criminal photographs searchable through face recognition.â...

â... Without transparency, accountability, and proper security protocols in place, face recognition systemsâ... like many other searchable databases of information available to law enforcementâ... may be subject to misuse. This misuse has already occurred in other contexts,â... Lynch testified, citing her paper â... Face Off: Law Enforcement Use of Face Recognition Technology.â...

A state audit in Minnesota found that half of police officers misused access to Driving License Records.

In North Dakota, estimates find that over 95% of law enforcement officers check plates and or licenses at their discretion especially when they are out on patrol and with their new â... License plateâ... readers.

The Russians Obtained This Personal Information Of American Citizens

We report this information as the mainstream media finally acknowledges that Russians obtained personal information from the American people. The mainstream media even acknowledged that the FBI exposed personal identifying information to the Russians â... but without discussing Obamaâ... s secret program or the extent of the Obama administrationâ... s spying on the American people.

CNNâ... s Jake Tapper aired a segment Wednesday reporting that the Russian Mail.Ru, which is closely linked to Vladimir Putin, obtained â... millionsâ... of Americansâ... personal identifying information in part through Facebook.

The Russians hacked into all of the Obama FBIâ... s biometric data on facial recognition and fingerprints through a French contractor that snuck Russian code into the program.

Buzzfeed reporter Chris Hamby reported in December 2017, in a piece headlined â... FBI Software For Analyzing Fingerprints Contains Russian-Made Code. Whistleblowers Sayâ... :

â... The fingerprint-analysis software used by the FBI and more than 18,000 other US law enforcement agencies contains code created by a Russian firm with close ties to the Kremlin, according to documents and two whistleblowers. The allegations raise concerns that Russian hackers could gain backdoor access to sensitive biometric information on millions of Americans, or even compromise wider national security and law enforcement computer systems.

The Russian code was inserted into the fingerprint-analysis software by a French company, said the two whistleblowers, who are former employees of that company. The firm â... then a subsidiary of the massive Paris-based conglomerate Safran â... deliberately concealed from the FBI the fact that it had purchased the Russian code in a secret deal, they saidâ...!

The Russian company whose code ended up in the FBIâ... s fingerprint-analysis software has Kremlin connections that should raise similar national security concerns, said the whistleblowers, both French nationals who worked in Russia. The Russian company, Papillon AO, boasts in its own publications about its close cooperation with various Russian ministries as well as the Federal Security Service â€¦ the intelligence agency known as the FSB that is a successor of the Soviet-era KGB and has been implicated in other hacks of US targets.â€¦

Obama Spent Thirty Million Dollars, Per Person, Trying To Destroy The Lives Of Taxpaying Citizens Who Questioned His White House

By ProPublica Writers Group

We spoke with numerous U.S. citizens in New York, San Francisco, Seattle, and a host of other major American cities, who had hit-jobs put on them by Barack Obama and his Administration.

The pattern was the same in each case: A taxpayer would file a formal complaint about a criminally corrupt incident undertaken by Obamaâ€™s senior staff. No official action would be taken on the complaint but suddenly a series of state-sponsored attacks would happen to each of the taxpayers who reported the incident. Our investigation sourced hard evidence proving that every victim did, indeed, file a complaint with formal authorities. We found that every agency, under the Obama Administration, took no significant action on these complaints. We found that the series of attacks on each victim did begin immediately after each complaint was filed and that the compensation paid to the operators of 98% of those attacks came from White House financiers of the Obama Administration or, through circuitous routes, from the White House itself.

Why would Obama have turned out to be such a vindictive bully?

In hindsight, it seems that Obamaâ€™s presidency was always hanging by a thread of cover-ups. Silicon Valley, Chicago politi-mobsters and main stream news cartels controlled by the DNC had rigged Obama into office based on epic promises of crony payola kick-backs. As Obamaâ€™s Solyndra and Afghan profiteering schemes blew up along with his Russian billionaire mining schemes and the Podesta-Wasserman madness, the whole Obama White House realized they could all disappear in one big Watergate-class revelation at any moment. As has now been revealed in other news stories, Obama has been caught following Joe Rhodes advice to engage in the allowance of drug deals and other criminal Middle East activities in order to gain momentary â€¦ agreementsâ€¦ on Iran and Syria at the cost of decades-long corruption which followed. Attorney General Eric Holder was in charge of running cover-ups for Obama and he could barely keep his head above water. Voted the â€¦ *most corrupt Attorney General in U.S. History*â€¦ and being the recipient of the biggest Contempt of Congress indictment had put him on the hot seat.

This put Obama in a daily state of fear of being exposed for running a sham Presidency created exclusively to kick cash back to Chicago and Silicon Valley Cartels.

Obama created and ballooned the Washington DC Hit Job Culture of vendetta, Omerta, reprisal, retribution and revenge into the dirtiest business in town.

Thanks to Obama and his friends the services that kill people, or destroy their lives for The White House, have been exposed. They include Fusion GPS, Stratfor, In-Q-Tel, Gawker, David Brock Group, Podesta Group, Black Cube, Wilson Sonsini, Perkins Coie, Think Progress, New America Foundation, Covington and Burling, Media Matters, Mossad, GCQH, and over 40 other entities who broke the laws and the limits of morality in pure revenge operations.

Even Obamaâ€™s FBI has now been exposed running cover-ups and attacks on the public.

What did these attacks consist of?

The following incidents are common across the case files of all of the citizen-victims:

- Bribery of contracting officers and agents to damage competitors and only award government contracts, tax waivers, loans and grants to victims competitors while defunding the victims government contracts.
- Internet server manipulation and website spoofing. Manipulation of DNC-controlled PayPal online payment transaction systems to cut off competitors revenue.

- Job database manipulation and slander on Taleo, Axcion and other HR databases to cut off employment options for competitors or witnesses
- Hacking of victims devices
- Theft of patent materials and government financed flooding of the market to kill victims revenue opportunities.
- Threats and possible murders of whistle-blowers
- Ordering crony's and allies to black-list victims in The National Venture Capital Association and banking groups in order to prevent their further funding.
- Bribery of public officials to direct funds and contracts to victims competitors (which those public officials owned) and away from victims competing products
- Production of media character assassination campaigns in New York Times, Gawker and Gizmodo Media and Media Matters.
- Embezzlement of taxpayer dollars and crony cross-over deals to conduit that cash to Silicon Valley campaign financiers.
- Placement of sabotage moles, working for Obama, in victims companies to sabotage victims plans and report internal data to competitors
- DNC Honey traps on OKCupid, Seeking Arrangements, Tinder, Match.com and other dating sites.
- DNS re-routing, spoofing and search dead-ending of all internet connections of victims businesses.
- Deletions of all marketing of victims businesses on DNC-controlled Google, Facebook, and Juniper Networks and Cisco server devices.
- and much more...

In one case, the attackers contracted character assassination articles in the DNC's Gawker Media tabloids and then called the HR office of the victims employer and said: "hey look at this, this guy works for you" and got them fired the same day without explanation. The attackers then posted negative links in all of the HR database services so the victim would have a hard time getting new work.

In other cases victims were exposed to toxic substances which killed some and permanently disabled others. Fusion GPS, Stratfor, Sandline, Black Cube and such services quoted us an average fee of $30M to produce these attacks per individual. We pretended to be inquiring for a DNC affiliated entity. They were seemingly matter-of-fact about it.

It was just another job to them.

An "instruction manual" for some of the attacks is shown below. The victims experienced all of these tactics being used against them:

Obama Used The Espionage Act To Go After Whistleblowers More Than All Previous Admins Combined

Written by K. Walker

The Media(D) is very concerned that President Trump wants the whistleblower named. Well, at least heâs not using the Espionage Act against him.

It seems reasonable that the name of the man who has triggered the official impeachment inquiry be made public so that we can see his possible bias and ensure transparency in the process. After all, the intention is to remove the sitting President from office or stop his reelection. It is vital that the American public has complete information before the 2020 election.

It has been reported that the whistleblower was contacting Rep. Adam Schiff(D-CA) and his staff ahead of filing his complaint, which makes the entire thing look sketchy. Add to that the suspected whistleblower, Eric Ciaramella, is an Obama holdover and Biden-supporter who worked closely with Joe Biden, as well as working under Susan Rice and John Brennan. Ciaramella is a registered Democrat and is a CIA analyst specializing in Ukraine and Russia.

When Ciaramella was in the Obama administration, he was the Ukraine director on the National Security Council, then was briefly the acting senior director for European and Russian affairs before being reassigned from his job in the West Wing early in the Trump administration after being suspected of negative leaks.

Trending: Antifa Tinkerpots Donât Want Their Pics Shared â So, Letâs Share Them Far-N-Wide

Breitbart reports that Ciaramella was included in the email chain that eventually led to the $1 billion loan guarantee that Biden was talking about holding back unless Ukraine fired their top prosecutor who was looking into Burisma at the time. It also appears that Ciaramella had a hand in pushing the anti-Trump dossier by Fusion GPS that sparked the Russian Collusion narrative and triggered the Mueller investigation. He had invited Alexandra Chalupa, one of the DNC operatives digging up dirt on Trump in 2016, to the White House for meetings.

So, he looks like a partisan hack with a clear bias against President Trump. Why not let the man come forward and rebut the claims against him?

Youâd think that the Dems would want to make sure that the impeachment inquiry process was unassailable. Youâd also think that the Media(D) would be a bit more interested in looking into who the whistleblower is, but, alas, no.

Congressman Adam Schiff has claimed that President Trump wants to punish the whistleblower.

All of this concern for simply naming this one whistleblower and sussing out his possible bias is pretty rich considering what the previous administration did to whistleblowers â they went after them with the Espionage act.

Check it out:

I can hear the critics now: That's CBN an obviously biased source.

Alrighty.

How about Jake Tapper's own words in March 2016 when he reiterated the factoid about the Obama admin's use of the Espionage Act against whistleblowers after then-President Obama was lecturing the media for not holding presidential candidates accountable? The Washington Free Beacon noted that Barry scolded the press for enabling a candidate like Donald Trump.

The whole thing is pretty rich considering Jay Carney said that when classified information is leaked, that is a violation of the law... unless your name is Hillary Rodham Clinton, apparently.

Does PolitiFact rating the claim as True hold any sway?

Would the leftwing Democracy Now! work as another source? Should I mention that the segment interviewing Thomas Drake, an NSA whistleblower, also includes a clip of Jake Tapper who was the White House correspondent for ABC News questioning Jay Carney about prosecuting whistleblowers?

What about PBS News Hour reporting on the Obama administration's transparency and citing that the targeting of whistleblowers was a massive problem?

Stephen Engelberg of ProPublica said:

Hmmm...! does it look like the level of concern over the whistleblower is directly linked to the political affiliation of the administration that they are blowing the whistle on?

It sure looks that way to me.

There should be an investigation of Obama's last minute executive order allowing collected intelligence to be sent freely between bureaus. This info was collected from the NSA, collected through Susan Rice, given to FBI black hats who then leaked to the media Flynn's phone call with the Russian ambassador. No way such a thing should have been possible without Obama's fuckery. Trump should rescind that EO.

You think any of this could have been used to gather tax info for the IRS or to blackmail a supreme court justice? Or other weird stuff? Cause it could explain some historical thingies.

The FISA Court also announced the end of the practice of searching for communications about a US person.

It appears from this decision that what the NSA used to be able to do was collect all communications referencing a US person, for example, everyone who used â... Donald Trumpâ... in a text message. Now the searches are (presumably) limited to communications to or from the person, not communications which merely mention that person. You can see how this would make a huge difference!

Here is a simple solution to all of this.

An oversight body requests information. You have 30 days to product that information. If the information is not produced, the head(s) of the department go to jail on contempt charges until the data is released.

Problem solved.

Obama admin spent $36M on lawsuits to keep info secret and hide from transparency

POLITICS

AP President Obama gives a final press conference of 2016.

WASHINGTON -- The Obama administration in its final year in office spent a record $36.2 million on legal costs defending its refusal to turn over federal records under the Freedom of Information Act, according to an Associated Press analysis of new U.S. data that also showed poor performance in other categories measuring transparency in government.

For a second consecutive year, the Obama administration set a record for times federal employees told citizens, journalists and others that despite searching they couldn't find a single page of files that were requested.

And it set records for outright denial of access to files, refusing to quickly consider requests described as especially newsworthy, and forcing people to pay for records who had asked the government to waive search and copy fees.

The government acknowledged when challenged that it had been wrong to initially refuse to turn over all or parts of records in more than one-third of such cases, the highest rate in at least six years.

In courtrooms, the number of lawsuits filed by news organizations under the Freedom of Information Act surged during the past four years, led by the New York Times, Center for Public Integrity and The Associated Press, according to a litigation study by the Transactional Records Access Clearinghouse at Syracuse University. The AP on Monday settled its 2015 lawsuit against the State Department for files about Hillary Clinton's time as secretary of state, at AP's request, and received $150,546 from the department to cover part of its legal fees.

The AP has pending lawsuits against the FBI for records about its decision to impersonate an AP journalist during a criminal investigation and about who helped the FBI hack into a mass shooting suspect's iPhone and how much the government paid to do it.

Of the $36.2 million in legal costs fighting such lawsuits last year, the Justice Department accounted for $12 million, the Homeland Security Department for $6.3 million and the Pentagon for $4.8 million. The three departments accounted for more than half the government's total records requests last year.

The figures reflect the final struggles of the Obama administration during the 2016 election to meet President Barack Obama's pledge that it was "the most transparent administration in history," despite wide recognition of serious problems coping with requests under the information law. It received a record 788,769 requests for files last year and spent a record $478 million answering them and employed 4,263 full-time FOIA employees across more than 100 federal departments and agencies. That was higher by 142 such employees the previous year.

A spokesman for former President Obama did not immediately respond to an email request for comment late Monday. The White House under Obama routinely defended its efforts under the information law in recent years and said federal employees worked diligently on such requests for records.

It remains unclear how President Donald Trump's administration will perform under the Freedom of Information Act or other measures of government transparency. Trump has not spoken extensively about transparency. In his private business and his presidential campaign, Trump required employees and advisers to sign non-disclosure agreements that barred them from discussing their work. His administration has barred some mainstream news organizations from campaign rallies and one White House press briefing. And Trump broke with tradition by refusing to disclose his tax returns.

Trump's secretary of state, Rex Tillerson, is traveling to Asia this week on a small plane without a contingent of journalists or a designated pool reporter who would send reports to the broader diplomatic press corps, departing from 50 years of practice.

Overall, in the final year of Obama's administration, people who asked for records last year under the law received censored files or nothing in 77 percent of requests, about the same as the previous year. In the first full year after Obama's election, that figure was only 65 percent of cases. The government released the new figures in the days ahead of Sunshine Week, which ends Sunday, when news organizations promote open government and freedom of information.

Under the records law, citizens and foreigners can compel the U.S. government to turn over copies of federal records for zero or little cost. Anyone who seeks information through the law is generally supposed to get it unless disclosure would hurt national security, violate personal privacy or expose business secrets or confidential decision-making in certain areas.

Obama was a sociopath Chicago gangster vindictive bully who used the highest office in the land to put hit-jobs on those who tried to expose his corruption.

His family spent millions of taxpayer dollars on shopping trips, partying and concert going.

He had a manic devotion to men who wanted to cut their penises off and promoted sex-change perks for the mentally ill men who wanted them.

He flooded America with inbred immigrants under the delusional theory that immigrants will vote for Democrats and increase our voting numbers.

He allowed Google to run his White House even though Google people turned out to be racist, misogynist, frat house, sex abusers.

He based his Administration on quid-pro-quo crony corruption kick-back deals.

He traded U.S. Department of Energy, Department of Transportation and National Security Agency contracts, grants, loans and jobs to Silicon Valley monopolies in exchange for campaign financing, stock warrants and campaign search engine rigging.

Weeks after The Hill revealed a \$750,000 scheme by California woman's rights attorney Lisa Bloom to compensate women accusing Donald Trump of sexual misconduct - one of whom had her mortgage paid off after Trump ignored her pleas to become his makeup-artist during the campaign - the New York Times claims in a bombshell report that DNC operative and Media Matters founder David Brock, along with major Hillary Clinton friend and donor, Susie Tompkins Buell, steered $700,000 towards Bloom's efforts to smear Trump with sexual misconduct claims right before the 2016 election.

As the NYT notes, several donors reached out to Ms. Bloom â... asking how they could help." She told them that she was working with â... a few other womenâ... who might "find the courage to speak out" against Mr. Trump if the donors would provide funds for security, relocation and possibly a safe house."

Ms. Bloom would not identify the donors. But two Democrats familiar with the arrangements said a nonprofit group founded by Mr. Brock, American Bridge 21st Century Foundation, gave $200,000, while the fashion entrepreneur Susie Tompkins Buell, a major donor to Mr. Brockâ... s suite of groups, gave $500,000 to Ms. Bloomâ... s firm for the last-ditch effort.

Democrats familiar with the financial arrangements told the NYT that Bloom's firm kept the money from Brock's American Bridge, while refunding the money from Buell - a longtime friend and financial supporter of Hillary Clinton.

Of note, Brock previously sat on the board of Hillary Clinton super PAC Priorities USA Action, and his group "Correct the Record" sunk over $1 million into a digital task force called "Barrier Breakers 2016," which had a mandate to "engage in online messaging for both Secretary Clinton and to push back against attackers on social media (The Atlantic)." Meanwhile, Brock's Correct The Record defended coordinating with the Clinton campaign and contributing $6 million to fund Hillary.

"Correct the Record is a $6 million Washington D.C.-based political committee that spends millions on opposition research, message development, surrogate training and booking, professional video production, and press outreach for the benefit of the Clinton campaign... and by its own admission, does so in full coordination with the Clinton campaign," the Campaign Legal Center said in the complaint. -Free Beacon

The Trump accusers include makeup-artist Jill Harth and Katie Johnson. Harth - who allowed a Lisa Bloom donor to pay off her mortgage before she accused President Trump of sexual assault, approached the Trump campaign about doing Donald Trump's makeup, was rejected, and later cropped up as an accuser shortly before the 2016 election. Another Trump accuser, Katie Johnson fabricated a story of Trump raping her when she was 13 at one of billionaire pedophile Jeffrey Epstein's notorious 'sex parties.' Johnson, another client of Lisa Bloom, withdrew her case against Trump days before the election, while the Daily Mail reported that she made it all up.

Brock is no stranger to meddling in Trump's affairs to try and influence the 2016 election - having spearheaded an army of Correct the Record "nerd virgins" who were "crammed into a newsroom-style bullpen in the back corner of the offices of American Bridge 21st Century" to attack then-candidate Donald Trump while vehemently defending Hillary Clinton. Various Brock-linked anti-Trump groups Media Matters, ShareBlue, American Bridge and Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington (CREW) set a $40 million budget to fight Trump at the beginning of 2017.

Brock is also no stranger to funneling money to people - once having paid $850,000 to a former domestic partner of over 10 years after he began dating D.C. pizza restaurant impresario James Alefantis. Brock's scorned partner, William Grey, threatened to expose damaging information involving Media Matters donors.

David Brock (darrellsees.com)

James Alefantis and

In an acrimonious lawsuit settled at the end of last year, Brock accused William Grey of making repeated threats to expose him to the "scorn or ridicule of his employees, donors and the press in demanding money and property." Brock claimed in legal papers that he sold a Rehoboth Beach, Del., home he once shared with Grey in order to meet Grey's demands, which he called "blackmail" in the lawsuit. -Fox News

Ironically, Brock used to be a GOP political operative - having spearheaded 1993 sexual harassment allegations against President Bill Clinton by former Arkansas employee, Paula Jones - who was paid $850,000 by the Clintons to drop her lawsuit.

So just to be clear, Clinton operative David Brock and Hillary Clinton pal Susie Tompkins Buell steered $700,000 into a scheme to compensate Trump accusers right before the 2016 election. Which is yet another answer to the recurring question of just who tried to influence the election.

Obama-era Illegal Surveillance Timeline Against Whistle-Blowers

by Sharyl Attkisson

•

You can find many timelines that follow allegations of Russia tampering in the U.S. election and alleged involvement of Trump officials. But I couldn't find any comprehensive timelines cross-referencing Obama-era surveillance of whistleblowers, journalists and other U.S. citizens with Russia surveillance allegations. So I built one. Please note: temporal proximity of events doesn't necessarily imply a connection.

January 21, 2009:

President Obama takes office; pledges unprecedented transparency.

April 2009:

Someone leaks the unmasked name of Congresswoman Jane Harman to the press. According to news reports, the Bush administration NSA incidentally recorded and saved Harman's phone conversations with pro-Israel lobbyists who were under investigation for espionage. The story is first broken by Congressional Quarterly's Jeff Stein.

December 17, 2009:

The Obama administration prosecutes FBI contractor Shamai Leibowitz for leaking documents to the media in April 2009. Leibowitz says he leaked because he felt FBI practices were an abuse of power and a violation of the law which he reported to his superiors at the FBI who did nothing about them. (According to the ACLU: Amazingly, the sentencing judge said, I don't know what was divulged other than some documents, and how it compromised things, I have no idea. )

May 2011:

White House recruits democratic operative Eric Schultz to spin on Fast and Furious and to counter the House Oversight Committee's investigative work on the case. (Schultz previously served as intern to Sen. Charles Schumer and Hillary Clinton.)

Former Obama operative Eric Schultz

Spring 2011:

Obama intel officials capture and record incidental private communications between Congressman Dennis Kucinich, a Democrat, and a Libyan official. The recordings are later leaked to the press.

2011:

Fox News reporter Mike Levine is subpoenaed by the Department of Justice regarding a story he reported about a federal grand jury's indictments of terrorism suspects. The subpoena is later dropped.

June 2, 2011:

Republican Mitt Romney announces he'll challenge President Obama in campaign 2012.

June 28, 2011:

Obama U.S. Attorney for Arizona Dennis Burke secretly leaks sensitive government information to Fox News, allegedly to retaliate against ATF whistleblower John Dodson in the Fast and Furious case. (Burke is former chief of staff to former Arizona Governor Janet Napolitano.)

August 2011:

U.S. Attorney Burke resigns while under investigation for the improper leak of sensitive information about Dodson. The Inspector General later confirms the leak and Burke apologizes.

September 2011:

White House operative Schultz invites Attkisson and several other national journalists to off the record backgrounder about Fast and Furious documents subpoenaed by Congress. Later, on the phone, Shultz screams and cusses at Attkisson as she asks questions raised by the Fast and Furious documents.

October 3, 2011:

Obama administration secretly changes longstanding policy. The change creates a â... loopholeâ... that Sen. Ron Wyden would later say allows the NSA to conduct â... backdoor searchesâ... of â... incidental collectionâ... of U.S. citizensâ... domestic communications.

The same day, CBS News airs Attkissonâ... s report on newly-uncovered memos that contradict Attorney General Eric Holdersâ... denials about Fast and Furious.

October 4, 2011:

In an internal email, Attorney General Eric Holderâs top press aide Tracy Schmalzer emails White House operative Schultz calling Attkisson â out of control. Schultz replies, â Her piece was really bad for the AG.â

November 2011:

CIA Director Gen. David Petraeus, whoâs married, allegedly begins an affair with his biographer, Paula Broadwell. (The FBI would later say it â stumbledâ upon evidence of the affair incidentally during an unspecified, much broader investigation.)

December 2011:

Amid much criticism, Justice Department finally, officially retracts the false letter it had submitted to Congress in February. The letter had stated that the Fast and Furious allegations of gunwalking were untrue.

February 13, 2012:

At approximately 10:30pm, remote intruders secretly download new spy software proprietary to a federal agency onto Attkissonâs CBS work computer. (The software was secretly attached to a legitimate Hotmail email and downloaded in the background after a pop-up ad appeared).

April-May 2012:

The Department of Justice (DOJ) and FBI publicly announce vast expansion of cyber related efforts to address alleged â national security-related cyber issues.â

In violation of longstanding practice, DOJ secretly and without notice seizes personal and phone records of journalists from Associated Press from this two-month period in a leak investigation.

June 2012:

Attorney General Holder secretly initiates investigations into AP and the New York Times regarding government leaks.

June 28, 2012:

The House of Representatives holds Attorney General Holder in contempt of Congress for refusing to turn over subpoenaed documents related to Fast and Furious.

July 2012:

The Department of Justice designates U.S. Attorneysâ offices to act as â force multipliersâ in further stepped-up cyber efforts in the name of national security.

Intruders remotely â refreshâ ongoing surveillance of Attkissonâs CBS News Toshiba laptop.

Summer 2012:

The FBI incidentally stumbles across emails revealing CIA Director Petraeusâ affair with his biographer Broadwell. FBI Director Robert Mueller is notified of the affair on a date the government will not disclose.

The FBI later says it interviewed Petraeus and Broadwell, and concluded national security hasn't been breached. The FBI keeps all of this information secret.

In late summer, on a date the government won't reveal, the FBI notifies Attorney General Holder of the Petraeus affair.

September 11, 2012:

Four Americans, including U.S. Ambassador Christopher Stevens are murdered in Benghazi, Libya during attacks by Islamic extremist terrorists. Despite internal communications that acknowledge the terrorist nature of the attacks within minutes, the Obama administration falsely reports to the public that the attacks were instead a protest gone awry after an anti-Islamic YouTube video.

Some Obama officials become frustrated with CIA Director Petraeus and his post-Benghazi attack behavior, as he opposes efforts to edit out mentions of terrorism from the public Benghazi talking points. Petraeus deputy Mike Morell is given authority over the edits, and aligns with Hillary Clinton's State Department against Petraeus's desires.

October 2012:

CBS begins airing Attkisson's Benghazi stories which rely on whistleblowers and numerous government-linked confidential sources. These sources report that the Executive Branch is clamping down on leaks to reporters re: Benghazi.

DOJ continues its stepped-up National Security Division cyber efforts, holding specialized training at DOJ headquarters for the National Security Cyber Specialists (NSCS) network and the Criminal Division's Computer Crime and Intellectual Property Section (CCIPS).

President Obama issues top secret presidential directive on Oct. 16 ordering intelligence officials to draw up a list of overseas targets for cyberattacks. According to The Guardian, the directive also "contemplates the possible use of cyber actions inside the US."

As CIA Director Petraeus's interagency relationships become increasingly strained over his stance on Benghazi, unnamed FBI agents reach out to Republicans in Congress to tell about Petraeus's affair. They eventually land at the office of Republican majority leader Eric Cantor. With the presidential elections about a week away, Cantor stays mum on the Petraeus rumors and instead contacts the FBI about them.

The FBI interviews Petraeus and Broadwell a second time.

November 2, 2012:

The FBI questions President Obama's vice chair of the Joint Chiefs of Staff James Cartwright in a leak investigation regarding material in a book written by a New York Times reporter. Cartwright denies being the source (but later admits he was, and is convicted in the case).

November 6, 2012:

President Obama defeats Mitt Romney in Campaign 2012.

CIA Director Petraeus is scheduled to testify to Congress next week about the Benghazi attacks.

Officials claim this day is the first time Director of National Intelligence Clapper is notified about the Petraeus affair by an unspecified official at the Justice Department. Clapper calls Petraeus and urges him to resign.

November 7-9, 2012:

Attorney General Holder hosts a national training conference at DOJ headquarters for the expanded efforts of DOJ's National Security Cyber Specialists (NSCS).

The Obama administration says somebody unspecified notifies someone at the White House about the Petraeus affair on Nov. 7. The President is reportedly looped in for the first time on Nov. 8 and accepts Petraeus's resignation on Nov. 9. Petraeus's planned appearance before Congress to testify on Benghazi is canceled.

November 13, 2012:

The F.B.I. initiates a body of cyber security case investigations that would later relate to Attkisson's computer intrusions.

December 2012:

Two intelligence-connected sources separately suggest to Attkisson that she's likely under government surveillance due to her reporting. One source tells her the government has pushed the envelope like never before and that public would be shocked to learn the extent that the government is conducting surveillance of private citizens.

As Attkisson arranges a forensic exam of her computer, evidence later shows the intruders then attempted to cover their tracks and to erase evidence of their intrusion. However, the erasures leave additional forensic evidence.

December 27, 2012:

Sens. Ron Wyden (D-Ore.) and Mark Udall (D-Colo.), who have classified knowledge as members of the Senate Intelligence Committee, publicly warn of the back-door search loophole or searches of incidental collection of innocent Americans.

As it is written, there is nothing to prohibit the intelligence community from searching through a pile of communications, which may have been incidentally or accidentally been collected without a warrant, to deliberately search for the phone calls or e-mails of specific Americans. Sen. Mark Udall, D-Colorado.

Sen. Mark Udall

2013:

Obama administration brings court martial against Army intelligence analyst Bradley Manning, who has changed his name to Chelsea, for a 2010 leak of classified information to WikiLeaks that revealed American military and diplomatic activities across the world. Manning is sentenced to 35 years in prison, the longest punishment ever given in a U.S. leak case.

January 2013:

Two forensics examinations confirm unauthorized remote intrusions and monitoring of Attkisson's work and personal computers. The information is not publicly reported at this time.

January 23, 2013:

The Obama administration prosecutes CIA whistleblower John Kiriakou for leaks to a reporter as he blew the whistle on the CIA's secret torture program. He's the first CIA officer convicted of providing classified information to a reporter.

March 12, 2013:

Director of National Intelligence James Clapper testifies to Congress, falsely stating that intelligence officials are not collecting mass data on tens of millions of Americans.

April 12, 2013:

The government Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Agency (FISA) court secretly approves the latest FBI request to continue obtaining daily telephone records of millions of U.S. Verizon customers. The judge orders Verizon to turn over the information to the National Security Agency (NSA). This directly contradicts Clapper's March 12 testimony to Congress.

April 2013:

A secret government memo later exposed by NSA whistleblower Edward Snowden discusses how the U.S. is collecting information â directly from the servers of âMicrosoft, Yahoo, Google, Facebook, PalTalk, AOL, Skype, YouTube, Apple.â

May 10, 2013:

After longstanding denials, the IRS admits to and apologizes for targeting Republican Tea Party groups for mischief, which included discussing developing pretenses for prosecution, leading up to the 2012 election.

May 13, 2013:

The Associated Press (AP) publicly announces that it has learned of the Justice Departmentâs secret subpoena of phone records for 20 AP reporters, in a leak investigation. Attorney General Holder personally approved the subpoenas, which were issued to Verizon rather than AP. AP calls it a âmassive and unprecedented intrusionâ into news-gathering operations.

May 17, 2013:

Fox News learns that the Justice Department secretly labeled reporter James Rosen a possible âcriminal co-conspiratorâ and âflight-riskâ in obtaining warrants to monitor Rosenâs State Department movements, phone records and emails in a leak investigation starting in 2011.

June 2013:

The FBI secretly opens a case on Attkissonâs computer intrusions under the auspices of a national security issue. The FBI contacts CBS without Attkissonâs knowledge, but fails to contact or interview Attkisson. (The FBI later withholds Attkissonâs FBI file in its entirety without explanation, and other documents, despite multiple Freedom of Information Act requests.)

News of the FBI case involving Attkissonâs computer intrusions is circulated internally to the Justice Departmentâs national cyber security group, and grouped with a set of cases opened in November 2012.

June 2013:

Former National Security Agency NSA contractor Snowden begins releasing documents showing extensive efforts by the government to surveil and collect information on U.S. citizens.

June 6, 2013:

At a hearing, Sen. Mark Kirk, R-Illinois, asks Attorney General Eric Holder if the NSA spies on members of Congress. Holder answers that the NSA has no intent to spy on Congress, but that the issue is better addressed in private.

July 2, 2013:

Director of National Intelligence Clapper apologizes to Congress for his false testimony in March regarding widespread collection of data on Americans.

August 6, 2013:

Armed Coast Guard agents under the Department of Homeland Security raid the home of reporter Audrey Hudson at 4:30am with a search warrant for her husband's firearms. As they searched the house, they read Hudson her Miranda rights and confiscated documents that contained confidential notes, draft articles, and other newsgathering materials belonging to Hudson including the identities of whistleblowers at the Department of Homeland Security. (Hudson sues and later receives a settlement from the government.)

August 7, 2013:

CBS News publicly announces confirmation of Attkisson's computer intrusions.

Attkisson's computer was accessed by an unauthorized, external, unknown party on multiple occasions late in 2012. This party also used sophisticated methods to remove all possible indications of unauthorized activity, and alter system times to cause further confusion. CBS News

September 19, 2013

The Obama Justice Department charges FBI agent and contractor Donald Sachtleben with leaking to an AP reporter details of disrupted terrorist bomb plot. He is sentenced to 43 months in prison.

January 23, 2014:

Sen. Bernie Sanders asks the NSA if it spies on members of Congress. The NSA does not provide a direct answer and states that Congress is afforded the same privacy protections as all U.S. persons.

March 2014:

Congress accuses the CIA of improperly accessing Senate Intelligence committee computers. CIA Director Brennan denies it.

Director of National Intelligence Clapper bans intelligence community officials from unauthorized contact with reporters.

The government pays a settlement to reporter Audrey Hudson after the 2013 Coast Guard raid of her home during which her work notes were improperly seized.

December 2014:

Attorney General Holder seeks to subpoena a 60 Minutes producer in connection with a terrorism trial, but pulls back the request after public criticism.

Spring 2015:

The Obama administration finishes secretive negotiations of an Iran nuclear deal that will return billions of dollars in frozen funds to the world's largest state sponsor of terrorism in return for assurances from that country. It is later reported that Obama intel officials have been incidentally capturing communications of U.S. members of Congress and organizations in the U.S. while secretly recording Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's discussions about the Iran deal, which he opposes.

As of now, the New York Times reports that since 2009, six current or former government employees and two government contractors have been indicted or prosecuted under the Espionage Act for leaking information to the public. There were only three such prosecutions under all previous U.S. presidents combined since 1917.

May 2015:

Former CIA employee Jeffrey Alexander Sterling is convicted on espionage charges for leaks to New York Times reporter James Risen. He is sentenced to 3 1/2 years in prison.

December 2015:

The Cybersecurity Information Sharing Act (CISA) passes. It requires private Internet companies to transmit cyber-threat indicators to the Department of Homeland Security and granting the companies immunity from prosecution for sharing customers' personal data in those cases.

The Wall Street Journal reports that the Obama administration incidentally collected private communications by members of Congress while it spied on Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu.

The NSA sweeping up private conversations with U.S. lawmakers and American-Jewish groups raised fears [of] an Oh-s moment, one senior U.S. official said that the executive branch would be accused of spying on Congress. Wall Street Journal, December 29, 2015.

July 2016:

Donald Trump wins the Republican nomination for president.

According to later news reports, after Trump's nomination, internal White House logs show Obama National Security Adviser Susan Rice begins to show increased interest in National Security Agency (NSA) intelligence material that included unmasked Americans' identities.

2016:

Itâ... s not yet known publicly, but CNN later reports that the Obama Justice Department wiretapped Trump campaign manager Paul Manafort before the 2016 election over Russia ties, closed the investigation, then began surveillance anew sometime in the fall and continued it through the early part of 2017.

Fall 2016:

Trump opponents â... shopâ... to reporters a political opposition research â... dossierâ... alleging Trump is guilty of various inappropriate acts regarding Russia. The information is unverified (and some of it is false) and the press doesnâ... t publish it, but a copy is provided to the FBI.

September 26, 2016:

Itâ... s not publicly known at the time, but the government makes a proposal to the secretive Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court (FISC) court to allow the National Counter Terrorism Center to access â... unmaskedâ... intel on Americans acquired by the FBI and NSA. (The Court later approves as â... appropriateâ... .)

October 7, 2016:

Former vice chair of the Joint Chiefs of Staff James Cartwright pleads guilty in a leak investigation to lying to the FBI about his discussions with reporters regarding Iranâ... s nuclear program.

October 26, 2016:

At closed-door hearing before the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, the Obama administration disclosed that it had been violating surveillance safeguards, according to Circa. It disclosed that more than 5 percent of its searches of the NSAâ... s database violated safeguards promised in 2011.

November 8, 2016:

Donald Trump is elected President.

November 2016-January 2017:

News reports claim Riceâ... s interest in the NSA materials accelerates after President Trumpâ... s election through his January inauguration. Surveillance reportedly included Trump transition figures and/or foreign officials discussing a Trump administration.

December 2016:

FBI secretly monitors and records communications between Russian ambassador, Sergey Kislyak and Lt. Gen. Michael Flynn, who later became President Trumpâ... s national security adviser.

Russian Ambassador Sergey Kislyak

After Trump's election, Obama officials take steps to ensure certain intelligence gathered regarding Trump associates is spread across the government. One Obama official would later say it's because they were afraid once Trump officials found out how we knew what we knew, the intelligence would be destroyed. However, Obama critics later theorize Obama officials were working to mount opposition to Trump's presidency.

December 15, 2016:

National Security Adviser Susan Rice later reportedly acknowledged that the Obama administration spied on Trump officials in Trump Tower on this date, but claimed it was incidental to the administration's spying on the foreign leader they were meeting with: the UAE crown prince. Rice also reportedly admitted to unmasking the names of the Trump officials who met with the crown prince, saying it was important to know who they were, although the identities of Americans are supposed to be strictly protected except in extraordinary circumstances. Trump officials who met with the crown prince reportedly included: Steve Bannon, Jared Kushner and Gen. Michael Flynn.

January 10, 2017:

The media reports on the leaked anti-Trump dossier compiled by a political opposition research group containing unverified and at least partly untrue allegations of misconduct involving Trump and Russia.

January 12, 2017:

The Obama administration finalizes new rules allowing the National Security Agency (NSA) to spread certain intelligence to 16 other U.S. intel agencies without the normal privacy protections.

President Obama commutes all but the last four months of Manning's sentence for leaking intelligence information to WikiLeaks.

February 2, 2017:

The news reports that five information technology (IT) computer professionals employed by Democrats in the House of Representatives are under criminal investigation for allegedly accessing House IT systems without lawmakers' knowledge. The suspects include three brothers identified as Abid, Imran and Jamal Awan who managed office information technology for members of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and other lawmakers. The brothers were said to have been employed by three Democrats on the Intelligence Committee and five members of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs which deal with many of the nation's most sensitive issues and documents, including those related to the war on terrorism.

February 9, 2017:

News of the FBI recordings of Lt. Gen. Flynn speaking with Russia's ambassador is leaked to the press. The New York Times and the Washington Post report that Flynn was captured on wiretaps discussing current U.S. sanctions, despite Flynn's earlier denials.

The Washington Post also reports the FBI reviewed Flynn's calls with Russian ambassador and found nothing illicit.

Former Congressman Dennis Kucinich, a Democrat, steps forward to support Trump...’s wiretapping claim, revealing that the Obama administration recorded his (Kucinichâ...’s) communications with a Libyan official in Spring 2011.

March 20, 2017:

At a hearing, lead House Intelligence Committee Democrat Adam Schiff places Trump adviser Carter Page at the center of a theoretical alleged collusion with Russia. (Itâs not yet publicly known that the FBI has been surveilling Page.) Some critics see Schiffâs storyline as an attempt to establish public justification for the Obama administration intel communityâs controversial surveillance of the Trump adviser during the 2016 political campaign.

Rep. Adam Schiff

March 22, 2017:

Chairman of the House Intelligence Committee Devin Nunes publicly announces that he has reviewed evidence of U.S. citizens associated with Trump being â incidentallyâ surveilled by Obama intelligence officials, and that the names and information of the Trump associates were illegally leaked and/or used, mostly in November, December and January. Nunes attends a meeting at the White House to discuss. Heâs criticized for viewing the evidence and speaking of it publicly.

In an interview on PBS, former Obama National Security Adviser Rice says â I know nothing about thisâ! I really donât know to what Chairman Nunes was referring.â

Rep. Devin Nunes

March 24, 2017:

The political firm that compiled the Trump â... dossierâ... that was leaked to the press, Fusion GPS, declines to answer questions or document requests from Sen. Charles Grassley.

March 31, 2017:

Democrat Schiff is invited to the White House to review intel material Republican Nunes saw earlier.

April 3, 2017:

Multiple news reports state that prior to the election, Rice had requested and reviewed â... unmaskedâ... intelligence on Trump associates whose information was â... incidentallyâ... collected by intelligence agencies.

April 4, 2017:

In an interview on MSNBC, Rice seems to reverse herself (having earlier said she knew â... nothingâ... about unmasking of surveilled Trump associates) and admits having asked for names of U.S. citizens previously masked in intelligence reports. Rice says her motivations were not political or to spy. When asked if she leaked names of U.S. citizens, Rice replies, â... I leaked nothing to nobody.â...

April 6, 2017:

House Intelligence Committee Chairman Nunes recuses himself from the Russia part of his committee's investigation.

April 11, 2017:

Someone leaks to the Washington Post, and the Post reports, that the FBI secretly obtained a FISA court order last summer to monitor Trump campaign associate Carter Page. Trump critics say the existence of the order proves there was possible criminal activity by Trump associates. However, Trump supporters say the leak is an attempt to frame damning revelations as they are coming to light: that the Obama administration was, indeed, surveilling the political campaign of at least one opponent.

April 28, 2017:

The NSA announces it will no longer collect certain internet communications that merely mention a foreign intelligence target. This after it secretly disclosed mass violations to the FISA court last October.

The NSA also begins deleting prior collected data. It says it's doing this to avoid further violations.

May 2, 2017:

Members of Senate Intelligence Committee go to CIA headquarters to get briefed on Russia-Trump connections. The following day, CNN asks Senate Intelligence Committee member Dianne Feinstein if there is evidence of collusion between Trump associates and Russia during the campaign. Not at this time, replies Feinstein.

May 3, 2017:

Obama's former National Security Adviser Susan Rice declines Republican Congressional request to testify at a hearing about the unmasking and surveillance.

May 4, 2017:

It's revealed that in the election year of 2016, the Obama administration vastly expanded its searches of NSA database for Americans and the content of their emails and phone calls: From 9500 searches involving 198 Americans in 2013 to 30,355 searches of 5,288 Americans in 2016.

May 5, 2017:

Senator and former Presidential candidate Rand Paul (R-KY) formally asks the White House and intelligence community whether he was surveilled under the Obama administration.

May 14, 2017:

Former Director of National Intelligence James Clapper and ex-Deputy Attorney General Sally Yates, Obama administration officials, admit to reviewing classified documents in which Mr. Trump, his associates or members of Congress had been unmasked. They won't provide further details in public.

May 31, 2017:

Document is disclosed to Justice Department in a lawsuit claiming the NSA engaged in blanket surveillance of the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City, Utah, collecting and storing virtually all electronic communications going into or out of the Salt Lake City area, including the contents of emails and text messagesâ... to â... experiment with and fine tune a new scale of mass surveillance.â... Former CIA and NSA director Michael Hayden has denied such a program existed.

June 1, 2017:

House Intelligence Committee issues 7 subpoenas including for information related to unmaskings requested by ex-Obama officials national security adviser Susan Rice, former CIA Director John Brennan and former U.S. ambassador to the U.N. Samantha Power. Chairman Devin Nunes says the intelligence community has been stonewalling the committeeâ... s March request for a list of all the unmaskings that occurred during a certain time period.

Sept. 13, 2017

Under questioning from Congress, former Obama adviser Susan Rice reportedly admits having requested to see the protected identities of Trump transition officials who were â... incidentallyâ... captured by government surveillance. (For their privacy protection, identities of U.S. citizens captured during surveillance of foreign foreign targets are supposed to be protected or â... maskedâ... from other government officials. Applications by federal officials to â... unmaskâ... the names or see the identities are supposed to be rare and carefully considered.

Sept. 18, 2017:

CNN reports that the Obama Justice Department wiretapped Trump campaign manager Paul Manafort before the 2016 election over Russia ties, closed the investigation, then began surveillance anew sometime in the fall and continued it through the early part of 2017.

October 17, 2017:

After word that Obama U.N. Ambassador Samantha Power had made near daily unmasking requests during the 2016 election year, Power reportedly told Congressional investigators that many of the requests in her name were not made by her.

Great job with the timeline. I had forgotten that Obama targeted you, too. Of course what is unknown is how hard Republicans are going to try to get to the bottom of these operations.

Mark Jordan says

Thank you, Sharyl. You paid a price to dig into Obama's secrets but I believe you will be rewarded some day - hopefully soon.

Sheryl

Thanks for the timeline. It seems that most of the MSM, including Fox have a short term memory problem. Not one has taken the time to step back and connect the dots. Everything comes in snippets here and there, but it's like every revelation is in its own world. Thanks for having the courage to be a REAL investigative journalist, not like these slimy talking heads who only want to listen to themselves speak. God bless and Happy Easter.

Sheryl - You are the only reporter doing this...and thank God you are. I pray for your safety and for continuing courage as you fight to bring out the truth. Please keep it up! We need you because the MSM won't cover anything that doesn't fit their narrative.

The Obama administration may go down as one of the most corrupt of all time, but one would never know if one just read and listened to the liberal mainstream media. It is a dark period for journalism. Thanks very much for being so diligent. Facts matter.

I don't think that there is any doubt that the NObama administration will be the most corrupt and criminal ever.

But, since of the American population supports that administration and the other half of the American population has Congressmen that will never do anything about it...!

Obamaâ... s administration probably wonâ... t be the most corrupt EVER, as all human institutions come to an end, and likely, that will take even greater corruption, but itâ... s certainly the most corrupt SO FAR, and I hope I donâ... t live long enough to see one that is worse.

Kathy Barkulis says

Sheryl, I feel that CBS News could have been more proactive reporting just how deep this scandal was knowing that you were being surveilled by the government for your reporting. The mainstream media has the ability to expose government wrongdoing in a widespread way if only they would do their job. That is the purpose of the press, but they have failed miserably. Apparently the government was afraid of your reporting along with James Rosen for trying to expose the criminality of the Obama administration. Yet nothing seems to happen to Democrats when they break the law. Why is it always the Republicans who recuse themselves? Congress needs to step in and clean up the intelligence agencies, as well as prosecute the criminals. And there are many.

jan perkins says

CBS couldnt do that because the president of cbs news is a brother to ben rhodes, the deputy national security advisor to obama at the time

Excellent compendium of the misdeeds of the Obama administration. And you were in the middle of it and survived. 23.

Ben Fitzgerald says

Sharyl Attkisson is perhaps the last true journalist on the planet, holding to the principles of true journalism.

Most so called â... Journalistsâ... are little more than members of the media.

â... Opinion reporters and those who work for obviously ideological news groups are entitled to publish party propaganda. Itâ... s one matter to provide viewpoint journalism. But itâ... s quite another for us to act as a tool of any interest, publishing narratives or talking points upon suggestion or demand, without disclosing weâ... ve done just that.â... â... -Sharyl Attkisson 24.

Shouldâ... ve ended the time line with what you started it with, Obama promised the most transparent administration ever, but severely failed to deliver on that promise.

Seems to me in about six months of FBI investigations, the Obama and friends of his administration will have a lot of explaining to do, if not indictments that they will have to lawyer up for. Canâ... t wait for the perp walk!

Dear Attackers:

You may work for a sociopath industrialist oligarch. You may actually be one of those sociopath billionaire tech oligarchs. You may only be one of the low-life blogger scum at the bottom of their political pig trough. In any case, you are going down.

You have more money than us but we have more time, dedication, creativity and voting members of the public on our side. We also have the law, ethics and tactical resources on our side.

Because you chose to try to end our lives we are coming after you and we are coming for the rest of your life, the rest of your families life and for 100 years of your legacy in any historical publications.

We play the â... long gameâ... for people like you. Everything that will now happen to you will be done 100% legally and the law enforcement and intelligence community will help us do it to you.

Slowly, over time, you will notice your life falling apart. Your business efforts will fail. Your romances will fail. Your investments will fail. Your health will fail. Things will seem to be falling apart, in slow motion, all around you. You must know that YOU brought everything on yourself that is about to happen.

Every member of the public that hears about your deviant, repulsive activities will help make what is going to take place come to fruition.

Here is what you can look forward to:

We will have justice served up with a big cold scoop of vengeance.

You will eventually be bankrupted but that will be the least of your worries.

Take a look at any stock you own, right now. Your stock market valuations are going to dive. Your brand is going to crash. Your profits will start to vaporize. By the time you notice, it will be too late.

Using these proven tactics and methodologies, a task-force of voters, journalists, investigators and forensic experts have caused over 300 billion dollars in losses to corrupt companies and individuals and bankrupted their criminally evil operations with 100% legal procedures. Any member of the public can do this too, on their own, without breaking a single law and with the gratitude of every citizen.

As a target, letâ... s take a look at the corrupt politicians that work for dirty corporations. Let's deeply examine the Silicon Valley oligarch financiers, their dirty corporate law firms and their media attack squads that have demonstrated a cycle of attack and harm to citizens.

Now we are ripping you, and your kind, a new one.

HERE IS JUST ONE OF THE WAYS GOOGLE AND THE NICK DENTON TABLOIDS (GAWKER, GIZMODO, JALOPNIK, ETC.) PARTNERED TO ATTACK US, AND OTHER MEMBERS OF THE PUBLIC, IN EXCHANGE FOR PAYMENTS FROM WHITE HOUSE STAFF AND SILICON VALLEY OLIGARCHS:

HOW GOOGLE RIGS ELECTIONS AND CHARACTER ASSASSINATION ATTACKS AROUND THE GLOBE

BY ROBERT EPSTEIN

Authorities in the UK have finally figured out that fake news stories and Russian-placed ads are not the real problem. The UK Parliament is about to impose stiff penalties... not on the people who place the ads or write the stories, but on the Big Tech platforms that determine which ads and stories people actually see.

Parliament's plans will almost surely be energized by the latest leak of damning material from inside Google's fortress of secrecy: The Wall Street Journal recently reported on emails exchanged among Google employees in January 2017 in which they strategized about how to alter Google search results and other ephemeral experiences to counter President Donald Trump's newly imposed travel ban. The company claims that none of these plans was ever implemented, but who knows?

While U.S. authorities have merely held hearings, EU authorities have taken dramatic steps in recent years to limit the powers of Big Tech, most recently with a comprehensive law that protects user privacy the General Data Protection Regulation and a whopping $5.1 billion fine against Google for monopolistic practices in the mobile device market. Last year, the European Union also levied a $2.7 billion fine against Google for filtering and ordering search results in a way that favored their own products and services. That filtering and ordering, it turns out, is of crucial importance.

As years of research I've been conducting on online influence has shown, content per se is not the real threat these days; what really matters is (a) which content is selected for users to see, and (b) the way that content is ordered in search results, search suggestions, news feeds, message feeds, comment lists, and so on. That's where the power lies to shift opinions, purchases, and votes, and that power is held by a disturbingly small group of people.

I say these days because the explosive growth of a handful of massive platforms on the internet the largest, by far, being Google and the next largest being Facebook has changed everything. Millions of people and organizations are constantly trying to get their content in front of our eyes, but for more than 2.5 billion people around the world soon to be more than 4 billion the responsibility for what algorithms do should always lie with the people who wrote the algorithms and the companies that deployed them.

In randomized, controlled, peer-reviewed research I've conducted with thousands of people, I've shown repeatedly that when people are undecided, I can shift their opinions on just about any topic just by changing how I filter and order the information I show them. I've also shown that when, in multiple searches, I show people more and more information that favors one candidate, I can shift opinions even farther. Even more disturbing, I can do these things in ways that are completely invisible to people and in ways that don't leave paper trails for authorities to trace.

Worse still, these new forms of influence often rely on ephemeral content... information that is generated on the fly by an algorithm and then disappears forever, which means that it would be difficult, if not impossible, for authorities to reconstruct. If, on Election Day this coming November, Mark Zuckerberg decides to broadcast go-out-and-vote reminders mainly to members of one political party, how would we be able to detect such a manipulation? If we can't detect it, how would we be able to reduce its impact? And how, days or weeks later, would we be able to turn back the clock to see what happened?

Of course, companies like Google and Facebook emphatically reject the idea that their search and newsfeed algorithms are being tweaked in ways that could meddle in elections. Doing so would undermine the public's trust in their companies, spokespeople have said. They insist that their algorithms are complicated, constantly changing, and subject to the "organic" activity of users.

This is, of course, sheer nonsense. Google can adjust its algorithms to favor any candidate it chooses no matter what the activity of users might be, just as easily as I do in my experiments. As legal scholar Frank Pasquale noted in his recent book "The Black Box Society," blaming algorithms just doesn't cut it; the responsibility for what an algorithm does should always lie with the people who wrote the algorithm and the companies that deployed the algorithm. Alan Murray, president of Fortune, recently framed the issue this way: "Rule one in the Age of AI: Humans remain accountable for decisions, even when made by machines."

Given that 95 percent of donations from Silicon Valley generally go to Democrats, it's hard to imagine that the algorithms of companies like Facebook and Google don't favor their favorite candidates. A newly leaked video of a 2016 meeting at Google shows without doubt that high-ranking Google executives share a strong political preference, which could easily be expressed in algorithms. The favoritism might be deliberately programmed or occur simply because of unconscious bias. Either way, votes and opinions shift.

It's also hard to imagine how, in any election in the world, with or without intention on the part of company employees, Google search results would fail to tilt toward one candidate. Google's search algorithm certainly has no equal-time rule built into it; we wouldn't want it to! We want it to tell us what's best, and the algorithm will indeed always favor one dog food over another, one music service over another, and one political candidate over another. When the latter happens, votes and opinions shift.

Here are 10 ways... seven of which I am actively studying and quantifying... that Big Tech companies could use to shift millions of votes this coming November with no one the wiser. Let's hope, of course, that these methods are not being used and will never be used, but let's be realistic too; there's generally no limit to what people will do when money and power are on the line.

1. Search Engine Manipulation Effect (SEME)

Ongoing research I began in January 2013 has shown repeatedly that when one candidate is favored over another in search results, voting preferences among undecided voters shift dramatically... by 20 percent or more overall, and by up to 80 percent in some demographic groups. This is partly because people place inordinate trust in algorithmically generated output, thinking, mistakenly, that algorithms are inherently objective and impartial.

But my research also suggests that we are conditioned to believe in high-ranking search results in much the same way that rats are conditioned to press levers in Skinner boxes. Because most searches are for simple facts ("When was Donald Trump born?"), and because correct answers to simple questions inevitably turn up in the first position, we are taught, day after day, that the higher a search result appears in the list, the more true it must be. When we finally search for information to help us make a tough decision ("Who's better for the economy, Trump or Clinton?â... ), we tend to believe the information on the web pages to which high-ranking search results link.

As The Washington Post reported last year, in 2016, I led a team that developed a system for monitoring the election-related search results Google, Bing, and Yahoo were showing users in the months leading up to the presidential election, and I found pro-Clinton bias in all 10 search positions on the first page of Googleâ... s search results. Google responded, as usual, that it has â... never re-ranked search results on any topic (including elections) to manipulate political sentimentâ... â... but I never claimed it did. I found what I found, namely that Googleâ... s search results favored Hillary Clinton; â... re-rankingâ... â... an obtuse term Google seems to have invented to confuse peopleâ... is irrelevant.

Because (a) many elections are very close, (b) 90 percent of online searches in most countries are conducted on just one search engine (Google), and (c) internet penetration is high in most countries these daysâ... higher in many countries than it is in the United Statesâ... it is possible that the outcomes of upwards of 25 percent of the worldâ... s national elections are now being determined by Googleâ... s search algorithm, even without deliberate manipulation on the part of company employees. Because, as I noted earlier, Googleâ... s search algorithm is not constrained by equal-time rules, it almost certainly ends up favoring one candidate over another in most political races, and that shifts opinions and votes.

2. Search Suggestion Effect (SSE)

When Google first introduced autocomplete search suggestionsâ... those short lists you see when you start to type an item into the Google search barâ... it was supposedly meant to save you some time. Whatever the original rationale, those suggestions soon turned into a powerful means of manipulation that Google appears to use aggressively.
